of which is paid by the county, so it did not appear to Mr. Anderson that they should give $500 more towards this work.

Deputy Reeve Lillico was also opposed to it on the principle that they were paying 100 per cent. of the cost of educating the county pupils, and that it was not fair to the ratepayers of the townships bordering Petrboro to have more costs put on them when they paid $50 to the Peterboro Board of Education to send their children to Peterboro Collegiate.

The motion was lost on a vote being taken.

H. Nesbitt, the goaler, who has been in the services of the county for 58 years, 15 years as turnkey and 43 years as gaoler, and is now 87 years old, wrote asking the council to grant him a retiring allowance.

As Mr. Nesbitt put in no resignation the matter was left over for further consideration.

The council is willing to grant the allowance providing his resignation is turned in. All the members spoke fittingly of the splendid work Mr. Nesbitt had done for the county in his many years of service.

Miss M. Tanner and Mr. Darling were renominated to the Mothers' Allowance Board, subject to their election.

A bylaw was passed allowing the County Treasurer to borrow $30,000 for the new building at the Court House.

The other necessary bylaws were also read and passed to provide finances for this year.

HUDSON-ESSEX PRICES LOWER

First 5 Months of 1926 Breaks All Volume Records.

Hudson and Essex Cars are now at the lowest price levels in the company's history, following reductions which have just been announced. The new schedule brings the Essex Coach to $735, the Hudson Coach to $1,095, the Hudson Brougham to $1,395, and the Hudson 7-passenger Sedan to $1,550; all prices f.o.b. Detroit.

All Records Broken

This reduction came at the end of a five-month period in 1926 in which Hudson-Essex buyers broke all records in their demand for these cars. The January-June period saw 114,500 cars shipped from the plant, or practically 17,000 in excess of the 1925 period—the record-holding season up to date.

At the same time these figures became available, it was stated also that the retail sales for May had reached 33,500 cars. Considering holidays, this was practically at the same high rate as obtained in April. The April and May months saw the delivery of 68,500 cars to Hudson-Essex buyers, which is said to be far in advance of any previous mark.

Unusual Values Recognized

"The reduced prices on Hudson and Essex cars," said R. D. Chapin, chairman of the board of directors, "are in line with the company's policy of offering outstanding values to the motoring public.

"This year to date has brought us an exceptionally active business. We have enjoyed, too, the advantage of large additions to our manufacturing facilities permitting production of quality motor cars on a basis of great economy. Our company has always had faith in the recognition of unusual values by motor purchasers. Never have we been able to offer such low prices before."

"BOOTS AND HER BUDDIES"

MUSINGS AT A MANSE WINDOW

WHAT is God driving at? That question was put to me by one who frequently passes the manse window. He is a very well-known individual and is popularly spoken of as "the man in the street." There is no other passer-by wh o interests me more, and few that interest me as much: and there is no one with whom I would rather hold conversation. In talking with him I have discovered that he holds some very strange ideas, and holds them very strongly. Perhaps, at some later date, I may have more to say about these strange ideas which he has aired in my presence, but for the present I want to give you some of the results of an honest endeavor to answer this rather unusually phrased question, "What is God driving at?"

IS IT IRREVERENT?

I must admit that when that question was first addressed to me it seemed irreverent, and I felt inclined to say so. But looking into the eyes of 'the man in the street' I knew he was sincere, and not in the least irreverent. He was simply speaking in the language of the street. And perhaps it was because Jesus knew that language and spoke it that 'the common people heard Him gladly.' If preachers to-day cultivated a closer acquaintance with 'the man in the street,' and tried to understand and speak the language of the street, it is just possible that there would not be so many empty pews at church time.

LIFE AN EXISTENCE.

In trying to find an answer to this question I looked around and discovered that for many life was nothing more than an existence. There was not much thought of God or of any future that lies on the other side of death. They are just living for the present, and thinking mostly of themselves. They are alive intellectually; alive socially; alive physically; but they are dead on the side which ought to relate them to God. The tragedy of life for them is that it is lived on too low a level. In some respects they are not any different from the animal creation. It is largely a case of 'eat, drink and be merry; and let tomorrow take care of itself.'

LIFE AN EXPERIENCE.

There are others, and for them life has left the realm of existence and entered the realm of experience. They have been made partakers of the Divine nature. To them, God is real. He is ever near. They know that He is interested in them, even to the smallest details of their lives. God's Word is their delight. It is sweeter to their taste than the honey-comb; and more precious in their eyes than fine gold. In the study of it they come to see two facts, the seeing of which becomes one of the greatest factors in the living of a worth-while life.

The first fact is that God has a plan for every life no matter how common-place or obscure that life may be.

And the second fact is that the carrying out of this plan to a successful consummation is what God is driving at.

The proof of this, I believe, is to be found in this remarkable statement: "For whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son."

THE PURPOSE OF GOD.

The purpose of God, or to put it in the language of 'the man in the street,' 'What God is driving at' is, conformity to the image of Jesus Christ in the case of every human being. And that highly descriptive phrase has a wealth of meaning which even the most sanctified imagination will never be able to fathom.

It means that God wants all of us to be like His Son in Character. All that He was God wants us to be! If I want to reproduce an image in the nature of a photograph I must expose a specially prepared surface to the light. Then, in the dark-room, the image taken on in the light but still invisible, will arise in the nature of a negative from which as many copies as I may want can be reproduced. So, in the light of the Word of God, as it operates upon my heart which has been cleansed from sin by the blood of His cross, and specially prepared by the presence of the Holy Spirit, often through dark experiences, the image of Christ is developed in a character which is, in a very real sense, a copy of His own.

It also means that we are to be like Him in our Conduct. And there is no greater lack in the Christian Church today than the lack of Christ-like conduct.

I knew a minister who suffered so much at the hands and the tongues of some unregenerate church officials, that he told me he would have thrown everything overboard if it had not been for a certain definite spiritual experience which he had had, and which nothing could shake.

An Irish mistress said that she knew that Norah was converted because she swept under the mats now! And if this is not what God is driving at, who will answer the question of 'the man in the street, and what will the answer be?

THE DESIRE OF EVERY TRUE SOUL.

That the character of Christ might be reproduced, and the conduct of Christ manifested in human experience is the desire of every true soul. With many it becomes a passion. Whenever a man has been touched by the Divine Spirit, and the current of his life turned into the channel which runs via Calvary, one great dominating desire takes possession of him. He wants to be in line with the will of God; he desires nothing so much as to have the purpose of God fully realized in his changed life. It was so in the case of the Apostle Paul. It became the master passion with Robert Murray McCheyne, that great Presbyterian saint and churchman. And if Rutherford's letters reveal one thing more than another, it is that he did not desire anything so much as to have a life in all ways like that of his Saviour.

"Jesus let me seek for nought,
But that Thou should'st live in me;
Let this only fill my thought,
How I may grow liker Thee."

THE OBJECT OF ALL GOD'S DEALINGS WITH US.

Conformity to the image of His Son is the object of all God's dealings with us. The cross has this as its great objective. It is not simply an escape from the penal consequences of sin, although it is that in spite of all that this superficial age may say to the contrary, but it is that here and now God might make us, who trust His Son as Saviour, like that Son both in character and in conduct.

Nothing happens to any of us by chance. There is no such word in the vocabulary of the man who has discovered what God is driving at. "For whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son." "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose."

Behind all life's experiences there is a heart that feels, a head that plans, and a hand that guides. And it makes a wonderful difference when we recognize this to be so. We come to see that there is no such thing as an accident.

"Back of the loaf is the snowy flour
And back of the flour the mill,
And back of the mill is the wheat and the shower,
And the sun, and the Father's will."

WHAT THE DUMB SAID.

There is a story told of a gentleman who visited an institution for deaf and dumb children. The superintendent told him that a kindly Providence seemed to compensate in life. That if the use of certain faculties were denied, the value of others seemed to be increased. He said "Question these children and you will discover that they are very clever and very well informed." The visitor walked up to a blackboard and wrote this question "Can you tell me why it is that God has given me both speech and hearing when you haven't got either?"

At a sign from the superintendent than any child was at liberty to answer the question if they felt able, a lad went up to the blackboard and wrote this answer "Even so Father, for so it seemeth good in Thy sight."

I don't know how true the story may be, but I do know that there is a whole lot of sound philosophy in it. And if we could only learn to look on life with all its problems and apparent contradctions in that way we should find that it did not hurt so much.

THE ASSURED OUTCOME OF ALL LIFE'S EXPERIENCES.

However difficult or impossible it may seem at present, the assured outcome of all life's experiences is that we shall be conformed to the image of His Son. The process of reproducing the image of Christ in each of us may be slow but it is sure. "It doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when He shall appear, we shall be like Him for we shall see Him as He is."

They sometimes speak of the good old days, and no doubt they were good days: but for many things they were not nearly so good as the days in which we live. I don't want to go back to candles for lighting purposes now that I can have electricity. And to ride in a stagecoach must have been romantic, but for comfort I would rather have a pullman car. There is no life so full of promise as the life that has learned what God is driving at, and has fallen into line with His will in the matter.

THE BEST YET TO COME.

A little lad took up his work to the drawing-mistress and with a coy look on his face said: "Please mam that ain't my best!" "Then, why did you not bring your best?" said the drawing-mistress. "'Cause my best ain't painted yet."

The Psalmist uttered a deep truth when he said,—"I shall be satisfied when I wake in Thy likeness." God is seeking to satisfy the desire of every living thing: and there is no way by which man can ever be satisfied apart from conformity to the image of Jesus Christ.

"Like some bright dream that comes unsought
When slumbers o'er me roll,
Thine image ever fills my thought,
And charms my ravished soul."

Churches and Churchmen

Baptists and the Faith.

WHILE it is true that the fundamentalists were overwhelmingly defeated in test votes of the recent convention of Northern Baptists in Washington, they are determined to keep up the fight: and Modernism, Fosdick and Rockefeller continue to be fighting words despite the Convention's adoption of a compromise resolution on the immersion issue by a ratio of nearly two to one.

Dr. Harry E. Fosdick, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist Church, of which John D. Rockefeller, Jr, is a member was assailed at the Bible Union meeting as an "apostate" and those attending voted to "consecrate our means to the holy task of expelling mammonized modernism from our beloved denomination."

The Park Avenue Church and its pastor, said the resolution, "not only stand as the champion of modernism, but also as the representatives of the uncounted millions of Rockefeller wealth," which was charged with building up an "educational monopoly imperiling historic and spiritual Christianity."

Summer Assembly.

CANADA, the United States, England and Scotland will be represented in the program of the summer assembly to be held at Collegeville, Pa., which is twenty-four miles from Philadelphia—August 2-8. Among the speakers will be Dr. Clarence Mackinnon, principal of the Presbyterian College of Halifax, Nova Scotia: Dr. James I. Vance, Nashville, Tenn., Rev. William J. Shergold, minister of Saint Aubyn's Congregational Church in Upper Norwood, London: and Rev. W. H. Harrowes of Saint Enoch's United Free Church, Glasgow.

Church or Circus?

REV. TERTIUS VAN DYKE, son of Rev. Henry van Dyke, preacher, author and poet, has resigned the pastorate of the Park Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York, and accepted a call to the First Congregational Church, Washington, Conn. He gave as his reason for the change his unwillingness to cater to the sensational style of preaching which New Yorkers seem to demand. In a statement to the Associated Press he is quoted as saying that the people "want religion with a jazz tempo. They have driven some preachers to shooting off fireworks and wearing red vests. A great deal of the preaching in New York is idiotically sensational and the clergy is trying too hard to get attention above the hubbub."

"If I were to announce some Sunday morning I was going to do a flying trapese act the church would be crowded. Circus stuff does not make congregations religious and I do not think I am the right man to hold a job in the city."

Good Advice.

THE Leaflet of the Old South Church, Worcester, Mass., has the following which deserves a very wide circulation "If you arrive at the church a few minutes before the service begins, spend those minutes in meditation and prayer, thus preparing your soul for the servce to follow. To stand at the rear of the auditorium and consume those minutes in social visitation does not equip you spiritually to enter the service, does not help create the proper atmosphere and you may by your whispering and laughing seriously interfere with the meditation of some devout soul who seeks this means of grace. Let us be thoughtful and considerate in God's house."

The Rising Generation.

IF THE rising generation does not rise high enough it is not for want of having every encouragement. The Ontario Boys' Work Board of the Religious Educational Council has sent out a very attractive poster and folder conveying some interesting information regarding a Leadership Training Camp which will be held July 12 to 19, inclusive.

The camp is situated on the north shore of the St. Lawrence River, five miles west of Brockville, at the head of the Brock group of the famous Thousand Islands, and looks out to the southwest over the main steamboat channel and a ten-mile stretch of water. In a cool, grassy, wooded glen by the water's edge are found the cook-house, dining marquee and Council-Ring. In front stretches the beach, while behind rises a cliff, at the top of which are the tents and spacious athletic field. The location is ideal for camping purposes: and being only a short distance from the Provincial Highway, it is easy of access by motor, as well as by boat.

Eulogizing the Doctor.

REV. ERNEST TITTLE of First Methodist Church, Evanston, Ill., recently preached a sermon on "Healing" which contained the following charming reference to the general practitioner, and old family doctor. He said "Some of us are old enough to remember the 'general practitioner'—the doctor of what, I suppose, one must now speak of as the old school. He drove up to the house in a buggy. (For the meaning of 'buggy' consult any standard dictionary.) And we began to feel a wee bit better the moment some member of the family, anxiously peering through the window, announced that he was coming. He entered the room, bringing fresh air and reassurance. He examined our pulse, and asked us to put out our tongue. Then he opened his case, selected certain bottles, poured out mixtures and pills and scribbled directions which no one could read. And when, having smiled at us, he told us with perfect confidence that we would be better in the morning—well, there was nothing to do but get better by morning, which we usually did. There are those who tell us that the general practitioner did not know very much. But the fact remains that we thought he did, and because we had faith in him, some of us are alive at this hour."

Logic makes only one demand, that of conscience. But life makes a thousand. The body wants health; the imagination cries out for beauty; and the heart for love. Pride asks for consideration; the soul yearns for peace; the conscience for holiness; our whole being is athirst for happiness and for perfection. —Amiel.

Culture is not an accident of birth, although our surroundings advance or retard it; it is always a matter of individual education.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LOVING DEVOTION TO OUR KINDRED

Text: Genesis 44: 18-34.

Then Judah came near unto him and said, Oh my lord, let thy servant, I pray thee, speak a word in my lord's ears, and let not thine anger burn against thy servant; for thou art even as Pharaoh.

My lord asked his servants saying, Have ye a father, or a brother?

And we said unto my lord. We have a father, an old man, and a child of his old age, a little one; and his brother is dead, and he alone is left of his mother, and his father loveth him.

And thou saidst unto thy servants, Bring him down unto me, that I may set mine eyes upon him.

And we said unto my lord, The lad cannot leave his father; for if he should leave his father, his father would die.

And thou saidst unto thy servants, Except your youngest brother come down with you, ye shall see my face no more.

And it came to pass, when we came up unto thy servant my father, we told him the words of my lord.

And our father said, Go again and buy us a little food.

And we said, We cannot go down: if our youngest brother be with us, then will we go down: for we may not see the man's face, except our youngest brother be with us.

And thy servant my father said unto us, Ye know that my wife bare me two sons:

And the one went out from me, and I said, Surely he is torn in pieces; and I saw him not since.

And if ye take this also from me, and mischief befall him, ye shall bring down my gray hairs with sorrow to the grave.

Now therefore, when I come to thy servant my father, and the lad be not with us; seeing that his life is bound up in the lad's life:

It shall come to pass, when he seeth that the lad is not with us, that he will die and thy servants shall bring down the gray hairs of thy servant our father with sorrow to the grave.

For thy servant became surety for the lad unto my father saying If I bring him not unto thee, then I shall bear the blame to my father forever.

Now therefore, I pray thee, let thy servant abide instead of the lad a bondman to my lord; and let the lad go up with his brethren.

For how shall I go up to my father, and the lad be not with me? lest peradventure I see the evil that shall come on my father.

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for June 20. Loving Devotion to our Kindred. Genesis 44: 18-34.

BY WM. E. GILROY, D.D.
Editor of The Congregationalist.

This lesson brings us into the very heart of the human interest in the story of Joseph, though it hardly represents the climax of its teaching.

Judah is the spokesman, and his words are interesting in their revelation of the good that resides in men and that ultimately conquers, despite their performance of or participation in evil deeds. Judah had advised that Joseph be sold into slavery. Naturally, he covers up his part in that transaction, and he speaks of Joseph as dead. Possibly he may have assumed that the case.

Perhaps he was too ready to assume that a worse thing than death had not befallen Joseph. It is almost characteristic of us all to seek to minimize the evil consequences of our own misdeeds.

Judah, however, no matter what his former weakness and guilt, reveals here a more worthy regard for his kin. Perhaps he had come to understand the cruelty of the treatment that he and his brothers had given to Joseph, and the intensity of the pain that their deeds had given their father.

Sting of Remorse.

If remorse had in this way entered his soul, the arrow could not have been thrust any more deeply than by the demand of Joseph that Benjamin should be left as a hostage in Egypt.

It is a pathetic plea that Judah makes that he may be spared this painful condition, though one has a feeling that if he had displayed the same intensity and outspokenness in opposing the evil deeds of his brothers in selling Joseph into slavery, that tragedy in Jacob's life might originally have been averted.

Judah's sincerity is evidenced in the earnestness of his plea that he may remain as a hostage instead of Joseph. It is an evidence of the way in which right finds triumph over wrong, and it reminds us that though we condemn guilt and sin, we should never trust the guilty beyond all hope and place of restoration; nor are we justified in judging him wholly by isolated acts no matter how evil the fault. They may not be the highest or ultimate and true expression of the character of the man who did them.

The great secret of Jesus in dealing with men was in discovering the better character that lay beyond all seemingly evil purposes and actions. Sometimes he revealed to men the hidden depths of goodness in their own souls and through this revelation brought them to the higher way of life.

Beauty of Forgiveness.

Against Judah's evidence of repentance, we must place the beauty of Joseph's forgiveness. He was putting his brothers to a test only that he might make that forgiveness more vital, not with a purpose of rebuking them, but that this forgiveness might help them toward a better way of life.

The name "Judah" appears in the Bible chiefly as a tribal name. In fact it is the widely recognized opinion of Biblical scholars that many narratives and references that ostensibly refer to individuals and to personal incidents in reality symbolize tribal episodes and history.

In this story of Joseph, however, it would seem that we are dealing with a literary whole—a narrative in which the personal factors and incidents are essential elements, and upon which the teachings we derive are to be based.

Did Joseph make his exercise of forgiveness too formal, elaborate and mysterious a thing? Why should he not have at once made himself known to his brethren, and immediately accorded them his forgiveness?

Much of the real value and effect of that forgiveness would have been sacrificed if he had done so. He desired to make his forgiveness a means of real reconciliation, and the basis of new relationships.

He brought at first into the hearts of his brethren a sense of mystery, of awe and fear, and in the case of Judah in this lesson, a feeling of sacrifice and surrender, only that his revelation of himself and of his forgiveness might in its suddenness and completeness sweep away all barriers and embarrassments.

It is a great thing when forgiveness is not only exercised, but when it has its perfect work in reconstructing broken bonds and relationships.

Loveless Living

A LIFE without love in it is like a heap of ashes upon a deserted hearth with the fire dead, the laughter stilled, and the light extinguished. It is like a winter landscape with the sun hidden, the flowers frozen, and the wind whispering through the withered leaves. God knows we need all the unselfish love that can come to us. For love is seldom unselfish. There is usually the motive and the price. Do you remember William Morris, and how his life was lived, his fortune spent, his hands busied—in the service of others? He was the father of the settlement movement, of co-operative homes for working people, and of the arts and crafts revival, in our day. He was a "soldier of the common good." After he was gone—his life began to grow in radiance and power, like a beacon set high upon a dangerous shore. In the twilight of his days he wrote what I like to think was his creed—and mine "I'm going your way, so let us go hand in hand. You help me and I'll help you. We shall not be here very long, for soon death, the kind old nurse, will come back and rock us all to sleep. Let us help one another while we may."—Frank P. Tebbetts.

MR. KENNEDY TO RESIGN.

The decision of D. M. Kennedy, the Progressive who was declared elected in Peace River, to resign from his seat as soon as it is possible for him to do so will be applauded by all fair-minded Canadians.

While Mr. Kennedy was in no way responsible for the manipulation of ballots and other crimes for which "Baldy" Robb is now in the penitentiary, and these offences were committed not on his behalf but in the interest of Mr. Rae, the Liberal candidate, the fact remains that had it not been for the switching of ballots Mr. Collins, the Conservative standard-bearer, would have been elected.

In short, Mr. Kennedy has been in the position of a receiver of stolen goods, and no honourable man would consent to remain in that position a day longer than was necessary.

It was not possible for him to give up his seat during the present session, but he has announced his intention of so doing as soon as he may legally resign, and his decision will be regarded as the decent, honest thing to do under the circumstances.

COMMUNITY SINGING.

The Male Voice Choir is to be congratulated not only upon the excellent music it is providing in its park concerts but also upon its efforts to foster community singing.

We in Peterboro have been slow in becoming educated to the enjoyment and benefit of community singing.

In other centres it has long been popular, and it will become so here once our citizens catch the spirit of the thing and relax from their customary reserve long enough to participate.

Service clubs have always recognized the value of music in promoting a spirit of good-fellowship and socialibility among its members, and the same results can be secured on a more general scale by more frequent opportunities for community singing, such as was provided by the Male Voice Choir last night.

Let everybody participate—even those who are dubious about their tone qualities or doubtful of their ability to carry an air.

No one expects a park crowd to attain results that will challenge the Mendelssohn Choir.

The important thing about community singing is the first part of the name; the emphasis is upon "community" rather than upon "singing."

If it is to be a success you can't let George do it; you must do it yourself.

THE CUSTOMS REPORT.

The general verdict in regard to the report presented by the Special Committee appointed by the House of Commons to probe the smuggling question will be that the committee has done its work well.

Its findings have evidently been carefully and impartially considered with a view to the benefit of the whole country, and they are of great importance.

The committee recommends a sweeping list of dismissals, calling for the scalps of many of the heads of the customs service, and in view of the evidence there is little to be said in defence of these officials.

The former Minister of Customs, Hon. Jacques Bureau, comes in for strong censure.

The committee, which consisted of four Liberals, four Conservatives and a Progressive, found that he had "failed to appreciate the responsibilities of his office."

The report does not make any reference to the present Minister, Hon. Geo. Boivin, and the responsibility of considering his activities in the Asiz case will be left with the House.

A thorough re-organization of the preventive service is strongly urged, it is recommended that there should be no ministerial interference with regard to cases of smuggling involving more than $200, and many other recommendations of similar weight are made.

The committee has evidently had a proper appreciation of the responsible nature of the task assigned it by the House, and deserves congratulations for the manner in which it has discharged its duties.

THE TRANSPORTATION PROBLEM.

It cannot be said that the local transportation problem has been to any degree clarified by the results of the City Council's consideration of the question.

The city fathers will not recommend to the people the purchase of the street railway system.

It was not expected that it would, inasmuch as it has been evident that public opinion is to a large measure hostile to any such proposal, and the Aldermen were well aware that a recommendation to purchase the system would be far from popular.

Nor will the Council take any action in regard to other bus lines.

Thus the situation remains exactly as it was.

No proposal to purchase the street railway will be submitted to the people, and in its operation of the system by a combined street car and bus service the Ontario Hydro Commission finds itself in competition with privately-owned buses, from which it can look for no relief from the municipal Council.

As to what the next development will be there is no intimation.

Apparently the City Council has no policy to offer except to leave the whole issue up to the Hydro-Electric Commission.

Yet the transportation question is a problem that affects a lot of citizens.

Ald. Greene declares that half of the people of Peterboro ride in motor cars for eight months in the year.

Accepting his estimate as accurate, the fact remains that for eight months in the year some 11,000 people are without means of transportation, save by street car and motor bus, and during the other four months this number is very largely increased.

Is there not a responsibility resting upon the City Council in regard to this question of transportation, a responsibility that cannot be dismissed lightly and that calls for some more definite policy than has yet been evolved by the Council?

WISE SPENDING.

The plea for economy is often heard; people are urged to be more careful in their purchases and thrifty in their habits. There is only one way to build up a reserve of money as of anything else, and that is to keep instead of squander. All this is very true. There is another side to the question, however, which cannot be lost sight of; it is the side in which the merchants and manufacturers are most concerned. If people refrain from spending, sales will decrease and there will be a surplus of commodities. Under conditions of modern production, according to some economists, it would be fatal to apply the old doctrines of thrift and conservation. The prosperity of industry depends upon the maintenance of a strong public demand; when that demand decreases one of two things happens—either there is a slackening of production, with its unfortunate effects on employment, or an accumulation of goods which glut the market. It is not, therefore, merely by the exercise of parsimony that economic salvation is to be sought. The law of supply and demand is inexorable. When supplies are plentiful, the demand has to be kept up, too, if a proper balance is to be maintained.

There is one point upon which all are agreed, and that is the desirability of eliminating waste. Canadians are not especially noted for careful housekeeping, and there are, undoubtedly, many ways in which much that is now discarded could be saved and utilized. Large industries have long recognized the importance of conservation, a special survey of waste in industry having been undertaken recently in the United States, under the direction of Mr. Herbert Hoover. The result of this investigation was surprising. It revealed that, in practically every branch of industry, an enormous amount of preventable waste was permitted; one authority was moved to assert that "waste elimination is practically at the head of the list of the ten most important things in management today." The cost of carrying supplies, it was found, averaged twenty-five per cent. of their purchase value annually. That is to say, for every dollar's worth of goods that go into warehouse an extra 25c is added before the commodities are taken out and used. Of this sum, ten cents are for obsolescence, six for interest, five for depreciation, two and a half for handling and distribution, and the remaining cent and a half for transportation, taxes, insurance and storage facilities. As a consequence of the investigation, the firms concerned undertook to change their systems in order to prevent waste and reduce their carrying charges. What large industries find it necessary to do should serve as an example to the average wage-earner. Economy is not the same thing as parsimony in these modern times, though the words originally meant pretty much the same. Economy is an excellent thing, but parsimony, in the sense of stinginess, is not a very commendable quality. There is undoubtedly much injudicious spending, but there is also a withholding on the part of some people who are under no necessity to withhold. Wise economy does not necessarily mean saving, but to put money to its proper use and to avoid waste and extravagance.—Hamilton Spectator.

THE CHURCH.

Next week the Western World will see one of the greatest ecclesiastical spectacles of modern times. It will be the 28th Eucharistic Congress, solemn thanksgiving of the Catholic Church, at Chicago, where 13 cardinals, 500 bishops, thousands of priests and nuns and probably a million laymen will participate. The Pope's own representative, for the first time, is an official visitor to America.

In brilliance, in pageantry and in sheer numbers this tremendous assembly will rival anything in our day and will rank high with anything of its kind in history. It is a demonstration of strength well calculated to impress even the most skeptical. For the power of the church, growing as it does in the face of what is perhaps its most enlightened criticism, proves it to be more than a mere form of man's worship.

The progress of the church, both Catholic and Protestant, may safely be placed among the first phenomena of this age. Never before has it faced such a test, and never before, perhaps, has it forged through so magnificently as today. In olden times the church met the opposition of mass and class ignorance in the higher things, of the cohorts of the dumb gods of stone. At present it matches forces with hostile intellects, with those who would wield science as a weapon against it, with a variety of diversions greater than ever before. Yet it grows. The Catholic church today, with a membership of more than 300,000,000 in the world, sees its claim to perpetuity as unshaken as always. The fact that the congress in Chicago will represent 34 nations in every part of the world is testimony of its catholicity.

Coming closer to home, our own United Church of Canada has been given world-wide recognition as an outstanding achievement in the present or any other age. It has been a magnificent gesture toward Christian unity which now is unifying its forces abroad, building a great organization destined to survive. The union was not accomplished without difference of opinion. It left a great body of that opinion behind. Yet so strong has been the church movement of recent years that at the recent assembly in Montreal it was estimated that within five to ten years the Presbyterian Church would return to its pre-union strength. This in addition to the great advance the United Church is now making.

These facts are significant. They prove that the church is not in conflict with industrialism and that science is not in conflict with the church. They prove that religion is a greater force than any which is pitted against it. They prove that the church is a positive quality and they uphold the immortal words of Christ to Peter: "On this rock I will build My Church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

Man is inherently a churchman. Whether he deny it or accept it or merely tolerate it, he has the principles of the church in his very heart. That is so because there are higher things which he does not understand and the church provides the medium for his communion with those greater forces. Until man is vouchsafed this higher understanding, he will have need of the church, call it by whatever name he will.

The church throughout its history has proved itself a constant force, its spiritual energy conforming to the universal law of cosmic energy, which is never lost. If held back in one place, it has forged ahead elsewhere. If temporarily forced to yield ground in one age, it has come back with renewed vigor in another age, either preceding or following. It has never been defeated. It has divided, reunited in part, divided again. But the great body of the church has never faltered. Today there are countries which officially disown it, but their people have adopted forms of worship for themselves. The church is part of their nature, just as it is part of ours. Its universality testifies to the mighty resources of man's first estate.—Border Cities Star.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

Peterboro—Toronto—Montreal
Winnipeg

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, June 19. — Cattle prices this week attained to new high levels. Choice heavy export steers sold up to $9.50, and choice butcher cattle quoting freely from $7.50 to $8.85. Trade was a little slower in Friday's closing market, but with nothing special offering. Exporters this week took about 700 cattle, mostly finished steers. No bulls taken. Export orders for next week, through billing C.P.R. St. John, and C.N.R. Montreal.

The general average advance this week on all classes of butcher cattle would be about 50c over last week's prices. How long these prices will hold will depend largely on the number of stall fed cattle still available. Grass cows are beginning to come in, and all classes of grassers will from this out be coming along. Western cattle are beginning to arrive. Stall fed cattle wil continue in good demand as long as they last.

Springers and milkers — Choice springers sold from $85 to $100, good $70 to $80; choice milkers $75 to $90, good $55 to $70; medium to common springers and milkers hard to dispose of.

Stockers and feeders—Some 900 lbs. steers selling at 7c. One car of western heifers sold at $5.50, many of which were in calf. Another load of steers sold at 6c, only very medium quality.

Sheep and lambs—Choice spring lambs sold from 17c to 19c; good 14c to 16c; medium to common 10c to 12c; choice wool lambs 12c to 13c; heavy wool lambs and bucks 9c to 10c; choice yearling sheep 8c to 9c; choice butcher sheep 6c to 7c; medium 5c to 6c; heavy sheep and bucks 4c to 4 1-4c.

Calves—Choice veal calves sold at 11c to 12c; a few fancy up to 12 1-2c, good 9c to 10c; medium 7c to 8c; common 5c to 6c; grassers 4c to 5c; There was an easier feeling in the calf trade on Wednesday.

Hogs—Sold on Monday and Tuesday, at $14 to $15 f.o.b; $15.10 fed; $15.50 off cars. Premium on selects $2.96 per head. Prices easier over week-end; packers succeeding in getting 25c off in Thursday's market. Lower prices bid for next week's loadings.

CHICAGO GRAINS

CHICAGO, June 19 (Canadian Press).—Heavy rains over parts of Oklahoma, Kansas and Texas, likely to delay harvesting, gave wheat a firm undertone on the Board of Trade yesterday. At the finish the bread grain showed a net gain of 3-4 to 1 1-4 over Thursday's finish. Corn, weak in the absence of buying power, suffered a loss of 1-4 to 1 1-8; oats were unchanged to 1-4 down and provisions irregular, with lard 5c lower to 7 1-2c higher, ribs 5 to 20c down, and bellies 2 1-2 off to 5c advance.

Crop news on European wheat again was unfavorable. Export demand from abroad showed a marked improvement with sales in all positions including Manitobas, Durums and hard winters exceeding 1,000,000 bushels.

Corn registered a new low on the crop when July touched 69 3-4. There was considerable pressure on the market during the greater part of the session, with the best buying coming from shorts and holders of bids. Weather was more favorable over the belt, but higher temperatures are still needed in some sections.

Oats were easier with corn. There was some hedging by cash interests and some buying by commission houses. Concerns with eastern connections were said to be selling December and buying September at a 2 cent difference.

Provisions attained higher levels due to light offerings and a good demand from commission houses, apparently for investment account.

EGG MARKETS

OTTAWA, June 19 (Canadian Press).—A car of Eastern eggs has been sold in Montreal costing extras 35 1-2, firsts 33, seconds 27, delivered. A car of Ontario eggs sold in Toronto costing extras 34, firsts 32 in export cases f.o.b. A car of fresh firsts were shipped to Winnipeg from Vancouver on Wednesday.

Toronto.—The undertone of the market is weaker but prices are unchanged. Country shippers are paying producers extras 30 to 31, firsts 29, seconds 22. Dealers are paying extras 34 to 35, firsts 31 to 32, seconds 25, cases returned.

Montreal.—An easier tone continues in evidence in the market. Dealers paying delivered extras 32 to 35, firsts 30 to 31, seconds 26 to 27. Prices to retailers, extras 37 to 38, firsts 34 to 36, seconds 30 to 32.

Winnipeg.—Dealers paying delivered cases returned, extras 28, firsts 26, seconds 21. Prices to retailers extras 32, firsts 30, seconds 25. Retail extras 35, firsts 31, seconds 28 to 30.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, June 19 (Canadian Press).—The foreign trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday was only fair owing to the fact that prices bid in most cases were out of line with local exporters' views. There was some demand from exporters for oats in the local market and sales of a few loads of No. 2 Canadian western were made at 11 cents per bushel over the Winnipeg July option, c.i.f. Montreal.

The car lot trade in Canadian western oats was quiet, but prices were unchanged.

A moderate amount of business was again transacted with the Continent and the United Kingdom in spring wheat grades of flour. The domestic trade was inactive but firm. Extreme dullness marked the winter wheat situation, but the feeling was steady.

The movement of millfeed for local and country account continued fair and prices ruled steady. There was no change in the market for standard grades of rolled oats.

The demand for potatoes was somewhat limited and the volume of busines was small. Prices were firm.

Prices for all grades of eggs were well maintained under a quiet demand. The receipts were 2,410 cases.

The butter market displayed further weakness and prices were reduced 3-4 to 1 cent per pound, which was attributed to the increased supplies coming forward. The receipts were 8,539 packages.

The feature of the cheese trade was the softness that developed and prices declined 1-2 cent per pound. The receipts were 12,659 boxes.

The trade in beans was slow and prices were unchanged. Car lots of choice white hand-picked were quoted at $2.15 per bushel, and smaller quantities at $2.25 to $2.35 per bushel.

HASTINGS PAVING PROGRAM WAS DEFEATED BY VOTE OF 19 TO 18 IN COUNTIES COUNCIL AT COBOURG

Deputy Reeve of Cobourg Opposed Hastings Request For Support of Counties.

TO REPAIR BRIDGE.

Equalized Assessment Unchanged—Tax Rate .. Struck By Council. ..

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

COBOURG, June 19.—The Hastings programme for paving a mile of its streets this year, was defeated by the council of Northumberland and Durham Counties Friday on a division of 19 to 18.

By just one vote, which in reflection served to emphasize the personnel of the opposition, including Deputy Reeve W. J. Maher of Cobourg, the ambitious plans of the town of Hastings were shatttered for his summer when the approving clause in the report of the Roads and Bridges Committee was struck out.

Reeve Hess was silent under the decision that nullified his efforts of the session, which seemed to have been almost continuously engaged in Hastings affairs.

Rural opposition was largely responsible for the result, township representatives seeing in the background similar aspirations in Millbrook and Campbellford, with consequent petitions for financial assistance.

Hastings proposed to build 6700 linear feet of pavement, a twenty-foot central strip on its main streets which connect the county road from Northumberland on the south with the county roads from Peterboro, by way of both Norwood and Keene. The actual cost of the pavement was estimated at from $33,000 to $36,000, and the total expenditure on improving this inter-county link was figured at $45,000. Under a recent amendment to the Ontario Highways Act, the Counties Council was asked for a grant of $25,000 for the work, half of that sum being repaid by the Government, and Hastings assuming the remaining $20,000.

Through its deputy reeve, Cobourg began sniping at the Hastings project during the reading of the committees report and only a few minutes after Warden McCubbins mild but pointed reproof to those members who had harried the council with monotonous harangue and cross-fire Thursday afternoon. The chairman of the committee, Reeve Harry Bedal of Brighton township, who helped in the thwarting of Hastings, was interrupted by Mr. Maher at the end of the first clause for a re-reading and an interpretatio of a sentence, which Col. Fred Boggs, counties' solicitor, clarified by substituting "of" for "and." Then Mr. Maher sought information as to whether the Hastings streets were a link in the county road system. Finally Mr. Bedal took the pains to read the Hastings clause once again, before the

AMENDED BILL BEFORE SENATE

LEAVE TO APPEAL.

OTTAWA, June 19 (Canadian Press).—Amendments made by the House of Commons to the Soldier Settlement Act were considered in the Senate at yesterday's sitting. It was explained by Senator Beique that the committee which dealt with the bill had examined the chairman of the Soldier Settlement Board and ascertained that it would require a large organization to administer the Act as amended. The bill as it reached the Senate, provided for the creation of boards to revalue soldier settlers' lands. The number of cases to be dealt with was about 12,000, and the expenditure involved was large.

It was explained that provision was made for appeal by the soldier settler if he was dissatisfied with the valuation on his lands. Also, it was provided that this appeal would be rapid and inexpensive. The number of appeals, it was expected, would be very few.

The bill as amended met with the support of General Griesbach, Hon. H. S. Beland, and Senator Gillis. Senator J. D. Taylor pointed out what he considered several anomalies in the bill and these will be considered on third reading.

The Senate adjourned until Monday evening.

PEACE PILGRIMS REACH LONDON AFTER 5 WEEKS

Monster Rally To Be Held in Hyde Park To-day.

"LAW NOT WAR.

One Tiny Village in Kent Rejected the Resolution.

LONDON, June 19 (Canadian Press). — The vanguard of eight great columns of women pilgrims who have been marching on London for five weeks entered the historic city yesterday in preparation for their huge "peace rally" at Hyde Park to-day.

This first contingent of the pilgrims, which marched from Brighton, Hastings and Worthing, walked to the Crystal Palace headed by a young blue-robed woman, bearing a banner with the device, "Law, not War." Others of the marchers carried staves, with cross pieces bearing the names of thirty-five towns and villages which had passed a resolution calling upon the Government to settle all national disputes by conciliation and arbitration."

The name of but one village in Kent—Lamberhurst—was carried in reverse as a sign that the population there had rejected the resolution. "Even had an archangel come to them for peace it would not have made any difference," the leader of the contingent said.

Everywhere else, however, the pilgrims were greeted cordially and were presented with flowers. Two foot-sore women on the last stages of the journey were given a ride by a 'bus driver, who refused to take their fares because he said he was a friend of peace.

COUNTIES PAY FOR INDIGENTS

Charge Half the Cost To Local Municipalities Under New Amendment.

COBOURG SESSIONS.

(By Staff Correspondence).

COBOURG, June 19. — Counties are held directly responsible for the care of indigent patients and may in turn collect half of such expenditure from the minor or local municipalities from which the patients come, according to a legislative amendment that became effective April 8 last, and which was applied for the first time in the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham this week.

Warden McCubbin referred to a current experience of Percy Township in taking care of a man who had been treated at the Cobourg hospital until May 28, when he was removed to the Toronto General Hospital. The Cobourg hospital and doctor's bills totalled $400, and because this patient had lived for some time in Seymour Township, the Warden considered that Seymour should bear part of the cost.

Colonel Boggs, solicitor for the United Counties, explained the late amendment, and it was recognized that the county would be required to pay half the expense charged to Percy Township from April 8.

Avoid Rate Increase.

Rather than increase the tax rate to meet Provincial highway payments out of the capital account, and also to avoid issuing debentures, the Council has made a funding arrangement with the Ontario Highways Department to cover the present indebtedness of $97,000. The Council will pay $47,000 this year, and the Department will carry over the balance of $50,000 at 5 per cent. The agreement which the Deputy Minister of Highways will recommend provides for a year accommodation of $50,000 at 5 per cent. for five years. It was reported by the Finance Committee of the Council, whose chairman, Reeve Wood of Millbrook, made the negotiations by telephone this week with the Deputy Minister.

Before the five-year period expires, it is expected that the programme of Provincial highway construction in the counties will be completed, and that only maintenance charges will have to be provided for. Highway construction may be completed by next year.

Members of the Council expressed the opinion that the Finance Committee's plan was highly satisfactory, and would serve not only its immediate purpose but would also preclude the expedient of passing on the financial burden of permanent road construction to "posterity."

House Adopts Estimate of $1,400,000 For Waters of Two Provinces.

OTTAWA, June 19. (Canadian Press). — With a couple of items left over the House Thursday adopted votes totalling $1,400,000 for harbors and rivers in Ontario and Quebec.

When Mr. Meighen asked why it was that the votes for harbors and rivers in Ontario and Quebec only totalled about half what they did last year, Hon. Dr. King, Minister of Public Works, replied that the Government was trying to economize.

From Liberal and Conservative benches the case of the Ontario Great Lakes harbor municipalities was pleaded before the Government during consideration of the Ontario public works estimates in the Commons Thursday, and a request made for sufficient sums in the supplementary estimates to dredge the now shallow harbors to somewhere near their former depths.

Dr. J. W. Edwards (Conservative, Frontenac) first called the Government's attention to what he termed serious difficulties prevailing all along the lakes of carrying on the shipping trade.

James Malcolm (Liberal, North Bruce) endorsed the plea, stating that many Georgian Bay ports which formerly had ten to twelve feet of water in their harbors, were now reduced to six and seven feet.

BUCKHORN NEWS

An interesting ball game was played at Buckhorn between J. Eastwood's team and Lowrie Bros. of Ohio, U.S.A., Lowrie brothers winning by 198 to 197 in a very fast game.

Umpire Shem of Alliance, Ohio, was too large to stand up so he sat on a fence.

Base Umpire Holyworth allowed the players to go all the way round to the home plate because his glasses were not working right.

The feature of the game was the extraordinary eyesight of F. H. Lowrie and his guide, Wil Long, who on the afternoon preceding the game discovered a new fish not known to Buckhorn before, and reported it to Jack Eastwood, who decided it was a ground hog. Fish which they claim came out of the water to see if the ice was out of the water.

This game will be protested as F. H. Lowrie was wearing spiked shoes.

Return game next Saturday to be played on the Buckhorn Athletic grounds.

Guests at the Buckhorn House: Mr. W. H. Crawford, Akron, Ohio; G. C. Golshall, Akron, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Canby, Dayton, Ohio; Dr. A. J. Keeley, Akron; G. H. Hobach and son, Akron; G. W. KING'S DEPUTY BIDS FAREWELL

ADDRESS READ.

MONTREAL, Que., June 19 (Canadian Press)—To the strains of "Auld Lang Syne" their excellencies the Governor-General and the Lady Byng of Vimy bade forewell to the people of Montreal yesterday afternoon, leaving behind them deep regret because of the leaving.

It rained at 4.25, coincident with the arrival of the guard of honor, but as the train pulled away from the platform the rain ceased, a glimmer of sunshine came to show the figures of Lord and Lady Byng as they stood waving their hands in adieu to those somewhat mournful figures on the platform who saw them go.

There was no demonstration of a loud nature on the arrival of the Governor-General and Lady Byng, but the whole departure was impressive through its quiet air of regret.

The arrangements worked out with military precision. Bonaventure station was taken possession of by a guard of city policemen; they lined the station proper, wearing their white helmets and with batons in gala form, while a detachment of the Canadian National police force lined the platform to the special train which carried the party back to Ottawa. A few minutes before the visitors arrived, the guard of honor swung down Windsor street with fixed bayonets, and, the band of the Grenadier Guards in action, took up post at the main doors of the station.

Lord and Lady Byng were first greeted by the delegation of the I.O. D.E., who after presenting the basket of flowers, presented the following address to her Excellency, passed unanimously at a meeting held on June 14th, and reading as follows:

"That we wish to express to your excellency great regret on the occasion of your pending departure from Canada, and appreciation of the interest taken by you in the work of the order."

His Excellency next made the tour of those present, saying farewell with a kindly word to each, and good naturedly posing for photographs.

"I think you have taken too many already," he told one photographer who had had half a dozen tries, but he consented to the ordeal once more, and her ladyship showed the same agreeable spirit.

The band of the Grenadier Guards marched to the platform immediately in rear of the train, and broke into the strains of "For Auld Lang Syne." Their Excellencies boarded the train, and it steamed slowly out.

RICE LAKE FISHING OPENING OF SEASON

Fine Weather and Some Good Catches Favored Visitors.

The opening of fishing season on Wednesday brought scores of fishermen to Rice Lake. The weather was ideal for the occasion and some good catches were landed.

A number from Millbrook, Peterboro, and the surrounding district spent a day's fishing, as well as an enjoyable boating and outing.

The Young People's League of the United Church here motored to Stewart Hall on Tuesday evening and presented their play entitled, "A Poor Married Man," in the hall there, under the auspices of the Stewart Hall Young People's League. The Stewart Hall friends were opening their hall after having it redecorated and painted, as well as a new stage erected, and upon this occasion put on a splendid supper before the play.

The hall was packed and one hundred and four dollars was taken at the door.

On account of one of the actors, Geddas Harper, being ill with blood poisoning in his hand, the part of Billy Blake, one of the leading characters had to be substituted by W. McClain, who played the part very creditably, considering the short notice he had.

The play was a success, winning loud applause from an attentive audience.

At the conclusion of the play the visitors were served a sumptuous lunch by the Stewart Hall friends.

Witness said that funds realized from the sale of hundreds of thousand dollars worth of music, had been paid direct to the Company's bankers in New York.

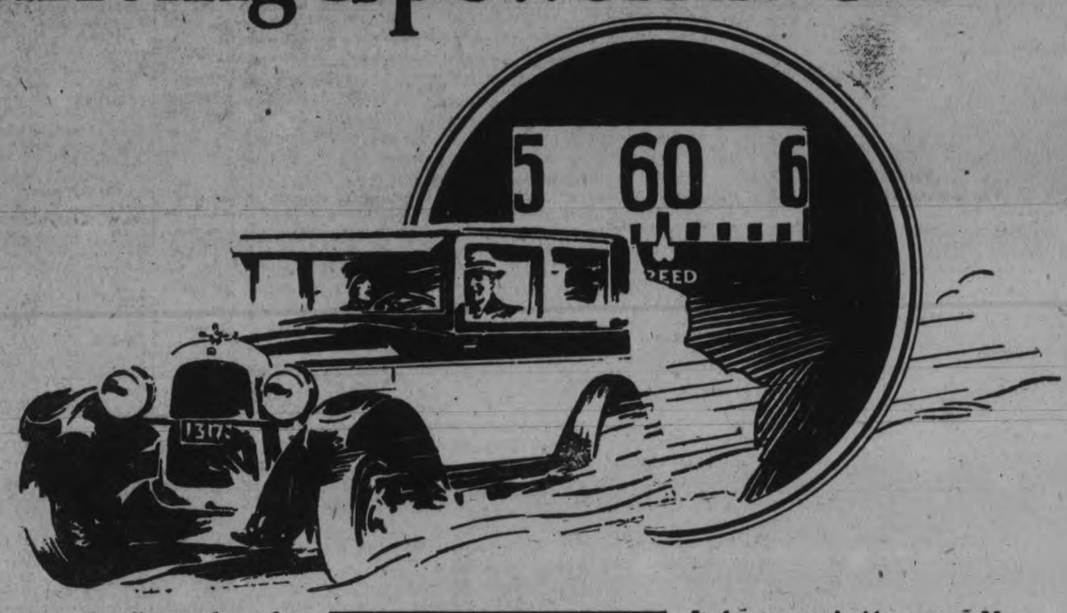
To the Man who takes pride in driving a powerful Car



IS 55 to 60 miles an hour fast enough? Is 5 to 40 miles an hour in 21 seconds the kind of pick-up you want? Would you like a car that can take the most extraordinary grade on high from a standing start? This Overland Six is offered on the basis that it will out-run, out-pull and out-accelerate any other car of its size, price or class.

Buy a Modern Car

The radical difference between the Overland Six and other cars built today is the new-type of engineering.

The Overland Six is not a five year old chassis, with a modern body. Instead the whole car was engineered as a unit less than eighteen months ago.

It is a modern car . . . designed for road speeds of from 50 to 60 miles an hour.

That's why you can run the new-type Overland Six at high speed hour after hour without wear and tear on the motor. And why ordinary, bulky, old-fashioned cars quickly go to ruin when pressed above 45.

Today's modern car has a full, pressure-feed oiling system.

Reductions of $45 to $100

Excise tax reductions together with list price adjustments ranging from $45 to $100 on the Canadian-built Overland Six, are effective immediately.

See your nearest Willys-Overland Dealer for details.

That's why the Overland Six will run mile after mile at high speed, without the slightest friction. Each part operates smoothly in a bath of oil.

The Overland Six will turn in a forty foot circle. Rear springs are underslung and 52 inches long. 141 square inches of braking surface provide an ample safety margin.

It has more inside space. More cubic feet than the average car of this price, due to its extra-long wheel base. The result is ample comfort for 5 full size passengers. The seats are wider, the windows larger, the doors much broader. All features you'll certainly appreciate when you inspect rival cars of this price.

Two years were spent in designing the Overland Six. And twelve months were spent in proving it. We doubt if any car ever received more careful study from an engineering standpoint. Now over 100,000 owners give their endorsement to that fact.

The Overland Six embodies the style, the smartness and the major advantages of 18 of the finest motor cars in Europe and America, plus many features developed by our own engineering experts.

There is no Six built today that offers such quality at such a low price . . . no car made in which finer quality of material is used or better workmanship employed. The luxurious velour upholstery is but one indication of the exceptional quality which prevails throughout.

"Proper Food and Exercise," by ARTHUR A. McGOVERN
Former physical director, Cornell Medical College.

Exercise an aid for too many nerves

DAILY CALISTHENICS PRESERVE HEALTH

NEURASTHENIA: nervous exhaustion, a functional neurosis marked by intense nervous irritability and weakness. The chief symptoms are insomnia, headaches, or feelings or constrictions about the head, pain in the back, exhaustion after slight mental or physical exercise, excessive sensibility to noises, irregular heart action, vertigo, dyspepsia, disorders of vision and loss of memory.

Other symptoms I have observed with neurotic types are fear, loss of aggressiveness, vivid imaginations and lack of confidence in the persons endeavoring to help them.

People so suffering are the most pathetic of any types of sufferers of physical or organic disorders that I have had to deal with. While a great many can be helped, it is a derangement that may be classified as chronic. Personally, I have never known of an extremely advanced case that was 100 per cent cured. Medicos agree that the best form of treatment for neurasthenia, whether the patient be young or old, is properly supervised exercise.

Of course, physical exercise is essential to every man and woman in order to keep in perfect health, and the scientific application of exercise in this specific instance is that the patient will tone up his organic and circulatory system, adding increased resistance and forcing the eliminating organs to function properly.

A person who has been a long sufferer will accomplish little in a physical way at the beginning. In fact, he may only indulge in the mildest form of resistance exercises. All bending exercises should be eliminated at the start as they produce vertigo, affecting the equilibrium, which is the cause of those suffering from neurasthenia swaying and sometimes falling.

While neurasthenia is directly a condition of the nervous system, there is generally some underlying functional reason. Neurotics are in a great majority troubled with insomnia due to their irritating nerves. This in itself aggravates the condition as it does not allow the nerves to rest or the sufferer to relax physically. Exercise for this type is most beneficial as it induces sleep, restoring and building up nervous energy.

One of the most difficult accomplishments for a nervous person is to relax physically. Exercise for this type is most beneficial as it induces sleep, which restores and builds up nervous energy.

Another ally with neurotics is intestinal sluggishness. They are nearly all sufferers from some form of constipation or dyspepsia which forces the body to continually absorb toxic poisons.

Properly supervised physical exercises will tone up the digestive tract and overcome faulty elimination and will give renewed energy and add vigor, thereby producing a psychological effect by giving a general feeling of well-being.

I have an illustrated chart of 12 exercises which I will gladly furnish free upon request to any of my readers who will send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to McGovern's Gymnasium, 55 West 66th Street, New York City. These exercises are too lengthy to put into this article.

Diet for Gaining Weight

Upon arising, ten minutes' exercise, after which take a warm bath followed by a cold spray or shower. Rub the body briskly with a Turkish towel until a good reaction is obtained, after which drink two glasses of water.

BREAKFAST: Any kind of stewed fruit; some warm cereal. Place two tablespoons of butter in the cereal, mix with milk and cream and a little sugar Cocoa, chocolate or coffee substitute. Toast heavily buttered. An hour after breakfast take a glass of orange juice, and an hour before lunch take a glass of water.

LUNCHEON: A cream or thickened soup. Vegetables, dark bread and a glass of milk. Between lunch and dinner take two glasses of water and one glass of milk.

DINNER: Meat, chicken or fish, one green vegetable, a baked potato with plenty of butter, fruit or pudding. Between dinner and bedtime two glasses of water

When properly hoisted, the broad white band of the St. Andrew's flag is uppermost in the quarters next the staff. When flown upside down, it is a signal indicating distress.

When a group of flags is shown, the Union Jack should be in the centre and at the highest point of the groups.

When the flag is flown from a staff projecting horizontally from wall or window sill, etc., be sure to observe the instructions given with details of the construction of the Union Jack. Ensure that the broad white stripe of the cross of St. Andrew is next to the masthead.

When crossed with another flag for wall display, the Union Jack should be on the Flag's right, with the staff in front of that of the other flag.

When necessary to fly a flag at half-mast, the flag should first be raised to the masthead, then slowly dropped to a position just the width of the flag from the masthead. The significance of this half-masting is that the flag is lowered just sufficiently to allow the flag of the grim reaper to take position above it.

When this is understood, it will readily be seen why the top of a flag-staff shoud not be ornamented with a slender stem and gilded ball, etc It makes the flag when flown there from, appear to be half-masted, because of the space between the flag and the mast-head or ball.

When the flag is used in connection with the unveiling of a monument, it should be run to the top of the staff and left flying, rather than dropped to the ground to disclose the statue, etc.

When a flag is displayed in a church, it should be on a staff, and placed at the congregation's right, as they face the pulpit. If on the platform, it should be at the minister's right, as he faces the congregation.

When flags of two or more nations are displayed, they should be from separate staffs of the same height. The flags should be of the same size. International usage forbids the placing of one flag higher than another in peace time.

Do not place any other flag above our flag. It is not a compliment to any nation to place the flag of that nation above ours. It merely indicates lack of good taste.

When flags are displayed against a wall, etc., make sure that the flags are in such position, that if a mast or staff were used, the staff would be at the flag's right, or the masthead at the flag's right.

Observe the same care when placing a flag above a speaker's platform. Never use as a table cover. For merely decorative or utility purposes, use suitable bunting.

When several flags are carried abreast, the Union Jack should be in front of the centre of the line.

When the flag has become so soiled as to be rendered unfit for further use, it should never be used for any further purpose. It should be destroyed as a whole, preferably by burning, in private, and in such manner as is in keeping with the respect to which, as an emblem of our country, it is entitled.

Caution.

Do not allow disrespect to be shown to our flag.

Do not dip the flag to any person or thing. This honor may be shown by regimental colors, Yacht Club flag, etc.

When the Union Flag and other flags are used together, as in street decoration, the Union Jack should fly to the North on streets East and West, and to the East, on streets running North and South.

It should be displayed only between sunrise and sunset.

Never allow our flag to touch the ground or trail in the water. Remember this when lowering.

Do not use the flag for a table cover or put objects upon it. Use bunting for decorative purposes.

Fasten the flag in such a manner that it will not easily be torn.

Do not drape the flag over the hood, sides or back of a motor car or launch. If the flag is desired, fly it from a small mast, firmly fastened to the chassis or to the radiator cap.

Do not use the flag as part of a costume or as decoration on an athletic uniform. The beaver and the maple leaf lend themselves to this purpose. Do not print the flag on paper napkins or boxes, or embroider it on cushions or handkerchiefs.

Do not put lettering on a flag, tack advertising to a flagpole or use the flag for any advertising purpose.

There will be a supper meeting of Scoutmasters, Assistant Scoutmasters and Cubmasters, at Hooper's Tea rooms, 414 George St., on Wednesday, June 23rd, at 6.15 p.m. As this is a very important meeting and the last for the summer season, all officers are urged to attend. Items of interest to troops will be discussed.

3RD PETERBORO TROOP.

On Thursday evening the 3rd Vimy Troop held its weekly meeting, the meeting place being as usual, the 'Three Sisters." Mr. Latimer was again in charge, Mr. Taylor still being away on his holidays. The game of flag raiding was played. In the first game the Chickadees and Wolves competed against the Hounds and Hawkes. The former team won. Sides were chosen for the next game, and the game was very nearly tied, but the side holding the western half of the field won. The next game was called off before a conclusion could be reached, thus finishing the meeting as most boys could not stay for a council fire.

ST. ANDREW'S TROOP

There was a good meeting of St. practice in map drawing and reading, path-finding by the sun, stars and by other methods, signalling and flag-flying.

The boys are at Chemong today, helping the Kiwanis Club entertain 200 children at a picnic. This is a Troop good turn for the day.

UNITED CHURCH HESITATES TO ORDAIN WOMAN

Council Refers Proposal From Kamsack To Special Committee.

REFERENCE NEEDED.

General Opinion Is That Presbyteries and Conferences Should Decide.

MONTREAL, June 19. (Canadian Press.)—It looked for a while Thursday as though Miss Lydia Grouchy, B.A., home mission worker of the United Church of Canada in Saskatchewan, was to become the first woman in Canada to be ordained for the ministry. The General Council, at first applauding loudly an overture from Kamsack Presbytery, Saskatchewan, asking that this be done, debated the matter at length and finally referred it to a special committee for report.

At the conclusion it seemed to be the general opinion that the Council did not have power to ordain a woman without first referring it to the conferences and presbyteries of the Church.

The Moderator thought the action would constitute legislation which would necessitate reference, according to the provisions of the Barrier Act. Many of the speakers, in addition to legal barriers to giving a decision, thought the matter was too big a one to be decided except by the whole Church. The proponents pleaded that the United Church give its leadership in this as in its union

INSTITUTE MEETING.

Mount Pleasant Branch Meets at Home of Mrs. Graham.

MOUNT PLEASANT, June 19.—The June meeting of the Mount Pleasant branch of East Durham Woman's Institute was held on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Thomas Graham.

Owing to the inclement condition of the weather the attendance was smaller than usual, there being only twelve members present.

The meeting opened, with the president in the chair, by singing "The Maple Leaf Forever," after which the "Lord's Prayer" was repeated in unison.

The minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary and on motion were adopted as read. Among the correspondence read was a letter from Charles A. Cooke, Indian entertained, who stated he would be pleased to accept the invitation from the Institute to give an evenings entertainment on July 6.

No new business was taken up owing to the busy season. The programme then followed:

Miss Lena Finley gave a splendid paper on "Habits and what they lead to"; Mrs. W. H. Lowes also read a very interesting paper on "Canadion women and their work"; Mrs. Thomas Graham gave a well prepared paper on "Canadian authors and their works."

PLAY PRESENTED BY YOUNG PEOPLE

Rural Drama Acted By Coldsprings Cast at Gilmour Church.

"Red Acre Farm," a rural drama in three acts, presented by the Coldsprings Young People, was the attraction that drew a good attendance to the Gilmour Memorial church on Thursday night.

The plot centres round the fortunes of the Armstrong family, comprised of Josiah Armstrong, the owner of Red Acre Farm, his wife, Amanda, and his two daughters, Laura and Nellie.

The cast was as follows:

Josiah Armstrong, owner of Red Acre Farm—Jack Wilson.

Amanda Armstrong, Joshia's wife—Ada Kitney.

Jonah Jones, a farm helper—Ernest Kitney.

Junior, adopted daughter of the Strutts—May Wilson.

Harry Harcourt, Squire's profligate son—Donald Rose.

Nellie Armstrong, driven from home—Mary Tully.

Colonel Barnaby Strutt— Fred Kitney.

Mrs. Barnaby Strutt, the Colonel's wife—Mary Huston.

Tom Busby, a travelling merchant—Earle Huston.

Squire Harcourt, who holds a mortgage—Carl Wilson.

Miss Doris Palmer was director.

All the characters did full justice to their respective parts and the play was voted one of the best seen in the district for many years.

Between the acts the orchestra played selections. Mrs. J. A. Young sang a solo, and, in conjunction with Miss Beatrice McGregor, a duet. Miss Jessie Tully and Miss Phyllis Moore recited.

MANY CANDIDATES IN ALBERTA FIELD

Sixty Seats Being Contested By 185 Nominees—Election June 28.

EDMONTON, June 19 (Canadian Press).—One hundred and eighty-five candidates, representing five various shades of political faith, were nominated yesterday to take part in the Provincial general election on June 28 next, thus providing a contest which, for number of its entries and the extent to which competition is being carried in practically every constituency, stands as a Provincial record. There are sixty seats in the Alberta Legislature and thus there will be 125 defeated candidates when the curtain falls on election day.

GRUESOME FIND IN FURNACE PIT

Watchman Finds Body of Man Missing Three Days.

BUFFALO, June 19 (Canadian Press).—A gruesome murder came to light here yesterday when a watchman found the body of Jacob Benderson, a wealthy retired merchant, in the ash pit of the furnace in the cellar of a vacant building. The victim was believed by the police to have been kidnapped and murdered by human ghouls, who were frightened away before they carried out their plan to destroy the evidence of their crime. Benderson disappeared last Tuesday after visiting the Liberty Bank, where he made a deposit. Whatever money he had on his person had been removed and a diamond ring worth $1,000 was also taken by the slayer.

WHEN DIGESTION IS ON STRIKE

Food Fails to Nourish—Relief Can Be Had Through Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Is your digestion on strike? Do you turn away from food at meal times, although you know you need the nourishment your food should give you? Is what you eat followed by pains, flatulence or nausea? These symptoms show that your stomach is in no state to digest food even if you eat it. Do not rely on remedies that merely give temporary relief. A sound stomach depends upon rich, red blood, and if it does not do the work nature intended, the trouble must be corrected through the blood and there is no better way to build up the blood than by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Every dyspeptic who has tried them is delighted with the improved appetite and renewed strength that so quickly follow their use. Mrs. A. Quinlan, Stratford, Ont., is one who has tested the value of these pills in trouble of this kind. She says:—"I feel it a duty to let you know what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me. Some time ago I suffered severely from indigestion, which left me run down and nervous. I could neither eat nor sleep well, and decided to consult a doctor. He told me that I was almost bloodless and gave me some medicine, but as it did not appear to help me, I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I got three boxes and by the time I had taken them I felt better. I then got three more boxes and by the time I had taken them I felt better. I then got three more boxes and when I had taken them I felt like a new woman, and I was again able to do my housework, and have not since had any return of the trouble."

Dr. Williams Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers, or will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. A little booklet "What to Eat and How to Eat," will be sent free to any address for the asking.

A Two Family House of English Domestic Type

By Lawson & Little, Architects.

This house is actually square on plan—thirty by thirty feet—which is conceded to be the cheapest form in which to build, and at the same time is the most difficult to plan.

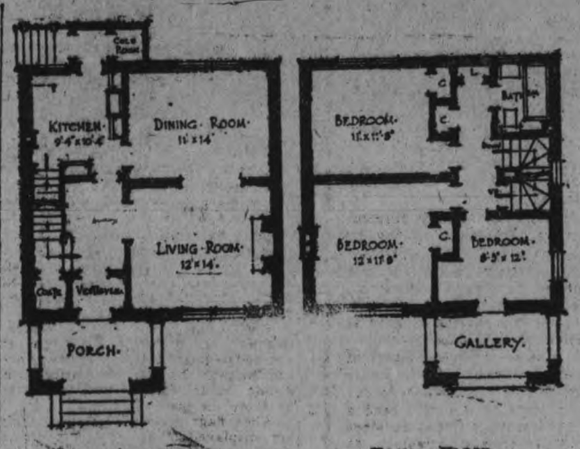
The living room and dining room,—each fourteen by seventeen feet,—are arranged "en suite" with a large fireplace in the former. The kitchen is easy of access from the hall and dining room, and has a side and cellar entrance. The main stairs lands in the centre of the upper hall, and leaves a wide hallway space on the ground floor and with a cupboard off the stair landing. The front door is protected by a porch and vestibule, there being a gallery over the former on the first floor.

Three bedrooms and a bathroom are the accommodation shown on the first floor—all of good size and well arranged as to cupboards and light.

The home is constructed of concrete and concrete blocks—the outer walls being finished with plaster, stucco rough cast finish. The roofs are slated with Asbestoslate. The finished woodwork in the interior is oak for the ground floor, and pine for painting, on the first floor. The flooring is oak throughout.

There is a well-finished cellar under the entire house, which contains the boiler room—with Standard type boiler for hot water heating, and coal and general storage rooms for house purposes.

Plumbing fixtures throughout are of good serviceable sanitary type, and of the latest house design, and the building wired throughout for an ample supply o wall and ceiling lights.



Each house would be on land with a frontage of forty feet, and would cost about seven thousand dollars when completed with fencing and grading.

Readers desiring further information regarding the plans and specifications of this house should communicate with the architect direct. Address Lawson and Little, 374 Beaver Hall Hill, Montreal, Que. Copyright 1926, MacLean Building Reports Limited.

Q.—Is it necessary to put a coat of shellac over stained floors if the finish is to be of varnish?

A.—The shellac is necessary. Unless it is used the chemicals in the stain will work up through the varnish and cloud it.

MEXICAN PRELATE MAY GET RED HAT

As Protest Against His Government's Religious Policy.

NAPLES, June 19.— (United Press).—The Mattino's Vatican correspondent credits the Pope with the intention of raising Archbishop Del Rio of Mexico City to the Cardinalate in token of the Papal approval of the attitude of the Mexican Episcopale toward the Mexican Government's religious policy.

By such action Pope Pius would imitate Pope Leo XIII in raising a German bishop to the College of Cardinals as a protest against Bismark policies.

SONG RECITAL.

Pupils of Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park Give Good Programme.

There was a good attendance in the hall of the Conservatory of Music last evening, for the Song Recital given by pupils of Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park. The recital was exceptionally pleasing, with a very attractive choice of songs, marked by the careful attention to technical detail and the ease in singing which characterize the pupils of Mrs. Park. The selections were pleasingly varied, showing a wide range of musicianship in the various solos, and there were two numbers by the Sight-Singing class, which were well rendered. This included "Sylvia" and "Sleep, Holy Child."

The solo numbers were received with much appreciation in every instance. Several of the senior pupils had exceptionally interesting selections. Mrs. Walter Byers sang in splendid voice, with much expression, "The Loreley"; Mrs. H. F. Doig gave a dramatic rendition of the odd selection, "The Grey Wolf"; Mrs. Ross Williamson's decorative soprano was heard to excellent advantage in an Italian song from "Don Giovanni," "Batti, Batti o bel Masetto"; Mrs. Norman Foote sang very prettily "Then Weep'! Thou Grief-Worn Eyes"; Miss Daisy Murray's powerful, soaring voice was beautiful in a second Italian number, "Suicidio!" from "Gioconda"; Miss Margaret Dickson of Campbellford displayed an unusual, charming quality of coloratura fibre in her solo, "Shepherd! Thy Demeanor Vary," an old English air of light atmosphere, and Miss Geraldine Collins' lovely soprano was combined with Mr. Maurice H. Park's fine tenor in a duett that received much applause, "My Heart at The Sweet Voice" from "Samson and Delila."

An odd quality that made her song exceptionally effective was apparent in Miss Fern Stenton's attractive contralto, heard in a lovely song, "My Heart A-Dream"; and Miss Helen Lytle had a daintily sung solo in "A Pastoral." A charming piece was "Winds in the Trees," rendered very prettily by Miss Ida McBride.

Other interesting numbers, well rendered, were "In Summertime," by Mrs. Leila Spriggs; "Boat Song," by Miss Kathleen Conner of Campbellford; "In Summertime on Bredon," by Miss Frances Robertson; "Love's Echoes," by Miss Helen Lamb; "Pale Moon," by Miss Addie Batten; "Summer," by Miss Jean Padgett; "When Butterflies Return," by Miss Freda Allison; "A Bowl of Roses," by Mrs. Dora MacMillan of Lakefield, and "Come to the Fair," by a bass singer, Mr. John Ritchie.

Mrs. Park spoke in regretful terms of the unavoidable absence, by reason of a recent accident, of Miss Bertha Hill. Her place was taken by Mr. M. H. Park, who sang, with his usual effective rendition and attractive tones, Coleridge-Taylor's "Onoway, Awake!"

OIL FROM GRAPE SEEDS

French scientists have discovered a new use for grape seeds. They are extracting a lubricating oil from them. As soon as the grapes have been pressed, the seeds are removed from the skins and dried. Then they are subjected to a process for removing their oils. With this new oil, says Popular Science Monthly, French engineers hope to replace castor oil, which it resembles, as a lubricant for delicate motors, especially airplane motors.

A Young Man's Safe and Profitable Investment

AT the age of twenty a certain young man started to work.

His father wanted him to adopt a compulsory savings habit, and advised the young man to take out a Mutual Life Insurance Policy.

The father agreed to pay half the premiums on the $10,000 policy for the first five years to give the boy a good start, as the annual premium of $476.50 was a big part of the young man's salary at that time.

The young man took out the policy. That was 20 years ago. Today he is a man of 40. And he has just received in cash from the Mutual Life $3,345.10 MORE than he paid in premiums.

If you are a young man in the twenties, ask the Mutual Life agent about the policies similar to the one mentioned.

HALL STORE

SALE OF COOKING DECIDED SUCCESS

All Goods Disposed Of As Quickly as Offered.

MILLBROOK, June 19.—The sale of homemade baking, candy, etc., under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the United church, held recently, was a decided success considering the unfavorable weather throughout the afternoon and evening.

Quite a number patronized the afternoon tea served in Mrs. F. W. Smith's home, the sale taking place in the adjoining space between the house and store. Mrs. H. W. Johnston and Mrs. G. E. Burnham were in charge of the tea tables, and the social side had a chance of development while the guests were being served.

Mrs. J. McKnight, Mrs. A. J. Brown, Mrs. Ross and Mrs. R. H. Edmunds, Mrs. C. C. Garside, Miss May Duncan, and others, were among the workers who attended the wants of purchasers at the counter outside.

Unfortunately the supply of baking was not sufficient to meet the demand, due probably to the fact that many from the country were prevented from coming in owing to the wet day. However all the stock was disposed of practically as fast as it was placed on the counter.

The receipts totalled $25.00, and undoubtedly might have been double that amount had the weather drawback not interfered.

The Aid is endeavoring to hold one event each month until the indebtness on the recent extensive repairs to the church is entirely wiped out. The garden party on Thursday, July 8, is already thoroughly planned for and committees are working to make it a decided success.

CRACK FILLER FOR .. ..FURNITURE. .. ..

Small cracks and holes in furniture may be filled satisfactorily with a mixture of five parts varnish and one part whiting. If the filler is used for wood in a natural finish (not painted) it is necessary to add sufficient dry tinting colors to match the wood to which it is applied. HASTINGS PAVING PROGRAM DEFEATED council divided. He stated that it was the most important item in the report and should receive very careful consideration.

Reeve Bedal pointed out that the counties share of the cost this year ($6250) would be taken from the county road appropriation of some $90,000, that the Harwood-Gore's Landing road was another extra, and another minor undertaking was also mentioned.

Holdaway of Port Hope and Wood of Millbrook declared that the committee would have $16,000 more than last year to spend.

Finally the vote was ... ed on an amendment to the motion for the adoption of the report. The amendment by L. C. Murphy, deputy-reeve of Cramahe township, seconded by J. H. Dolmas, deputy reeve of Murray township, proposed the deletion of the Hastings clause.

When his name was called Mr. Maher asked what the council was voting on with ayes and nays, and his question revealed that quite a few of the rural opponents had voted in the negative, thinking the motion was before them.

"You see a man can talk a lot but he can do some good," was Mr. Maher's remark. "There were members who I had heard express themselves as opposed to this Hastings pavement and I was surprised when I heard them voting for it."

The division was 19 to 18 as referred to above.

The Hastings Bridge.

Another clause in the Committee's report authorized Dr. Hess, Mr. Nelson and Mr. Bedal to make the necessary repairs to the Hastings bridge.

"What will those repairs cost," Mr. Maher enquired.

Mr. Bedal said he could not give a definite estimate, but it was understood the cost would not be more than $200 or $250.

Several other bridges had been similarly referred to in the report, and as the auditors' recommendation for details of the initiation of such undertakings had evoked the interminable discussions during the week, Mr. Maher suggested that some limit be set to the outlay on each bridge.

"Would it not be better to say in the Hastings bridge that the cost not exceed $250, otherwise we are voting for an amount we don't know anything about?"

Reeve Elliott of Bowmanville remarked that Mr. Maher was a member of the committee and should have attended the meeting Thursday night, when those details were discussed.

"I beg your pardon, I'm not a member," Mr. Maher answered.

Reeve Elliott then turned up a copy of the January session minutes in which Mr. Maher was listed as a member of the Roads and Bridges committee.

Mr. Maher: "I didn't know I was on this committee. I was here last night and could just as well have been in the committee room I even looked in the book to see if I was on the committee, but I didn't see my name.

Reeve Harry McGuire, Cobourg—I was with him here, and I think he should get credit for that.

Mr. Bedal—He should have known in January he was a member of this committee.

Reeve Wood of Millbrook supported the Cobourg contention, that the estimated expenditure be fixed at some definite sum.

Finally this was set at $150. The Tarvia and stone still unused at Hastings will be used on the west side of the bridge. Other bridge repairs in the report were likewise ticketed with stated sums. In that respect the auditors' recommendation was effected.

Mr. Hooten said the Dunlop bridge would cost about $10; Whitfield's bridge in South Monaghan remains closed for the present.

The County Rate

The county tax rate was announced by W. T. Wood of Millbrook at 8 mills with two fractional levies for small sums. The general rate is 6 1-2 mills and the county road rate 1 1-2 mills. In the listing of the sums these rates will bring from the constituent municipalities the following were included:

General county rate.—Campbellford, $5,192; Millbrook, $1,290; South Monaghan, $4,980; Percy, $7,975; Hastings, $1,255.

County roads rate.—Campbellford, $1,198.24; Millbrook, $297.78; South Monaghan, $1,149.26; Percy, $1,840.42; Hastings, $287.40.

The grant to the Salvation Army was increased from $25 to $50, and the Cobourg Horse Show grant remains $200. No action was taken on a request for a donation to the Beck Memorial Fund.

On the Finance Committee's recommendation, it was decided that any member who is absent from a meeting of the Council or a committee shall not receive his pay for that day.

Buy Adding Machine

By a vote of 27 to 7, the County Property Committee's rejection of the purchase of a Burrough's adding machine at a cost of $338 cash in ten days for the County offices was upset, and the Council authorized that a machine be bought.

Grant to Schools

Grants to High and Continuation Schools, recommended by the schools committee of which Dr. Hess of Hastings is chairman, was adopted, including the following schools:

Campbellford, $9,674.52; Omemee, $373.88; Norwood, $1,189.15; Lindsay, $2,072.69.

And to the following continuation schools:

Warkworth, $3,599.72; Millbrook, $4,719.84; Frankford, $2,320.15; Janetville, $721.68; Blackstock, $2,149.66.

Re-appointed to Boards

Mr. Nelson Stone of Campbellford and Mr. Edward Quinn of Colborne, were re-appointed to Mothers' Allowance Board of Northumberland, of which the other members are Mrs. M. E. Maybee, Trenton; Mrs. Findlay Clark, Brighton; Mr. A. R. Dundas, Cobourg; Miss May McCaughey, Cobourg.

Mr. F. W. Galbraith, Port Hope, and Mrs. Arthur Van Camp of Burketon, were re-appointed to the Mothers' Allowance Board for Durham. Its other members are Mrs. A. L. Nichols, Bowmanville; Miss Pearl Burnham, Millbrook; Mr. Harry Bland, Ida; Mr. C. J. Thornton, Orono; Mr. T. B. Chalk, Port Hope.

results of such conference further on.

Other bridges are in contemplation as to rebuilding and the matter was also set out to the deputy minister.

Other bridges have been inspected which will be discussed and finally dealt with, I presume, at this session; a minute report of such work will be presented at the Fall Session.

The floating bridges suffered at spring opening as usual, and I will ask Messrs. Flood, Parker and Middleton to reveal to you the conditions.

At the present moment I have not received a reply from the Deputy Minister of Highways, but hope still to have same before session closes.

Considerable bridge building and repairs are necessary this season, and I anticipate the continuance of assistance from my colleagues.

J. F. Breckenridge,
Chairman.

Committee on Finance

Gentlemen,—I herewith submit to you a statement of the various resources and expenditures for the current year, showing the respective amounts required. Having kept in touch with the different standing committees I submit the same, subject to your approval.

The total asked for is practically the same as last year, when you consider the amount for highway from the villages.

The amount is so small from provincial highway claim, that I considered it advisable to meet the same out of the highway rate. You will find provision embodied in the by-law for highway rates.

Meetings, the same from highway rates lessens the total to that extent.

There is considerable to meet that this Council has no control over, particularly schools, of which you are all aware.

I presume if the extensions are made to the court house that the same will be met by debenture issue, I understand that the treasurer has two amounts calculated and ready for your consideration.

It is gratifying to know that the debenture debt has not increased within the last few years, but has materially decreased.

I understand that the chairman of the standing committee has considerable bridge building and repairing under his jurisdiction and I trust the provision for such will be ample and no doubt he will have the combined assistance of his colleagues as had his predecessors.

Recognizing the assistance and patience of you all.

J. A. Middleton,
Chairman.

DECISION EXONERATING

have wandered into the bush. On examining the three horses, Mr. Smith stated that he found the white one in a very emaciated condition with its ribs quite prominent. One of the other two horses, he said, had a sore on each shoulder. Upon entering the stable he saw a cow lying down in the stall. It was breathing very heavily, he said.

Upon being questioned, Mr. Spratt admitted that this was the seventh cow. He remarked that his stock had been suffering from kidney trouble. Witness said he then examined the remainder of the cattle. He found one black one very emaciated. The rest, he said, were in bad shape. At the door outside the stable he found a dead calf. Its body was very thin and, in his opinion, it had been there for a considerable time. Witness stated that he asked Spratt how much feed he had and he showed him some sweet clover, about three hundred pounds of straw and a quantity of oats in a bin. The sweet clover, in his opinion, was of a very poor quality—just dry stems like sticks, he said, and the oats were also of a poor quality. We then went to the stable and on searching the feed boxes he could find no trace of oats. Spratt told him he had been feeding the gray team three gallons of oats a day. In the mangers he found a few stalks of sweet clover. The stables were in a dirty condition and had not been cleaned out that day. Constable Maker and himself started out across the fields and in a sugar bush they found the bodies of three calves lying in the snow. The bodies were in a very emaciated condition, he said. Examined by Mr. Corkery the witness maintained that he had asked Mr. Spratt to show him all the feed he had in stock.

Dr. O. C. Weale.

Dr. O. C. Weale stated that he was a qualified veterinary surgeon and had been in practice for nine years. On April 22, accompanied by Provincial Constable N. F. Maker, he went out to the farm. Upon entering the barn he saw two cows, three horses and one calf. There were two gray horses and one bay. The bay, he said, was in an emaciated condition with the bones protruding under the skin. Its hair was stary, by which he meant standing up. It had a sub-normal temperature 96 degrees—the normal being 100 degrees. Its pulse was 45—normal was from 70 to 80. The two grays, he said, were in similar shape and in an even worse emaciated condition. All three were staggering, he said.

One of the two cows, he said, was lying down in the stall and was unable to rise. He attempted to make the cow get up but it would not rise. A similar condition existed with the other cow, he said. Witness stated that he then went upstairs and found two hundred pounds of straw, about 50 pounds of very poor quality sweet clover, some 30 or 40 bushels in a bin also of a very poor quality. In his opinion, he said, lack of nourishment was the cause of the condition of the animals. Five head of cattle outside the barn, he described "as being in terrible shape." The calves in the bush were lying back to back. There were marks around their necks showing that they had been dragged out. In his opinion they, too, died of starvation, as they bore a shrunken and emaciated appearance, he said. Cross-examined by Mr. Myers the witness stated that the other four cows "were a wee bit better."

Mr. Myers—You said in your last evidence that they were not in bad condition.

Witness—I said one was in bad condition.

Mr. Meyers then read a portion of the evidence that Dr. Weale had given at the previous trial.

Witness—I'll say that the stock was not in poor shape, except the one.

Mr. Meyers—Would you say that the five in the yard were starved.

Witness—I would not go as far as that.

Mr. Meyers—You said that the average pulse for a horse was 75.

Witness—Between 70 and 80.

Mr. Meyers then produced a book which had been recommended by the Department of Agriculture as being a good book on horse diseases and in which was the statement that the normal pulse of a horse was 35.

Witness said that he was not acquainted with the book and that to the best of his knowledge the normal pulse was between 70 and 80.

Provincial Constable Maker.

Constable Maker stated that he accompanied Inspector Smith on April 20. He corroborated the evidence that Mr. Smith had given in connection with the findings on that occasion. On visiting the farm on his second trip, he saw the same horses and cows.

One of the cows that had been in the barn yard on his first trip had laid down and could not raise itself. There was no new food, he said.

Dr. H. E. Ellis.

Dr. H. E. Ellis, the first witness for the defence, stated that he was called in to inspect the stock on April 21. On arriving at the farm, he found a quantity of sweet clover, straw and bran. In his opinion there was enough food on hand to meet the requirements for eight or 10 days. Dr. Ellis then gave an exhaustive account of his diagnosis on the cattle. He said that he found one black cow lying down. It could not rise to its feet, he said. Its stomach was distended with food and it apparently had a good appetite. He diagnosed it as a case of paralysis. Mr. Spratt told him to make a complete examination of all the stock. He found one red and white cow down—it rose to its feet with difficulty. The five in the yard appeared to be in good health. The horses, he said, were in good shape. One of the horses has a small collar abrasion on each shoulder. The stable was well cleaned out.

He examined the cattle again on April 25 and found that the condition of the first cow was unchanged, the second one, he said, could rise to its feet with ease.

On April 26 he again examined the cattle, he said. There was still no change in the condition of the first cow. The second, he said, could walk around with ease. On May 1 the first cow died. He conducted a post mortem on the body and, in his opinion, it had died from congestion of the lungs. He collected samples of the food and sent them to the department of agriculture for their examination and report. Sweet clover in many cases, he said, brought about an emaciated condition and finally resulted in the death of the animal. Two of the cows died and, in his opinion, their deaths were due to feeding them damaged sweet clover. One of the cows died under his care, despite the fact that he had it on a full diet. The general actions of the animals, he said, was as if they had been poisoned. He saw the three calves in the bush, witness continued, and conducted a post mortem on them. He saw no signs of violence and when he removed the stomachs he found them to be full of food. He had them on ice at his office where they could be inspected at any time he said.

H. R. Spratt.

Mr. Spratt, the defendant, stated that he farmed for the last five years. He had, he said, sufficient food to have carried his stock through any normal winter, but last winter was five weeks longer than usual. He had fed his cattle sweet clover ever since he commenced farming. Prior to March he had had trouble, he said, a team of horses died in 1923 from paralysis. In the present case the same symptoms were apparent. He wrote to the Dominion department of agriculture, describing the condition to them. A representative of the department visited him on April 6. He called in Dr. Ellis on April 21 and followed his advice absolutely, he said. He did not consider it necessary for him to show the Humane society inspector the feed he had in the barn as he considered he tried to browbeat him, he said. There was a half ton of sweet clover in one part of the barn.

Constable Maker was recalled by Mr. Corkery at this stage.

Mr. Corkery—You heard what Mr. Spratt said?

Witness—Yes.

Mr. Corkery—Did you see any feed there?

Witness—No. Everything went so nice he even asked us to stay for supper.

This concluded the evidence.

Mr. Corkery stated that the outstanding feature of the whole case was the discrepancy in the evidence. The witnesses for the prosecution were all as one as to the quality and the quantity of the feed. It seems strange, he said, that Mr. Spratt did not show Constable Maker the half ton of clover. Even after being advised early in April that he was using food that was poisoning his cattle he did not bring in a veterinary The evidence of Dr. Ellis, Mr. Corkery maintained, was confined to the feeding of the cattle after April 21 and was worthless as far as the charge was concerned.

Mr. Myers stated that even the complainant, Smith, admitted that four of the six head of cattle were in fair condition. The evidence of the two veterinaries, he said, was directly contradictory. The evidence of Dr. Ellis was very much to the point, and he even detailed the food found there the very day after the visit of the Humane inspector. He submitted that the evidence of Dr. Ellis was unshakeable. The complainant admitted that he laid the charge simply from the appearance of the animals. The cause of the diaster was undoubtedly sweet clover poisoning.

His Honor, Judge Huycke, stated that he would reserve judgment and asked Mr. Corkery to furnish him with a copy of the statute under which the charge was brought.

Mrs. G. Jones, Kitscoty, Alta., writes:—"I had eczema on my left hand, and my first finger was so swollen, sore and itchy I could hardly sleep at night.

"THESE WOMEN"

By MALCOLM DUART

COPYRIGHT 1926

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

Audrey Morton is at her home in Peterborough, just recovering from a nervous collapse.

She loves her guardian, Harry Morton, rich, attractive, middle-aged and unmarried, but does not discourage John Parrish, Morton's secretary, who loves her.

Nona, a Toronto dancer, who has just made a brilliant stage success, also loves Morton.

In the last chapter, Morton denounces his next door neighbors, who had hurt Audrey by refusing to recognize her, the result of her entertainment of a group of chorus girls a month or so before.

As this chapter opens, word comes that a maid from hte next house is waiting at the kitchen door.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER LVI.

In a few moments Morton returned, laughing, with a great heap of flowers in his arm.

"Come out here a minute, Parrish," he called into the study door, as he passed.

Parrish followed him, as he went to the porch, and dropped the huge bouquet into Audrey's lap.

"Message of sorrow from the folks next door!" he said.

With an exclamation, Parrish stooped down and swept the flowers from Audrey's lap. "Such confounded impertinence!" he cried.

"My flowers!" gasped Audrey.

Morton rescued the peace offering from Parrish, as the latter held it over the porch rail. Returning it to Audrey's lap, he said:

"Lesson number two in the art of living," he said to Parrish, still laughing. "When your enemy offers apology, accept it gracefully."

Parrish leaned back against the rail. "They insulted Miss Morton," he said. "I don't see how a bunch of roses can make amends for that."

Audrey held the fragrant flowers to her bosom, wrapping her arms around them as if she were holding a child.

"Parrish," Morton said, "did you ever make a fat-headed mistake in your life?"

Parrish grinned sheepishly. "You know I have!"

Morton shrugged his shoulders. "Then you can answer your question yourself." He turned, and went into the house.

Parrish picked up one of the flowers that had fallen to the floor.

"I guess we ought to do something to let them know that we've forgiven them," he said.

She looked up at him mischievously. "Did they refuse to speak to you, too?"

Parrish blushed painfully. Then he joined in her laugh.

"It was a personal matter with me," he acknowledged.

He stood considering a moment. Then he ran down the steps across the lawn, vaulted a hedge, and she saw him ring the bell of the house next door. He disappeared inside.

When he came back, he was smiling.

"What on earth did you do over there?" she asked.

"I presented Miss Morton's compliments," he said, "and Mr. Morton's compliments and thanked them very cordially for the flowers, and said that you and Mr. Morton hoped that they would call as soon as you were able to be around."

She patted her hands together with delight. "You're so funny, John!! she cried.

He sat down on the floor beside her suddenly.

"You called me John," he accused.

She dimpled. "Didn't I ever do that before?" she asked, primly.

"Certainly you didn't," he said. "You always called me Mr. Parrish."

"I have thought of you as John for a long time," she told him.

He reached out, and took her hand. She looked right and left to see if they were observed. Then she let her fingers lie quiet in his.

"Are you going to marry me, sometime?" he asked her, moving nearer to her chair.

She considered thoughtfully, her brow drawn into a little frown.

"I like you well enough to marry you," she said, at last. "At least, almost well enough to marry you."

He pressed her hand against his cheek.

"Dear!" he breathed, looking up into her face.

"I like you," she said, "but you know I've asked Mr. Morton to marry me!"

He dropped her hand suddenly, and turned his head away. She leaned far over, and lifted his hand again.

"John," she continued, "don't you realize something of what my life has been?"

She drew his head to the arm of her chair, and caressed his hair with one hand, while with the other she clung to his fingers.

"Ever since I was a little tiny girl daddy has been more than a father to me—he has been my friend, and my playmate, and everything that I worshiped in this world. John,' you don't know how good a man he is!'

She lifted her hand from his head and drawing out her little handkerchief, touched it to her eyes.

"I scarcely played with any children, because he always was my playmate. He was rich, you know, and could get away from his office when I wanted him to. We took long rides in the country. I didn't need any children. He knew how to play blindman's-buff, and drop the handkerchief, and he used to make up games in the evening, when we would sit on the floor before the fire.

"I almost always went to sleep, sitting on his lap with my head on his shoulder, until I was grown."

Her voice dropped. The young man was silent, waiting for her togo on.

"I can just remember when I was a tiny little thing, way down in the Arizona desert. An Indian woman stayed with me in the daytime, whileI played around in the sand. But at night when he came home, he would always me to his shoulder, and dance off across the hills pretending he was my horse! Sometimes he would take me on his pony, and we would go for long rides before dark.

"John, daddy has simply filled my life! I never had a thought that he didn't sympathize with—until recently, anyway. He never forbade me to do anything, in this world! When I was naughty, he would look so grieved, and he would take me on his knee, and talk to me tenderly, until I cried. Then I wouldn't be naughty again for a long, long while."

"He sent me away to boarding school two or three winters. He said I ought to have the company of young people. But I sent him a telegram every night, and wrote him a long letter before I went to bed.

"He would come to the school every Friday night, and stay until Monday morning. We spent the whole time going places, and laughing, and playing."

She brooded for a little time. "You know that women always have been in love with him. I think it's because he is so indifferent. Women are that way."

Parrish smiled. "I guess I went at my love making by the wrong method," he ventured.

She gave his hand a pat, and went on. "I know he never cared anything about them. He never really cared for anyone but me. And oh, John!"

She bent down to look into his face. "John, do you know that daddy is a terribly lonely man? He sees so much of people, and goes so many places, but I don't believe there is anything really in his heart but me!"

She touched her eyes again with her handkerchief. "He needs me, John dear! And I love him so much that I would surrender all the rest of my life to making him happy. Suppose I married you, and he went on into old age, always alone!"

She was crying in earnest now.

She nodded. "And hungry!" she said. "It's the first time I've been hungry for weeks and weeks and weeks."

She looked with relish at the dish of shredded tangerines that lay before her.

"We're going to have company," Morton said. "Nona is coming."

She looked up in surprise. "How can she get away from Toronto? She has to be there every night, and two matinees, doesn't she?"

He handed her a letter, that came in the morning mail.

"Dear Harry and Audrey," it said. "I need advice terribly. I am to decide now which way I will go in the world. The producer is opening a big revue in London in a month. He wants to star me in it, and put somebody else in this summer show. An understudy will dance for me two nights, if you will let me come and see you. May I? With all my love, Nona."

PETERBORO' HAS GOOD STANDING

In Third Place of Ontario Cities in Value of Products.

SEVENTH IN CAPITAL.

In a recent number of Canadian Machinery an article is published on the relative industrialism of Canadian cities. To ascertain the relative intensity of manufacturing in the cities the writer believes it is necessary to take into account the value of each of the main factors which may be considered to give an approximate measure of the degree of industrialism. These main factors he takes to be capital invested, employment provided, and value of product, but, he says, the relative position of the city cannot be determined by a single one of these factors. It is, therefore, advisable to express each city's position in regard to the three main factors in terms of its population, that is per capita. Capital invested adds to the standing, wealth and taxable value of the city; employment furnished is vital to the prosperity of the city, and value of product determines the "turn over" and money in circulation.

A table is given showing the standing of the cities in these respects.

In value of products per capita Peterborough stands in third place with $1,280.00.

In number of employees engaged in the industries per capita this city also stands in third place, with 30.6 per cent.

In the amount of capital invested this city is seventh with $1,096.00 per capita.

Niagara Falls is in first place as to capital invested per capita, but the large amount of capital invested there in hydro-electric development, which gives comparatively small employment, is counted as industrial capital.

In this comparison Peterborough occupies a very creditable place as an industrial city.

MEXICANS LIABLE TO TREASON TRIAL

MEXICO CITY, June 9.—(United Press).—Mexicans attending the Eurcharistic Congress in Chicago would be liable to trial for treason if they participated in direct attacks against Mexico during the Congress, Minister of the Interio Tejeda announced yesterday.

Tejeda denied the report, allegedly printed in a New York newspaper, that the Mexican Government will distribute ten thousand pamphlets at the Eucharistic Congress in which Mexico's religious position would be explained. Such procedure is unnecessary, Tejeda said, because the government's activities with respect to the church are in accord with long standing laws of the Republic. A large delegation of Mexicans is enroute to Chicago from Mexico City.

DON'T BLAME THE BAKER.

If you are tempted to complain of the bread and biscuits your wife bakes, go slow. The trouble may not be in the baking but in the flour. For one thing, says Popular Science Monthly, the flour may be ground too fine.

Two chemists of the Food Research Institute at Stanford University, Drs. C. L. Alsberg and E. P. Griffing, have just discovered that too much grinding injures the starch in the grain. As a result, bread rises too fast at first, then falls. Excessive grinding also injures the gluten, which makes bread dough elastic, and then the dough is difficult to knead.

CORRECTING LINDSAY.

Kiwanis Team Is Sponsored By Kiwanians—Not Name Only.

The Lindsay Post says of the Kiwanis baseball teams: "These aggregations bear the Kiwanis name only."

This is a mistake insofar as it refers to the Peterborough team. The boys are "fathered" by the Kiwanians, and the Kiwanis Club pays the expenses of equipping and carrying the team. On the trip to Lindsay yesterday the boys were taken in Kiwanians' cars.

It is a real Kiwanis team.

Another False Alarm From Lake Street Beach

The pulmotor was called to the Lake Street bathing beach at 7.30 last night, but on arrival at the scene it was found that it was a false alarm. This makes the third false alarm within two weeks from the same place.

Fire Chief Gimblett said this morning that he had discovered the boys who had turned in the other two alarms, and expected to apprehend last night's offender to-day. He said that if any more of these false alarms are turned in that the offenders will be prosecuted.

LONDON, June 19.—Snakes like classical music, but object to "jazz airs," according to an interesting experiment recently made in the Snake Park at Port Elizabeth. The cobras glared stonily during "I Miss My Swiss," and "If You Know Susie," but wriggled and danced when a classical selection was played.

Paris Defines Skirt Fulness With Panels

Summer dining or dancing has a special significance when accompanied by the soft grace expressed in the lines of this naive little frock, which is as cool as a summer zephyr. There are eight floating panels (four at the front and four at the back), shirred slant-wise at the top, and set onto the plain foundation of the frock. The low neck shows a yoke deeper at the front and back than at the shoulders, and the short kimono sleeves have a little cuff of patterned material to match the yoke and panels. NO. 1237 is for the miss and small woman, and is in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years. Size 18 years (36 bust) requires 3 yards 36-inch plain material, and 2¼ yards figured; or 5¼ yards of 36-inch if dress is made all of one material. Price 20 cents.

The secret of distinctive dress lies in good taste rather than a lavish expenditure of money. Every woman should want to make her own clothes, and the home dressmaker will find the designs illustrated in our new Fashion Book to be practical and simple, yet maintaining the spirit of the mode of the moment. Price of the book 10 cents the copy.

The Woman's Day

Written by a Woman for Women.

Touching brightly on woman's every major interest in life from books and babies to politics and psycho analysis.

(By Allene Sumner)

THE IDEAL HOUSE!

It should have a kitchen with a north or northwest exposure, dining room looking to the east, living room south and west, with two windows at least in each room. This from the home demonstration department of a state college. The same savant states that rooms with warm exposures should be decorated in the cool background colors of blue, green, grey, or mauve, and north rooms should be warmed with colors of orange, yellow, tan or red. Light colors make a room seem larger, and dark colors make it seem smaller. The floor should always be darker than walls and draperies.

BEAUTY AND TRAFFIC.

About four centuries ago there lived in France a woman so beautiful that dense crowds gathered before her house waiting for her to appear that they might bask in her beauty. The city fathers, perturbed by this blocking of the narrow streets, asked La Belle Paule to come for that a certain hour twice a week with face unveiled so that everyone might see her loveliness at those times, and leave the street unblocked at other hours.

DON'T CROWD TODAY!

A sad commentary on the beauty of today's woman is that crowds do not block streets to see any of them pass. Justine Johnson, recognized as one of our foremost beauties, even if not of the sort that crowds gather for to see, gives a few pointers. "I use scented oil in my bath," writes she. "It makes a film on the bath water which clings to the body, making it soft and smooth. Just before my shampoo every week, I rub olive oil into my scalp. I clean my face with a very greasy cold cream I have discovered an eye lotion which may be used four or five times a day to freshen the eyes. I buy ten cents worth of camomile flowers and put them in boiling water and apply this lotion to my eyes whenever they feel tired."

THE SUMMER BABY.

Eyen baby, say the infant savants, should have from 20 to 22 hours sleep a day at first month of life, and at least 16 hours until it is a year old. A clothes basket with blankets and cotton pad makes a good baby's bed.

FISH OMELET.

Fish Omelet varies the usual omelet, and is a thrifty way to use left-over fish in an appetizing manner. Free from bones and skin any left-over fish and flake it fine. Beat the yolks of six eggs, adding a little salt and pepper and tablespoon of cream or canned milk. Beat egg whites well and fold in. Melt tablespoon of butter in the omelet pan and cook omelet in usual way. When ready to fold, add the fish, which should have been put into a little light cream sauce and heated.

TABLE SERVICE.

The proper order for silverware upon the table laid for the formal dinner, is all knives and spoons at the right of the plate, all forks at the left. The only exception is the oyster fork which is laid to the right. Silver is laid in order of its use starting from the outside and working in towards the edge. Thus, the oyster fork would precede the soup spoon if the oyster course were served. Dessert silver is not laid on the table, but is brought in when this course is served.

The French Two-Piece Frock Takes a New Turn

"Left your blouse to show your shirred skirt, for the higher line in front is new," says Paris. Then, because there are two sides to every question, turn to the back and note the half-back belt ending in a bow. This is the type of frock habilée that the French dressmakers use for taffeta, with a plastron front of eyelet embroidery edged with lace. Finely checked taffeta for the straight skirt and bosom front and plain taffeta for the blouse is very smart especially in yellow and navy, cherry red and white, leaf green and ivory. The style is quite soft enough for the new coin-spotted silks, printed silks or cotton voiles and flowered Georgettes.

The Examiner does not sell these patterns.

THE SILVER FILLING.

You are doubtless familiar with this term if you have been to the dentist at all: and if you will consult a mirror to examine your mouth, you will quite probably find one or several of these dark fillings in the posterior teeth.

Now, those are what your dentist would call silver amalgam fillings—amalgam, because they are an alloy containing mercury.

Then are they silver? To a large extent, yes—from about fifty to seventy percent of their composition, apart from the mercury content, being metallic silver.

As perhaps you know, silver is the whitest of all metals, yet in the mouth, the filling is dark or sometimes black. This discoloration is, for the most part, due to the action of sulphuretted hydrogen which is formed in the mouth in minute quantities from time to time and which, acting on the silver content, forms a black silver sulphide. This, entering into the tubular structure of the dentine, discolors tooth tissue and it is for this reason and also because the fillings themselves darken, that your dentist does not insert them in conspicuous areas.

Due to its ease of manipulation and also on account of its comparative inexpensiveness, the silver amalgam filling is being inserted in by far the greater proportion of cavities that receive attention.

But it should on no account be regarded as a 'cheap' filling, since it demands, if it is to be serviceable, as thorough cavity preparation, and as careful manipulation in insertion, as does the more expensive gold filling.

THE BEGINNING OF FRIENDSHIP.

"Pardon me, Miss Dean," said Doctor Flint in an oily voice as the car stopped beside him. "If I had known you were going to see Mr. Robinson this evening I would not have sent for you."

"But I am not going to see Mr. Robinson this evening," I indignantly repudiated, completely forgetting that the car, the chauffeur, the footman, and the direction in which I was going seemed the best possible proof that I was lying.

Doctor Flint, however, said nothing. Instead he threw a very comprehensive glance over the car and smiled.

I could have killed him without the slightest compunction as again he begged my pardon in the most insinuating tone.

With a significant glance at the men on the front seat, he said "You will pardon me for stopping you, Miss Dean, but I knew you were anxious to have me analyze that medicine you told Mr. Robinson about this afternoon. Thinking when I saw you passing that you might possibly have the bottle in your bag I impulsively called to you, for I know how J. D. hates to have one of his salespeople leave their counter during business hours. Will you give it to me, please?"

If Doctor Flint thought he could put that over on Judy Dean he was quite mistaken. I saw the whole scheme. Robinson told him he must get that bottle at any cost. He had razzed the doctor good and plenty for letting me take it away and had probably told him he must get it back or lose his job. I hoped he would.

I looked at the man as insolently as possible and said as insincerely as I could, for I wanted him to know I was lying.

"Oh, I am so sorry. You know I dropped that bottle on the floor under my counter soon after luncheon. I was so busy till the store closed that I did not pick it up."

The doctor turned abruptly without even bidding me good-bye. The chauffeur started the car quickly. I could almost feel from the set of his shoulders that he was grinning. He didn't know just exactly what the joke was, but whatever it was he saw that I had turned the tables upon the doctor.

With a flourish we passed up the broad driveway and stopped in front of the dignified doorway.

Little did I know as I greeted Joan Meredith in the stately hall that I would always remember this meeting and in the years to come Joan Meredith's life and mine would be strangely intermingled.

New Electric Lights Make Players Look Better Unpainted.

The art of theatrical make-up, long an essential of the stage, may soon pass into a decline. New electric lights, getting their first practical application just now in Henry IV in a New York theatre, flood the stage with so bright and true a simulation of sunshine that actors and actresses look their best au naturel. Color values are so true that lip stick, blue-black brow pencils and other tools of the theatrical beauty trade are unnecessary—unless the actor needs them to correct certain natural blemishes. The new type lamps give as much light as before without harsh shadows and with no increased consumption of electric current. A novel reflector of pure sheet aluminum aids greatly. It reflects 94 per cent as much light as would a perfect mirror. Special light filters produce various colors. Even moonlight can be successfully imitated.

NEWEST LINE.

The bloused back is one of the important details of the mode both in rocks and in coats.

One of the toughest jobs in the world is to take a photo of a lady and make her look beautiful and also natural.

Well for that job special cameras have been made which can tell lies that look like the truth, but outdoor pictures are another thing altogether. Outdoor cameras are made so that they will capture and betray everything. When a bird is wound into the film we want every feather to show so that everyone will know it.

Even with this kind of a movie machine some birds are so well protected that they have so far defied nearly all effort to get them on the screen.

The Chimney Swifts are among the laugh jobs of the movies.

You see they are black and they live in dark places. It is just as though you were to dress all in black, paint your face black, and then stand in a dark room, with black walls and soot all over the place, and ask a movie man to take a film of you and show it on the screen the next day. All the audience would see would be a black square with some equally black smudges moving around in it.

The Chimney Swift might be successfully run into a movie machine if some kind hearted householder would permit me to tear off half the chimney so that sunlight would show up the nest, but up to date I have had to be content with climbing the roof and looking down in the pretty little shelf of sticks, with its cluster of white eggs.

The Swift is called Chimney Swallow at times, although it is not a swallow at all. However it and the Swallows eat the same food, flies caught on the wing, and it just goes to show that nature will develop two entirely different birds along similar lines.

The Swift originally lived in caves and in huge hollow tree trunks, and it has barbs or spikes in the ends of the tail feathers similar to the Woodpeckers, so that it may catch them in the wall and sit on its tail, as it hangs on. Its nest is made of tiny sticks, snapped off dead twig ends in flight as it passes, and these are gummed with saliva which dries into a glue. Nobody knows where the Swifts spend the winter. Truly we may say we are in the dark.

There is an unfailing smartness about the costume which combines a dark jacket with a lighter colored skirt. This type of suit was seen in the Spring, often sponsoring a black jacket with a black and white checked skirt.

A later version for warm weather wear is seen in the suit above, which shows a smart semi-fitted jacket over a skirt of natural kasha, horizontally striped in red and blue, with wider lines of black.

ICE CREAM FOR INVALIDS AND CHILDREN.

With invalids, ice cream is often one of the first foods desired, and it is given in very small quantities. The frozen custard or French vanilla is usually preferred as being a little richer and more nourishing. The cream is almost as nourishing as steak and more readily digested. In illness, the cream not only furnishes nutriment but additional liquid to quench thirst. If the calories of diet are measured, a heaping tablespoonful of ice cream is one hundred calories. The nutritive value of the ingredients of the cream are the same as if served without freezing.

Water ices are frequently used in fever cases where the ice cream is considered too rich. Manufactured creams vary in quality, due to the ingredients and binders used. Some makers, instead of using cream or full milk, use condensed milk, condensed skimmed milk and certain prepared fats. Starch, flour, eggs and rennet are used, as are gelatin, gum tragacanth and powders that are made for the purpose. None of the binders are harmful products, and they are a necessity to hold up a cream that has to be shipped and handled from producer to consumer. A good way to test the quality of the ice cream you are buying is to let a little melt in a saucer and get warm, then taste it and see what its tastes like. If thin and watery, it is not being made of cream or full milk, and a fatty substance has been added to take the place of the fat in full milk. If it is rich and custard-like in texture and flavor, it is probably made of the full milk.

As long as the cream is carefully and scientifically made, kept and sold from clean freezers, it is generally a good and wholesome product. Dealers bidding for first-class trade are fast realizing that pure materials, the best flavorings and most perfect binders pay in the end. If they use their name freely in making the product known, they must stand behind it if it is to succeed. The public cannot be fooled as easily as in the old days. Pure food is the demand and it is wise to heed the cry.

Ice cream is always a nursery demand, and one of the few allowed sweets in many instances—a wholesome delectable dainty whose popularity is assured as long as the goods come up to the required standard of purity. The best ingredients do not necessarily mean the richest, but they do mean the purest of their kind. Even water should be filtered before it is used to thin the milk.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

DOTTY VISITS A QUEER BUTCHER SHOP.

"Hum," Dotty mused as the bird she had been watching settled on a bush right near her, "what kind of a hawk are you anyway?"

"I'd like to know what kind of a hawk I am, too," chirped the bird.

Dotty moved closer so she could get a good look at the feathered fellow.

He was just about the size of a robin, with a slate-grey colored black and a light grey vest. His wings and tail were black-edged and tipped with white. Across his eyes and bill through his throat ran a black band. His bill was hooked which made him look so much like a hawk.

"I thought you were a hawk because you have a bill like Mr. Hawk," continued Dotty.

"Yes, I have a bill like his," chuckled the bird, "but I'm not a hawk. I'm Billy Shrike, if you please. The butcher-bird, so some folks call me."

"Goodness! What a horrid name," cried Dotty, "I hope you're not mean enough to deserve the title."

"Well, I don't think I'm really mean," agreed Mr. Shrike, "but I guess the name suits me all right. You see it's this way, I kill my prey to eat. I'll admit sometimes I kill more than I can eat at one meal, then I save it for a rainy day. One never knows how soon a storm will come up and keep you in your house. Then what would I do if my cupboard was bare?"

"Nothing so bad about that," laughed Dotty, "if you only kill to satisfy your hunger. Where do you live, Mr. Billy Shrike?"

"Over in the thorn tree," replied Mr. Shrike, pointing to a low tree studded with sharp thorns. "Come on over and see my home."

Dotty had never seen a butcher-bird's home, so she trotted after the little bird.

It was a queer place he pointed out to Dotty. Here and there on the thorns of the tree hung grasshoppers, crickets, beetles, lizards and a little mouse.

"I'm Not a Hawk."

"Why, the very idea!" Dotty exclaimed. She could hardly believe her eyes. "No wonder they call you the butcher-bird. Why ——"

"Just a second," chuckled Mr. Shrike. "Don't misjudge me. I'm one of the birds who kill only for eating purposes. If you only knew it, I'm one of the best friends the farmer has. I destroy more insects than a good many of the feathered folks. Some of my relatives go off into the thickets and mock other birds until they follow them, thinking it's their mate. Then my relatives kill them. That's one thing I never do. I sit on a high place, spot my victim and pounce down on him. You see, to let the meat hang up over night makes it lovely and tender."

"Well, I'm glad you're not really wicked, Mr. Shrike," laughed Dotty, and bidding the butcher good-bye, Dotty hurried home to tell her Mama about the queer butcher-shop she had visited

CANDY SHOPPING.

Jimmy gets a nickel, and he hikes down to the store. Doesn't even wonder what he's gonna spend it for. Know it's gonna buy him a lot of trash and stuff. Things he'll get a lot of will be plenty good enough.

Hangs around the counter, lookin' over candy trays. You can see a twinkle in the little fella's gaze. Think of it! A nickel—and the whole thing can be spent. Asks a heap of questions, like, "How many fer a cent?"

Now he's sorta stoopin' with his nose against the glass, payin' no attention to the other folks who pass. Just inside the counter are the best things he can find. Jimmy's tryin' mighty hard at makin' up his mind.

Well—the buying's over and the store man sighs relief. Waitin' on the little folk is just a lot of grief. Still, the patient store man, as he takes things from the shelf, seems to smile right through it. He was once a kid himself.

ADVENTURES of the TWINS
by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

Number Seventeen.— THE PINK TICKETS GO HOME.

"So you want me to help to find your china elephant and toy clown!" said the Dream-Maker Man to the Twins. "Are you sure they came to the moon?"

"Yes, sir," said Nancy. "They came on a moonbeam. The Fairy Queen saw them and told us."

"How did you find my house on Misty Hill?" asked the Dream-Maker Man thoughtfully.

"Someone in Shut-Eye Town gave us two pink tickets," said Nick. "And they have been awfully nice about taking us places."

"How?" asked the Dream-Maker Man curiously.

"They made themselves into tracks," answered Nick. "Then we rode along in a cute little car."

At this the two pink tickets stretched themselves out of the Twins' pockets and looked around with their pink eyes. "It says on us that we have to return," said the tickets. "If you don't need us any more we'll be going now. The date stamped on us says we are no good after tomorrow."

"You may go then," said the Dream-Maker Man. "I'll look after these two young people now."

"Good-bye," said the tickets. And jumping out of their pockets the pink tickets rolled themselves into hoops and started down the hill. That was the last the Twins saw of them.

"Now, then," said the Dream-Maker Man, "tell me what your china elephant was like. Did he come from China or was he made of china, or what?"

"He was made of china," said Nancy quickly. "He was a door-stop in our room and he had pink roses painted all over him. The other toys all made fun of him, all except the clown, and when he ran off the clown went with him. I guess he was lonesome. That's why he ran off."

"An elephant with pink roses all over him!" exclaimed the Dream-Maker Man. "That certainly is odd! I have sent many kinds of dreams to people on the earth about fishes that walked and cows that flew and monkeys on wheels and butter flies that could sing, but never, never, never did I hear of elephants with roses on them. Poor things! No wonder he ran away!"

At this the Dream-Maker Man clapped his hands three times and a very queer servant appeared.

This person had a bill like a bird, ears like a rabbit, a buttoned shoe on one foot, a laced shoe on the other foot, and he kept his hands in a muff.

"Ab wist grouch a tor check," said the Dream-Maker Man.

"Nip sut rant a boo choo," said the queer servant, making a bow and disappearing.

"That's moon language," explained the Dream-Maker Man. "And that's Blink, one of the moon people. He's a very good cook and makes fudge to suit the queen's taste. He keeps his hands in a muff so they will stay clean. He's gone now to bring us something to eat. You must be hungry after so long a journey; and as we have another long journey ahead, I thought it would be better to have some sandwiches and cakes and lemonade."

"I'm hungry, thank you," said Nick politely.

"So am I," said Nancy.

At that the door opened and in came Blink with the lunch.

YOUR HEALTH
By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

To talk about your operation is just as natural as to breathe. It is human, indeed, to date everything to some appealing past experience. "When I was in the Legislature," "when I was a Senator," "when I was President of the Federation"—how natural it is to make frequent reference to that unusual period!

To one unfamiliar with the smell of an anaesthetic, the quiet efficiency of the hospital, and the dread of what may happen as the result of the surgery, produce such emotions it is no wonder the experience remains fresh in mind. Because of these facts it is expected you will often speak of your operation.

Unfortunately, there is a further reason why you may be reminded of your operation. There may be tenderness, dragging and actual pain in the operated region.

A friend of mine has had recently a radical abdominal operation. The other day I enquired how he felt. "Not well at all," he replied.

"My side hurts a lot."

It isn't remarkable that this should be the case. When the abdominal wall has been cut through and a lot of the insides have been taken out, it requires time for Nature to readjust the parts and get them accustomed to their new relationship.

If you break your leg or dislocate your shoulder, it takes months for the torn and damaged tissues to lose their tenderness. There will be soreness on pressure for a long, long time. After any sort of operation there will be sensitive spots which are all the time getting hit, just as a sore thumb is.

When you bend or twist or turn or lift or get into any position involving the operated part you are sure to be reminded of your operation.

Then when you meet a friend and talk with him it may well be he, too, has had an operation. Perhaps his old wound is bothering him. That makes him talk about his operation, and, of course, you are reminded at once of yours. Consequently operations are a common subject of conversation.

It should be impressed on everybody who has had surgical treatment that it takes a long time to get well. It is wise to be careful about overwork, and to avoid fatigue and carelessness in exercising care of the body. Fresh air, good food, abundant sleep and happy surroundings—everything to encourage health, good blood and free circulation will help to make the recovery complete. An abundance of cleansing blood is the great factor in bringing about complete recovery.

It is all right to talk about your operation if you want to, but don't forget it isn't as interesting to other folks as it is to you. Your friends are glad you came through it all right, but, frankly, they are not likely to care a rap about hearing the details—certainly not more than once.

ABE MITCHELL FOUR UP ON HAGEN AT CLOSE OF FIRST DAY'S PLAY IN WORLD CHAMPIONSHIP MATCH

Largest Stake Money in History of Golf is Up on Game.

FINE SPORTSMANSHIP.

Each of Contestants Shows Desire To Maintain Golf Ideals.

VIRGINIA WATER, Suffolk, June 19 (Canadian Press).—Abe Mitchell, ace of British golf pros., was four up on Walter Hagen, United States star, when they had finished the first day's play of their long-heralded seventy-two hole match for the unoffcial world's championship match play. The largest stake money in the history of golf—500 pounds a side and other wagers are up on the match.

The United States star, who spent Thursday night on a train from the north of England, arrived here debonair as usual and the picture of sartorical perfection. He was garbed in a white sweater with a delicate edging, mauve plus fours and white shoes. Mitchell's golfing clothes were a drab gray but his playing made up for the lack of "the clothes."

The morning round found Hagen three down to Mitchell. Although the British player was powerful through the fairways, he was a little shakey on the green, and if he had taken all the opportunities that Hagen offered, he would have the American six-down instead. The morning cards were as follows:

Out—
Hagen . . . . . .544444553—38
Mitchell . . . . . .544445434—37
In—
Hagen . . . . . .534454545—39—77
Michell . . . . . .453444435—36—73

Mitchell started the afternoon round like a streak by holing out long putts on the nineteenth and twenty-first for threes, increasing his lead to five. Hagen, however, brought this down to four at the twenty-eighth, where Mitchell pulled his drive into the rough.

Hagen took another hole at the thirty-second, where Mitchell approached poorly, but went four down again at the thirty-sixth when his own second shot lodged in a water-logged bunker, giving him a six.

The two professionals will finish the match to-day on the St. George's Hill course at Weybridge.

The afternoon cards were as follows:

Out—
Hagen . . . . . .444434435—35
Mitchell . . . . . .343454524—34
In—
Mitchell . . . . . .543444435—36—70

Two incidents of good sportsmanship occurred on the home green. Mitchell played a bad drive which finished in a cart rut from which the local rule allowed him to lift and drop his ball. Although the referee told the British star that he might move the ball without penalty Mitchell answered, "I am not sure this is a cart rut and would rather play it."

Hagen's second shot over-ran the green on the same hole and disappeared in a watery bunker. He went after it twice with his niblick, and was successful the second time. After failing to sink his own two-yard putt, he smiled and conceded Mitchell a two-foot putt for the hole.

ANOTHER FINE GAME OF SOFTBALL

Hope Ladies Play C. G. E. Ladies Here Wednesday Next.

After the snappy game of Ladies' Softball between anforth and the C. G. E., Peterboro, a short while ago, the demand for another game was so insistent that Manager O'Brien of the C. G. E. Team arranged for the appearance here on Wednesday, next, the 23rd, of the Hope Ladies' Softball Team, who have an enviable record in the province.

In 1922 they won the Monarch Park Girls' League championship; in 1924 they were Danforth League champions, and played off in the finals for the city; in 1925 they were Danforth League champions, city champions, and played off with Danforth for the Dominion championship, the latter team just nosing them out.

On the team that will visit Peterboro are the following:

Miss Arvilla "Billy" Gilding, record holder and woman champion swimmer in Canada, who shares the twirling dutieh.

Miss Gladys Giles playing first base in the absence of Miss Olive Wilton, who is at present nursing a dislocated hip. Miss Giles is a terrific hitter.

Miss Mabel Ferris, third base and a good hitter.

Miss Marge Ormerod, catcher, who is leading the Danforth League in hitting at present.

Miss Eileen "Mac" McArthur, second base girl, who together with Doris Robinson at short stop, engineers many double play.

Miss Aileen "Tommy" Thomas, left fielder, and a participant in everc track meet, held in and around the Province and a verf fast fielder.

Miss Nellie Steele, crack right fielder, who bats left handed as does Miss Dolif Todd, who also plays the outfield.

The game on Wednesday next, which is called for six o'clock, should prove just as great an attraction as the game here with Danforth, and a record crowd is anticipated.

Wild Sixth Inning

DETROIT, Mich., June 19 (Canadian Press) — A wild sixth-inning marked by an argument between Manager Cobb and Umpire Rowland and by the scoring of 10 runs by the Athletics, featured today's 12 to 2 victory of Philadelphia over Detroit. The half inning in which the excitement occurred required 40 minutes to play, part of which was taken up by the dispute which ended in Cobb being chased from the field. It started over a decision at first base. The Athletics made eight hits in this inning, two men walked and there was an error by Blue which ran the count up. Every Athletic scored in the sixth. WIN FOR KEENE TIES UP SERIES

Lusty Batting and Fast Fielding Defeats Cogs By 7 To 2 Score.

CITY SERIES STARTS.

Recovering from their lapses of last Tuesday night at Exhibition Park, Keene, playing at home last evening, batted and fielded their way to a 7 to 2 victory over Cognawagas and are again in the running for first half honors of the East Peterborough League. The Keene swatsmiths opened strong against Harvey Smith's pitching and continued the attack throughout the contest. The homesters also supported Max Robertson, who again came through with a fine brand of twirling, the fielding plays stopping the Cogs in their desperate efforts to win.

Cognawagas have another hard game to-morrow when they play in Curve Lake. The Indians are bad medicine on their home playgrounds and they will take extreme pleasure in defeating the invaders. A win for Curve Lake will give Keene the first half.

Raybestos will likely start Carl Wood against Crescents in the opening of the city series at Exhibition Park next Tuesday evening. Wood will have Ab. Delahaye on the receiving end. Crescents will start Casey Masterson, with Vincent Rishea or Rogers behind the bat. Don. Cameron, who was with Lew LeBarr's O.B.A.A. Junior champions, has signed with Raybestos, and will likely be seen at short, while Johnny Marchen, another former Lakeview performer, is down for second base for Crescents.

UNITED STATES WOMEN REGAIN INTERNATIONAL TENNIS TROPHY AFTER SERIES OF HARD CONTESTS

American Ladies Won Four Matches To Three of English Opponents.

FIRST SINCE 1923.

Wightmen Cup Has Been Located in Great Britain For Three Years.

EASTBOURNE, England, June 19 (Canadian Press)—Playing brilliant tennis on their return to the turf courts, after their hard courts experience in France, Vincent Richards and Howard Kinsey, the United States stars, had a comparatively easy time today in taking two singles matches of the International Lawn Tennis Tournament.

Richards defeated H. W. Austin of Cambridge, 6-2, 6-1, 6-1. Kinsey took the measure of O.G.N. Turnbull, who has represented England in Davis Cup competition, by the score of 6-2, 1-6, 6-3, 6-3.

Thus the United tates had an auspicious start in the two-day play against a team of four British players. The matches, staged at picturesque Devonshire Park, are a sort of prelude to the Wimbledon Championships, on which the eyes of the tennis world will be focused next week. To win the Eastbourne tournament, the United States now must take only the doubles tomorrow, or one of the two remaining singles matches.

Interest centred in the first international appearance of Austin, who has been making a sensation with his fine work on English courts. Richards had little trouble in defeating the young Cambridge player in straight sets and only in the first set did Austin make much of a showing but this is not saying that a number of brilliant shots did not come off his racquet. In many ways his game revealed great promise.

Kinsey had to fight for his victory, for the veteran Turnbull was stubbornly in the battle every moment. After the second set which the English player won, 6-1, it looked for a time as though he might gain the victory, but Kinsey had greater staying powers, greater brilliancy and with daring chances won the next two sets and the match.

CINCINNATI WIN TEDIOUS GAME

CHICAGO FOURTH.

PHILADELPHIA, June 19 (Canadian Press) — Cincinnati retained the lead over the Pittsburgh Pirates today by trouncing the Phillies in a long tedious game, 13 to 5. The wildness of the Phil's pitchers, who issued ten bases on balls, helped the Reds. Score:

Philadelphia . .011 110 001— 5 10 2

BROOKLYN, N.Y., June 19 (Canadian Press)—The Chicago Cubs gained undisputed possession of fourth place today by defeating the Robins, 6 to 2, in the second game of their series. Score:

NEW YORK, N.Y., June 19 (Canadian Press) — Pittsburgh stopped New York's rush here today defeating the Giants 8 to 3. It was the eighth successive Friday game lost by the Giants.

Helen Wills Will Play Tennis Games At Wimbledon

LONDON, June 19 (Canadian Press) Announcement was made last night by the secretary of the All-England Lawn Tennis Club that a message had been received from Miss Helen Wills, the United States tennis champion, stating that she would play in the women's singles of the Wimbledon championship.

UNITED STATES' TENNNIS STARS HAD FINE START

Won Two Singles Matches Against Crack English Players.

DEVONSHIRE PARK.

Games Are Prelude To Wimbledon Championships Next Week.

WIMBLEDON, England, June 19 (Canadian Press).—Tennis history was written here yesterday afternoon when the quartette of United States women racquet stars regained the Wightman Cup, emblematic of team supremacy in women's tennis. They took the cup from their English cousins but only after one of the closest international tennis contests on record.

The United States won four matches to three, but the last and deciding match, doubles, was a close affair, and it would have been a different story if the Yankee players, Miss Mary K. Browne, captain, and Miss Elizabeth Ryan, had not been able to come through with the winning games when, in the deciding third set the score was 4-all. They defeated Mrs. Kitty McKane Godfree and Miss Evelyn Colyer, 3-6, 6-2, 6-4.

The trophy thus will go to the United States for the first time since 1923, when it was established. At that time it was won by the United States, seven matches to nothing, at Forest Hills. For two years, the United States tried unsuccessfully to take it, Great Britain winning six matches to one at Wimbledon in 1924, and again at Forest Hills, last year, with a score of four matches to three.

At the end of the first day's play Thursday, the British and United States teams each had a victory in the singles. Yesterday Miss Joan Fry of England defeated Miss Browne, 3-6, 6-0, 6-4, and Mrs. Godfree defeated Miss Elizabeth Ryan, 6-1, 5-7, 6-4, giving the British team two more matches, for a total of three. The Americans had three victories yesterday, for a total of four. Mrs. Marion Z. Jessup, United States, defeated Mrs. D. C. Shepherd-Baron, 6-1, 5-7, 6-4; Mrs. Jessup and Miss Eleanor Goss defeated the British pair, Mrs. Lambert Chambers and Mrs. Shepherd-Baron, 6-4, 6-2, and the Misses Browne and Ryan defeated Mrs. Godfree and Miss Colyer.

The final doubles match was one of the most thrilling ever witnessed at Wimbledon. With the score three matches all, Miss Ryan and Miss Browne went out to do or die against the formidable Mrs. Godfree and Miss Colyer. The latter was making her first appearance of the day and consequently was in fine form, while the others were fatigued with their previous strenuous matches.

The United States lost the first set, 3-6, due largely to Miss Colyer's hard service. But Miss Ryan and Miss Browne fought back, the former brilliantly, but at times ineffectually and the captain playing as cool, steady game in tight moments. The second set went to the United States, 6-2; then came the deciding play.

For eight games it was nip and tuck, with the score standing 4-all. At this juncture the umpire called a fault on the Americans, although all the players considered the shot good. The English women missed the next shot, of course, to give the Americans an even break. There were times in the course of the next two games, when many persons in the stands held their breath, but the Americans in a final spurt, took the next two games and the match and the coveted cup was won.

QUICK CHANGE ACT BY NEW YORK HALL

Madison Square Garden Can Be Easily Changed Overnight.

Converting a huge indoor skating rink into a music hall in three hours without benefit of magic is a task that actually can be performed nowadays in the country's huge halls and is done frequently in the new Madison Square Garden in New York. The great public auditoriums such as those in Cleveland and San Francisco used to see armies of sweating men laboring whole nights to remove the paraphernalia of one kind of entertainment and install that of another in time for a formal opening the next morning, but today the hubbub and perspiration is about all expunged from such an undertaking. Silent little electric battery trucks and tractors are responsible.

In Madison Square Garden, a large area of the great floor is equipped with refrigeration pipes imbedded under the surface. The rink is kept frozen until the last minute of skating. Then hot brine is pumped into the pipes. The layer of ice softens. A little battery truck much like those commonly seen moving baggage on railway station platforms appears. With a light-weight plow it breaks up the ice. Another battery truck propels a wide scoop of sheet steel across the floor sweeping the cakes swiftly down a hole beneath which an automobile truck stands. The ice is hauled to the river and dumped. In less than two hours the floor is clear and dry.

The battery trucks then haul into the arena platforms each loaded with 32 chairs. These are slid into place on iron frames that have been carried in, and before the end of the third hour of work the immense hall has been converted. It is ready for the orchestra and the audience.

"It used to take 40 men eight hours to do that job," says J. J. McNally, superintendent of the Garden. "Now we have no trouble at all doing it in three hours. That saves some money and five hours—five hours that are appreciated on a good many occasions, too, believe me.

Let us consider the reason of the case. For nothing is law that is not reason.—Powell.

Mister Sporting Editor:

The winning streak of Mister Johnston's Petes stopped at 1 game, the lads losing a nice battle to Mister Gerow and his men at Belleville Wed. Well, you can't expect to win 'em all, although a coupla plays going the other way would of meant another game in the Petes' bat bag. The boys' work on the base paths was 1 big reason why they didn't win. The trouble is, the youngsters don't run with no judgment and the oldsters with no speed, and there you are. However, the Wed. game was nothing to be ashamed of. Mister Johnston's crew battled all the way, and both crews played baseball worthy of the Central loop, which it ain't always been possible to say of this year's games. The real battle in the league right now is between Belleville and Peterboro, as the team which finishes second has the right to play the Ponies in the league playoff. Of course, Joe Daley's men ain't out of the woods yet by a long way and they will find every game from now on a bitter fight, for the Ponies is high batting so much that both Belleville and the Petes would rather beat 'em than win the Ontario title.

The Ponies is a smart ball club. I ain't giving you no argument about that, but their actions, or rather the actions of the bunch that is handling them, is making them about as popular round the Central loop as cadet training is with Miss Agnes MacPhail. Take the way they been acting about the schedule. The original arrangement called for the Ponies to play in Peterboro on Dominion Day morning. Right away Mister Joe Daley raised a howl of anguish. His Ponies couldn't make Peterboro for the holiday a.m., and so Belleville sportingly agreed to switch the schedule, them coming here for the holiday and the Ponies Sat. And then what does Kingston do but arrange a exhibition game for Sat. and decline to come to Peterboro. Now they is to be ordered to fill the holiday date here, even if it means coming to Peterboro the day before, and Mister Joe Daley has to take the elastic off the bank roll to pay for hotel accommodation. The Ponies gotta to be told plain that their first duty is to the Central League, and if they choose to throw down the organization they might as well be threw out.

THE HOCKEY KNOCKOUT.

The big sensation this week, Mister Sporting Editor, has been the bump the O.H.A. give the travelling hockey players. Of course, the hockey moguls said they would use the big stick, but a lotta players and quite a few teams thought they was bluffing. They know now, and you can hear the shrieks of dismay from Western Ontario even yet. Some of the Big Six outfits had got them a bunch of new stars, and the action of the O.H.A. Executive has left them in a mess. Now they're talking a minor professional league, which may turn out to be the bunk if they ever get it started.

The O.H.A. has done the rihgt thing, but they gotta watch the Toronto end of the situation. If it happened that a all-star team developed in Toronto while the outsiders was all curbed by the O.H.A., they'd be a real storm in the hinterland. Osgoode Hall is pulling outa the senior series. Suppose the best of the lawyers throw themselves in with the Parkdalers and 3 or 4 of the birds which is graduating from Varsity joins the same mob, what is the answer? Well, a team consisting of Mister Cameron, Mister Taylor, Mister Roger Plaxton and Mister Heffernan of Osgoode, Mister Mose Lount and Mister Harry Watson of Parkdale and Mister Porter, Mister Hughey Plaxton and Mister Trottier of Varsity would be a nice mouthful with most of the Provincial teams, which is without reinforcements. Down this way the Petes is not worrying, because all of last year's champs is here, save Mister Cox, and Mister Kenneth Kane, a smart forward, has been added to the flock.

Well, Mac, they ain't nothing more I gotta tell you, so I'll sign off now.

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

GEORGE DUNCAN—FAVORITE IRONS.

My mid-iron is one of my favorites—15 years old and still doing good work, although it has a piece of metal soldered on the back through the weight of the head having been worn down by the diligent cleaning operations of caddies with emery cloth. Never, by the way, let caddies clean your pet irons with new emery cloth; make them use a very old piece if they must have that particular material for their polishing. The mid-iron needs to be a little stiffer in the shaft, and still more upright.

Every amateur ought to have a mashie-niblick. It is not far from being the most valuable club in the bag. And yet you see the majority of club golfers approaching with mashies, while professionals are using mashie-niblicks for the same purpose.

Herein lies a good deal of the explanation as to why the former fail very oft to make the ball stop on keen greens while professionals succeed in doing so. The Americans have even more loft on their mashie-niblicks than we do.

It was this, rather than the ribbing that they had on the faces, which enabled them to stop where they pitched.

SECRETS of STARS on INSIDE BASEBALL

as told to BILLY EVANS

BY GROVER ALEXANDER.

The greatest mistake any pitcher can make is to hurry his spring training. Take your time in the spring. If you have the proper amount of stuff you need have no fear for your job.

Trying to quickly condition the arm often proves a costly mistake. The arm gets sore and the pitcher is let go before he really has a chance to prove his worth.

A great many pitchers have been ruined in the spring. In a desire to impress their manager they force themselves. This is particularly true of the recruits. It works the reverse in most cases.

As the pitcher seeks to gradually work the arm into condition in the spring, so he must save it during the season, after he has gotten it into tip-top shape.

The wise pitcher cares nothing about strikeouts. However I have no doubt but that early in the career of every pitcher a good ly number of strikeouts in a game always had a strong appeal. I had a few such years but soon got wise to myself and put aside the foolish thought that the pitcher must try to strike out every man that faces him.

Just as soon as I learned the lesson that there were eight others in the field, all willing, yes, anxious, to help retire the batters, I became a better and more successful pitcher.

Don't put all your stuff on every ball pitched. Always try to have something in reserve for the pinch. "Bearing down" on every ball takes much out of a pitcher and shortens his career.

Breeze along in easy style as long as the bases are empty. When they get clogged, when a base hit means the ball game, call on the stuff you should have in reserve.

Work your hardest in the pinches only.

FIREMEN VICTORS HOMERIC STRUGGLE

Win Over De Laval Puts Fire Fighters in Commanding Position.

Last night in one of the greatest struggles of the season the Firemen defeated the De Laval team 4-3 at Central Park in the Men's Softball League. This win gives the Firemen a firm grip on the leadership of "B" group. In the first innings each team scored a run and then there was no other scoring until the eighth inning, when the Firemen scored two and the De Laval one, each scored in the last frame. The teams were well matched, the Firemen getting a little the better of the breaks, having two men left on bases to eight by the other team. Dunkerley, for the Firemen, seemed to have the stuff in the pinches, and more than once with two men on bases he fanned the batter. Both teams gave their pitchers wonderful support in the field, and as a result very few errors were made. Dunkerley walked two men and Kennedy one. Pinch hitters were used to pull the game out of the fire, but to no use as they fanned.

The teams:

Firemen—Weese, 2b; Carr, ss; Delahaye, c; Lewis, 3b; Crary, lf; Gimblett, 1b; McNeely, rf; *Starr, cf; Dunkerley, p; *Chief Gimblett replaced Starr in the 8th.

DR. J. I. ROBINSON MAKES RECORD FISH CATCH.

To Dr. John I. Robinson, 596 Watchung Road, Bound Brook, N. J., U.S.A., a guest at Wab-Kon Camp Temagami, falls the proud honor of making the record fish catch for 1925. The story is so good we will let the Doctor tell it in his own words:

"On July 27th we set out. On the third day as we trolled near Sandy Inlet my reel suddenly began to sing and the tackle nearly went overboard. I thought I had caught on the rocks. . . but the canoe was already moving backward at a lively rate. I let the fish have his way for about half an hour. . then we got down to business.

"After what seemed a day he broke water. . . my guide's eyes bulged. His teeth began to chatter and he absolutley refused to attempt to land such a fish in a canoe. So we headed for shore. . . soon we were wading and had my fish where we could get him by his gills and heave him ashore. Then only did I realize that I had caught the king of hordes of fish in Lake Temagami. He measured 46 inches and weighed 42 pounds 2 ounces."

Fishing is but one of the vacation enjoyments in Temagami. It has everything that any vacationist could desire, including excellent hotels, cottage colonies, cabins and tents.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia., June 19.—Mrs. Martha C. Classon and her three childre have arrived here on a 10,000-mile walk in search of Mr. Classon, who disappeared seven years ago. They are returning to Omaha, Neb., having found no trace of him.

Jules Turnour, dean of the hundred clowns with the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey circus, is of that "old school" who depend upon the art of pantomime. He is coming here with the Big Show, Friday, June 25.

This season the "world's worst band" of twenty clown musicians goes marching across the rings on stilts. The smallest player walks upon sticks twelve inches high. Then the stilts range upward to those of twenty-foot "peg legs" worn by the leanest of Diggeldy Dans. But though this is a new stunt it is not to Jules' taste. He craves the old days and the old ways.

"It's a changing world of the white tops," said the veteran Joey. "It seems only yesterday that I played in a one ring show. Now we have five rings! I couldn't believe my own ears when they told me that two more had been added! Time was when a clown, a rider and the ring-master entertained the audience for full twenty minues. Now we have more than 70 bareback riders. As for forses—there are 200 in one number, each ridden by an expert horseman or horsewoman. Still, beautiful ladies in fine feathers are not the only things, even when they ride upon fine steeds. For we make the children laugh. And as long as the little ones stand by us, I guess there will be a place for an old Joey even though he has passed his seventieth milestone."

BILLY EVANS Says

Yanks Surprise.

When I looked the New York Americans over in the spring I offered the thought that the team would be just about as good as it wanted to be.

At the time the Boston Braves were trimming the Yanks with regularity in the southern exhibition games.

I had worked with New York enough to know the real possibilities of the team. A club with the batting punch of the athletes presided over by Miller Huggins is always dangerous.

Goaded by the early trimmings handed it in the spring games, also stung by the criticism heaped on the club by most of the experts, the Yanks apparently decided to prove to the world that they were some ball team.

Powerful Punch.

Just before the spring series with the Brooklyn Robins, consisting of 12 games, the Yankees started their winning ways by defeating the Cincinnati Reds, Boston Braves and Philadelphia Nationals.

Then Huggins and Company proceeded to win 12 straight games from Brooklyn.

That made 15 straight wins from four National League clubs. The Yanks had apparently decided to be a mighty good ball club.

To defeat a team as good as Brooklyn, that has showed surprising strength to date in the National League, 12 straight games, was some feat.

Most of the games were one-sided because of the terrific batting of the Yankees.

"Never saw a club with more punch at the bat," remarked Wilbert Robinson at the close of the series.

"Any club that can take liberties with my pitchers as did the Yanks is going to make plenty of trouble in the American League."

Winning Streaks.

Even the surprising spring showing of the Yankees created no great fear in American League circles. However, it has come since the opening of the season.

In the first few weeks of play the club went out and won eight straight. Then, after being temporarily stopped by three defeats at the hands of the Athletics and one by Washington, the Yanks started on their winning ways again.

At the close of their home stand against the western clubs, 11 straight wins had been hung up at the expense of Cleveland, Chicago and St. Louis.

Pennant Contenders.

Pennant-contending clubs in the American League insist the Yanks will fade when the hot weather hits the athletes, that the veteran pitching staff will fail to go the route.

I am inclined to doubt it. If the Yanks continue to hit, the club can win with mediocre pitching, and it is certain to get a far better brand than that.

As a matter of fact, it wouldn't surprise me if the Yankee pitching improved rather than deteriorated with the arrival of warm weather.

Terrific slugging, such as the Yankees have been giving their pitchers, cannot but inspire confidence in the twirling staff.

"We will get plenty of runs for you," is the college yell of the Yanks to their pitchers. And so far they have delivered.

There is no denying that the Yanks, with Ruth going at top speed, are once more the most interesting club in the majors.

Diamond Disputes Decided

By BILLY EVANS

Fly ball strikes hands of left fielder who is unable to hold the ball. He so deflects it that the center fielder backing up the play completes the catch before the ball touches the ground. When can base-runners start to advance on such a play?

In some quarters the belief exists that on such a play runners who have held their bases cannot advance until the ball strikes the hands of the player who actually completes the catch.

This is incorrect. In the play cited, runners who have properly held their bases on a fly ball that is ultimately caught can start to advance the moment the ball strikes the hands of the first player touching it, in this case the left fielder.

KIWANIANS BEAT LINDSAY JUNIORS

Blow-up in Seventh Gains Lindsay Three Runs—Score is 10-6

EXCELLENT FIELDING.

The Kiwanis Juveniles were again victorious when they defeated the Lindsay Juniors in an exhibition game held in the Lindsay exhibition grounds last night. Lefty Guiry pitched an exceptionally fine game, holding the Lindsay team well in check except in the last of the seventh when he allowed three hits, which brought in three runs for Lindsay. He had to his credit 14 strike-out and 6 hits.

The Lindsay boys showed excellent team work, especially the infielders, who showed good judgment in handling the sizzling grounders that were slashed out by the Kiwanians.

In the first LeBarr singled to first, Murray hit to Cook, and was thrown out at first; Hollingsworth singled to right and brought houe LeBarr. Hollingsworth stole second, Masterson was walked and Hollingsworth was advanced to third. Graham gained first on a grounder, which brought Hollingsworth home. Hutchinson singled to centrefield, bringing in Masterson and Graham; Gillespie struck out and Hall sent out a long fly into the mitt of the right fielder, bringing score to 4-0 in favor of the Kiwanians.

Tripp singled to Guiry and was thrown out at first. Fever gained first on a grounder into right field. Firbit hit to Murray at second and beat the throw to first, and Fever advanced to third. Cook sacrificed to Guiry, bringing in Fever and advancing Forbit to third. Campbell gained first on a grounder, bringing in the second run for Lindsay. Switzer struck out.

Lindsay gained one in the fourth and three in the last of the seventh. Kiwanis one on third, two in fifth, one in sixth and two in the eighth, bringing it to a final score of 10 to 6 in favor of the Kiwanians.

The line-ups were as follows:

Peterboro Kiwanis: LeBarr ss; Murray 2b; Hollingsworth lf; Matterson rf; Graham 1b; Hutchinson c; Hall 3b; Guiry p; Cotton and White acted as subs.

THEATRE AT THE CAPITOL

LIBERTY MAGAZINE'S $50,000 PRIZE-WINNING STORY

"Mannequin", Fannie Hurst's story of American home life in a big city in 1907 and 1926 which won Liberty Magazine's $50,000 prize for the best story to be produced as a Paramount picture, comes to the Capitol Theatre for a run of three days next Monday. Produced by James Cruze, who made "The Covered Wagon," "Beggar on Horseback" and "The Pony Express", the picture features Alice Joyce, Warner Baxter, Dolores Costello and ZaSu Pitts in the principal roles in the cast.

Alice Joyce, in the role of Selene Herrick, wife of John Herrick, rising young attorney, is given to tistic tastes and makes purchases that the husband's pocketbook cannot afford. Yet he finally yields to her desire to have a nursemaid to care for their 18 months old baby, Joan. Because she is cheap, Annie Pogani, a dull, slow-witted girl raised in a settlement house and starved for love, is hired.

Parents Separate.

When Mrs. Herrick finally purchases an expensive shawl for the baby's perambulator, it is too much for the husband. There's a quarrel. Selene announces that she is going to her mother's. He flings himself off to his club. And the child, unknown to either parent, is left alone with Annie. It dawns on the girl that she can now steal the child and have it for her very own. This she does, taking it into the slums.

So it is that the baby, now known as Orchid, grows up. When she is 14 Orchid realizes that she must get out of her sordid surroundings. She runs away to a settlement house. At 18 she has gone into the employ of a big department store and in a short time has become a mannequin in the gown department.

It is here she meets a young newspaperman Martin Innesbrook. He is infatuated with Orchid who returns his affection. She suggests a series of articles to the struggling young fellow on the subject of "Sexless Justice," by which the beautiful woman would be made pay for her crime as men are. These articles make a big hit with Innesbrook's uncle, owner of the paper.

Orchid, has also met young Terry Allen, scion of a wealthy family and man-about-town. She does not like him for a cent. One afternoon young Innesbrook comes to the establishment, finds Orchid in a particularly lovely afternoon party gown and persuades the proprietor to let him take her to a garden party at the home of the (now) Judge and Mrs. Herrick who have been reunited.

The Trial.

It is thus that Orchid, unknown to both, meets her real mother. Martin has to leave early and Terry persuades Mrs. Herrick to let him escort the girl home. Denied entrance to her home, he climbs through the window, tries to force his attention on her. A struggle ensues; he falls on her gown and a small dagger which forms part of her costume pierces his heart.

The law steps in and Orchid is arrested on a charge of murder. Her case comes before her own father. The newspaper articles which the girl inspired, written by Innesbrook, are used strongly by the prosecuting attorney in an effort to convict her. Just how the picture turns out affords a climax that has seldom if even been equalled on the screen.

Walter Woods adapted the story for the screen. Frances Agnew wrote the scenario. Walter Pidgeon, Freeman Wood and Charlot Bird complete the line-up of players.

AT THE REGENT

"THE GILDED BUTTERFLY" FEATURES ALMA RUBENS IN SOCIETY ROMANCE.

"The Gilded Butterfly," the stirring society romance produced by Fox Films, featuring Alma Rubens and Bert Lytell, which opens at the Regent Theatre Monday, measures up to every motion picture requirement.

There is continuous action from the first flash to the final fade-out. The theme of the picture is engrossing and the plot well worked out. Romance, pathos, and comedy are interwoven in a simple but convincing manner. The characterizations are real and the characters not overdrawn. The photography, direction and settings leave nothing to be desired.

And while there is admittedly a tremendous sermon preached in the picture it is done in such a manner as to add rather than detract from the entertainment values of the picture itself.

Bert Lytell is Brian Anestry. He is ambitious, clean-cut and likeable. It is his influence that makes Linda change her outlook on life and try to live within her means.

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR.

"Be not deceived, God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." Gal. 6, 7. These words, and those connected with them, go to show who are of the "little flock," and who are not. Apart from this significance the above words express a self-evident truth: "Tribulation and anguish upon every soul of man that worketh evil, but glory, honor and peace, to every man that worketh good, for there is no respect of persons with God." Romans 2: 9. Again we read: "Come now, ye rich, weep and howl, for your miseries that are coming upon you." James 5: 1. The context explains why they are asked to weep and howl. Speaking of the final day of judgment (trial), God says: "The wicked shall be turned back to (sheol), the death condition." Psalm 9: 17. They had gone down to death once, and through the ransom price paid by Jesus, were resurrected to life again, and then, having every available chance to turn from wickedness, and wilfully refusing to do so, they are returned to the death condition, which will be everlasting; there being no second resurrection. The Judge of all the earth shall do right. Genesis 18: 25. Men can by their course of action in this age make it more tolerable or otherwise in the day of judgment (trial). Matt. 10: 15. In this life men are rewarded for their actions. Luke 6:38. "Blessed are they who consider the poor; Jehovah will deliver him in the day of evil." Psalm 41: 1.—M. T. Butcher. 1d

WEDDING BELLS.

GARVEY—COX

MADOC, June 19.—A pretty wedding took place on Thursday morning at nine o'clock in the Sacred Heart Church, when Bessie, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Cox, became the bride of Patrick Garvey, son of the late Mrs. Garvey and Mr. P. J. Garvey of North Dakota. The church was beautifully decorated with white lilacs. Rev. Father O'Riordan performed the ceremony, and special music was rendered by the choir. Mrs. Fred Meraw singing the solo parts. The wedding march was played by Miss Frances O'Riordan.

The bride looked charming in a gown of blonde silk georgette with hat to match and blonde shoes and stockings. She carried pink roses and lily-of-the-valley. The bridesmaid, Miss Genevieve Garvey, sister of the groom, wore blue georgette with hat to match and gray shoes and stockings and carried pink roses. Little Miss Nan Cox, niece of the bride, made a dainty wee flower girl in pink, with a basket of carnations and lily-of-the-valley. The groomsman was Clement Cox, a brother of the bride.

After the wedding ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Cox, where a sumptuous dejeuner was served to about seventy guests. The house was a bower of flowers, the dining tables being particularly pretty with pink and white carnations and long white streamers pending from four white bells.

Later the bride and groom left for an extended trip to New York, Washington and Florida; the bride travelling in an ensemble suit of henna crepe with hat to match.

The numerous and costly gifts testified to the esteem in which the bride and groom are held. The groom's gift to the bride was a set of table silver, to the bridesmaid a beaded purse, and to the groomsman gold cuff links.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. G. Mickler and Miss Genevieve Garvey of Toronto; P. J. Garvey, Sr., of North Dakota; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Johnson, Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bennett, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Ryan of Read; Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Roach, Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. E. Trudeau, Stoco; Mrs. Doris, Mrs. and Miss Conroy of Peterboro; Mrs. Nora Sullivan of Frankford; Mr. V. S. Cox and Miss Nan of Oshawa; and Rev. Father Cullinane and Miss Cullinane of Stoco.

TOTAL TONNAGE AS NAVAL BASIS

France and Italy Propose This as Way To Compare Arms.

OTHERS DIFFER.

GENEVA, June 19 (Canadian Press).—France has proposed to the disarmament experts, meeting here, that the only way of comparing the naval armaments of various countries is by total naval tonnage This raises the question of the effect the adoption of the French thesis would have on the Washington naval agreement.

France argues that total tonnage always will be apportioned by each country in such manner as to attain the maximum yield of that tonnage from the viewpoint of the country's defensive interests Italy supports the French view, but Great Britain differs, holding that armaments should be compared by tonnage in categories of ships.

The significance of the French-Italian initiative is that both countries seek liberty to strengthenr their submarine and cruiser forces which they deem more important to their national defence than battleships.

The United States and British delegates are hoping that the total tonnage conception will not interfere with Washington accord.

'Y' GARDEN PARTY TO BE HELD TUESDAY

Spacious Ground at Home of Mr. and Mrs. Waddell To Be Used.

Special meetings have been held in connection with the coming Y. W.C.A. garden party. This annual event is to be held on Tuesday afternoon and evening, June 22nd and Mrs. R. M. Waddell has kindly invited the Association to hold the garden party there this year.

Each committee is planning to do its full share in making this social one of the prettiest and most attractive in every way. Miss E. Morrow is general convenor. Mrs. J. H. Seels and Mrs. V. Eastwood are in charge of the decorations and are arranging for an abundance of Japanese lanterns, flags, electric lights, streamers, etc., to give a festive note to the spacious garden. Mrs. R. Cormack and the social committee of the "Y" aided by many others will have charge of the high tea which will be served on the wide verandahs. The high tea has always been the big attraction at the garden parties. Tea will be served from 5 to 7.30 o'clock. Tables may be reserved for parties or families by phoning the Y.W.C.A. on Monday. Afternoon tea will also be served. Mrs. H. Beal and Mrs. R. A. Carmen are convenors of the tea tables.

Numerous booths will add to the decoration and entertainment of the guests. The candy table will be in charge of the Peter Robinson Chapter girls and Mrs. J. A. McNab, regent of the chapter, will be convenor. The Treasure Trove which has hidden many pretty novelties and toys for children and adults will be in charge of Mrs. L. J. LeClair, Mrs. J. A. Robinson, and Mrs. N. D. Drummond. Mrs. J. J. Harkness and Mrs. R. Turner, assisted by a group of Gypsy fortune tellers will provide entertainment for a small fee. Mrs. W. R. Widdess and Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner will sell ice cream and buttermilk and home-made lemonade. The car committee will be in charge of Mrs. N. D. Drummond. A musical programme and a number of pretty aesthetic dances by members of the Association dancing classes on the green lawn will add to the entertainment.

The street cars and busses will convey the crowds right to the grounds. Cooney and Jopling busses will run from George street and the Y.W.C.A. to the garden party from 5.15 o'clock to 8 and the regular Charlotte street car service runs to within a block of the grounds.

Everything will be ready for this big event and the committees are sure everyone in Peterborough will want to attend this first big garden party of the season. The weather man promises a bright warm day, but in case of the unexpected shower there will be ample accommodation on the big verandah.

Father's Day Sunday, June 20th

"Next Sunday will be Father's Day, the fourth of its kind to be held nationally both in Canada and the United States.

"The event should interest all of us—if we don't happen to forget it. It does seem queer that such an important member of the human family as Father should so often be overlooked when it comes to waxing a bit sentimental over him. For we all have had a male parent, many of us still possess him, and some of us have attained the status of a 'daddy' —unless we happen to be Mothers.

"Having proved Father's primal importance by the above elucidation, there are about a thousand other reasons why we shouldn't forget to honor the ol' man next Sunday. Anyhow, it's a fact that Mother realizes his importance. For the charming idea of roping off a day for Pop originated with a woman — a Mrs. John B. Dood of Spokane, Washington,—back in 1910. Since then Father's Day has grown steadily as a day of remembrance until finally it emerged as a full blown 'national institution' in 1923.

"Thus, next Sunday thousands of fathers will rub their eyes, gaze at the calendar and opine 'Is this Christmas, or am I dreaming?' as they look at a collection of neckties and other gifts laid before them with all due ceremony by the family. For if it has accomplished nothing else, Father's Day has promoted the necktie from Father's annual present to a semi-annual decoration.

"And there isn't a doubt in the world but that the Average Father deserves all his honor and much more. Besides being the backbone (along with Mother of the Canadian home, he is the boss breadwinner, 'bill-payer, and general 'sacrifi.. hitter' whenever his loved ones demand 'extras.' It may pinch the ol' man to provide them, but he seldom complains. He may come hoe home tired from a day's work but he seems never too tired to fix the furnace, the auto, or the kitchen stove or to wash the dishes if it's the girl's night off and Mother and Daughter want to go out.

"Now don't forget about next Sunday, as perhaps you did on the same occasion last year. Remember this—Father may remember it's the Day. Surely you wouldn't wish to hurt the ol' dear's feelings."

BOIVIN INTENDS TO ADHERE TO PROBE REPORT

Minister Will Follow Its Recommendations If House Concurs.

PLANS LEGISLATION.

Dismissals and Retirements Expected To Be Carried Out Quickly.

OTTAWA, June 19. (Canadian Press.) — "If the Customs report tabled yesterday afternoon is concurred in by the House, I intend to adhere strictly to its recommendations in so far as it is possible to do so," stated Hon. Mr. Boivin, Minister of Customs and Excise last night.

"The report has already been submitted to the officers of my department with instructions to prepare for submission to the House of any legislation that it is at all possible to have ready for presentation before the end of the present session," added Mr. Boivin.

It is understood in government circles that the recommended retirements of Commissioner Farrow with two additional officers of the Department, and the dismissal of six others, will have the first consideration of the government immediately after the close of the session.

We cannot always oblige, but we can always speak obligingly.

FOUR FATALITIES IN TW

Drowns in Deep Pool Few Miles From City During Sunday Bathe

Patrick Malone Gets Out of Depth and Is Unable To Swim—Clothes By Roadside Cause First Alarm When Found By Boys.

YOUTH WELL LIKED IN DISTRICT WORKED FOR MR. AND MRS. CASEY

Water in Pond Ranges From Two to Twelve Feet in Depth —Coroner Decides Case is Clearly One of Accidental Drowning.

Patrick Malone, 17, was drowned in a pond on the Norwood Road, a few miles from Peterborough, yesterday afternoon. He was unable to swim, and, it is thought, stepped into a hole about twelve feet deep.

Malone, who was highly thought of in the district, came to Canada about two years ago, from a Barnardo home. He was born in Ireland. Mr. and Mrs. John Casey, with whom he lived and worked, left Malone in charge yesterday afternoon when they went visiting about four o'clock. Tom Ross and Everett Jones, neighbor boys, found Malone's clothing beside the pond when they were searching for cows, and a search party was immediately formed.

The water in this pool ranges from two feet to twelve feet, and in one place shelves off rapidly. The victim of the tragedy probably got beyond his depth and drowned while there was no one around.

Fine Character.

Mrs. Casey told The Examiner today that the boy was of very fine character, and that no one could wish for a better boy. She did not learn of his death until her return at seven o'clock last night.

One brother lives in Toronto, and two sisters in England.

Coroner Dr. T. W. H. Young said an inquest will not be necessary, as it was a clear case of accidental drowning.

THIRD DRAGOONS ARE INSPECTED

General Elmsley Congratulates Officers and Men on Fine Showing.

INSPECTS CAMP.

The annual inspection of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons took place this morning at the Rifle Range, with Lt.-Col. Johnston in charge. The officers and men were congratulated by the inspecting officer, General Elmsley, who was accompanied by Lt.-Col. R. J. Brook, on the fine showing which they made. The different drill movements were carried through with a very decided precision and when it is remembered that the men have only been in camp one week, they are to be congratulated on the showing made, said the inspecting officer. After the inspection General Elmsley went to the drill camp at the Exhibition grounds, where the camp is being held and inspected the camp and the stables and expressed himself well satisfied with the horse lines and everything connected with the camp. The General left by motor at noon to-day for Kingston, where he expects to attend the annual ball being held at the Royal Military College to-night.

THE WEATHER.

June 21st: the longest day of the year, and the first day of summer. Many people have asked me if we were going to have any summer this year. It is here now. It has not, however, made a very auspicious beginning, as the temperature this morning was down to 40 degrees. Sunday morning was lower still, namely, 37 degrees. On both mornings there were traces of white frost. On Saturday morning, I have been told by early risers the sidewalk was white in places. We will, however, now look for more seasonable conditions, and better growing weather.—W. P.

Strong Language Used In Coal Strike Speeches

LONDON, June 21 (Canadian Press).—Vituperative personalities were not confined to one side in week-end oratory concerning the crisis in the coal strike situation.

Right Hon. Arthur Neville Chamberlain, Minister of Health, described A. J. Cook, Secretary of the Miners' Federation, as a "half crazy fanatic." Cook retaliated by calling Premier Baldwin, the office boy of the coal owners, adding that the Premier would henceforth be known not only as "Honest Baldwin," but as "Liar Baldwin." More sentiments of this nature were couched in as violent language.

EIGHT DEATHS BY DROWNING WHEN BOATS TIP

Six Young People of Sault Ste Marie Die in St. Marys River.

ONE RESCUED.

Young Man and Girl Drowned in Lake Near Prince Albert.

SAULT STE. MARIE, June 21 (Canadian Press).—Capsized into St. Mary's River from a 12-foot motor boat just below the Canadian Soo Ship Canal Pier at 4.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, six young people, ranging in ages from 13 to 16 years, met death by drowning, and another, 15 years of age, luckily a strong swimmer, was able to reach the overturned boat and was rescued half an hour later.

The dead are Arthur Tessier, aged 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Tessier; Clement Cormier, aged 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Cormier; John Parsons, aged 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Parsons; Peggy McIntyre and Annie McIntyre, aged 16 and 14 years respectively, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McIntyre; Emily Terry, aged 14, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Terry. Isaac Jollicoeur, aged 15, is the sole survivor of the party of seven.

The boat appeared to be overloaded and employees of the Ship Canal warned the boys not to venture out in the river as a stiff wind was blowing and it was fairly rough. The warning was not heeded and the boat had not gone more than 200 yards when a wave struck it, and it capsized. Dozens of people on shore watching the progress of the boat saw it capsize. Jollicoeur, when the craft capsized, threw off his coat and sprang clear of it. The boat, he says, sank by the stern from the weight of the engine but came to the surface bottom up. Jollicoeur started to swim toward it and saw that Tessier and two of the girls were clinging to it. It took him some minutes to reach the drifting boat and when he finally grasped it the others had disappeared.

Police are dragging the river for the bodies.

FORMER RULERS TO KEEP LANDS

Not Enough Votes Cast in Favor of Seizure By State.

IN GERMANY.

BERLIN, June 21 (Canadian Press).—Germany's first national referendum under the Republican Constitution held yesterday to decide the question of expropriation without compensation of the entire properties and estates of the former rulers, with particular interest centering on the former German Emperor and the Hohenzollern family, failed to poll an affirmative vote of half the eligible electors. The final returns showed the affirmative vote to be 14,889,703 and the negative 542,311. The adoption of the measure depended on about 20,000,000 affirmative votes.

Young Woman Gassed In East City Home

Mrs. W. R. Eason, Subject To Fainting Spells, Found on Kitchen Floor With Gas Jet Turned on—Husband Makes Sad Discovery.

PULMOTOR FAILS TO RESTORE LIFE.

The second fatality to a resident of Rogers Street occurred today, when Mrs. William R. Eason, of 573 Rogers Street, was found dead on the kitchen floor of a gas-filled house by her husband, William R. Eason, an employee of the Quaker Oats Company, returning from his work at noon.

The late Mrs. Eason, a woman of about twenty-nine years of age, was formerly Miss Ethel Walsh of this city, a member of a large family. One sister, Mrs. Grant Rightmyer of 569 Sherbrooke Street, was married on the same day.

The deceased woman has had a great deal of sickness, having lost two children and being compelled recently to undergo an operation for appendicitis. While convalescing, she has been subject to fainting fits, and it is thought that she may have been overcome in this way early this morning, after turning on the gas. One jet appeared to be turned on, although unlighted, and the house, according to her husband, was filled with the choking fumes. On returning from work, he was unable to get in through the door, which was locked, and, looking through the kitchen window, saw his wife on the floor. Some two weeks ago, the windows in the house had been nailed down, and Mr. Eason was compelled to break the kitchen window to gain an entrance. He got his wife into the yard, and telephone calls for a doctor were immediately sent by neighbors. Dr. McCulloch of the Clinic staff, responded, but his efforts, as well as the efforts of the firemen with the pulmotor, were of no avail.

The coffee pot remained on the stove and the unwashed breakfast wishes on the table when the husband returned home at noon. The sleeves of Mrs. Eason's gown were rolled up, in preparation for her morning's work. The physician, it was said, estimated that her death might have occurred shortly after her husband's departure at seven o'clock.

TRAPPER LEAVES DEATH MESSAGE

Several References To Approaching End Found in His Diary.

ALONE IN SHACK.

CHAPLEAU, Ont., June 21. Canadian Press. — "Death is death only where the soul dies," wrote Alexander Hardie in a message to his relatives a few days previous to the finding of his dead body at the door of his lonely shack, five miles south of Bisscotasing on Saturday.

From documents found in his possession, it appears that Hardie had been in the bush on a trapping expedition since last November.

Relatives in Hurdville, Ont., have been notified to take charge of the remains.

New York Key Not Needed Visitors Find City Wide Open

NEW YORK, June 21. Canadian Press. — Advertising men enroute to a convention at Philadelphia, have found New York worth a stop-over. To-day Mayor Walker presented a Canadian delegation, numbering 40, with a scroll of welcome at the city Hall.

"We don't give keys, any more" the Mayor said.

"Oh," replied Charles W. Stokes of Montreal. "We don't need a key; the town is wide open."

A roar of laughter brought an explanation from Mr. Stokes.

"I mean New York's hospitality is so boundless, and its facilities for making guests at home so great, that no magic sesame is necessary."

CHICAGO'S PRIDE DEVELOPS WHILE CITY ENTERTAINS

Care and Courtesy Are the Watchwords During Great Congress.

NO FATALITIES.

Thousands Assemble at Stadium For First Great Session.

(By Max Buckingham, United Press Staff Correspondent)

CHICAGO, Ill., June 21—A great sense of civic pride is developing here in Chicago as the city acts as host to 1,000,000 or more pilgrims to the Eucharistic Congress. Taxi cabs carry signs saying: "For the honor of Chicago walk carefully and drive carefully." Placarded about the street corners are signs "Be courteous."

Traffic policemen, accustomed to being somewhat harsh to drivers, can be seen tipping their hats in the midst of the worst traffic tangle Chicago has ever sen. Every patrol man encountered thus far has been courteous in giving directions.

No Fatalities

There is also a keen sense of appreciation marked about police headquarters that crime records and motor car casualties have been reduced to the absolute minimum since the pilgrims first started arriving last week. There have been no fatalities and no major crimes.

Many persons are planning overnight taxi cab trips to Mundelein, Illinois, for the final procession on Thursday.

Parties of five will crowd the cabs and the fare has been announced as $18.80.

One of the busiest places during the Congress is the "information bureau" established in a tent on Michigan Boulevard. Knights of Columbus man the bureau and there is a constant crowd. Interpreters have been installed to answer questions of the foreign delegates.

A floating altar is docked in the Chicago river. It is aboard the lake steamer South America, upon which Cardinal O'Connell of Boston came to the Congress. He plans to keep permanent headquarters in the ship during the Congress.

Prayers of Protestants

Protestant pastors in their pulpits yesterday morning prayed for the great gathering of Catholics here for the Congress. The key note of almost every sermon was that through the Eucharistic Congress religion was coming to the forefront.

Twelve police lieutenants have forsaken the trimness of their blue uniforms for full dress attire during the Congress. They are the body guards for the twelve princes of the church visiting here.

Ukrainians Have Free-for-all Object To Nationalist Speech

ST. CATHAINES, Ont., June 21. Canadian Press. —. Objections to some remarks regarding Russia by M. Sichinsky, Ukrainian Nationalist leader, of Rochester, N.Y., precipitated a free-for-all fight in the Ukrainian National Hall in Thorold Township on Sunday. His remarks were resented by men and women of Bolshevist persuasion who were eventually put out. Men fought women and men fought men. No weapons were used and the casualties were not serious.

I.O.O.F. PICNIC GREAT SUCCESS

Large Number of Members and Friends Take in Boat Trip.

TO WALLACE'S POINT.

(By Frank Russell.)

A brilliant sunshine, an almost unclouded azure blue sky, and a rather strong north-westerly breeze, ushered in last Saturday morning. It bid fair to be fair all day (no pun intended here, please) and a fair day had been looked forward to by many. For it was the afternoon fixed for the down-river trip of the Independent Order of Oddfellows — Triple Link affiliation—to Wallace's Point—a day that is much looked forward to by the younger members of the Oddfellows' fraternity, as well as by others not initiated in the mysteries of the craft in question, because a good picnic is held, plenty of amusement is provided, a jolly time is had, and worth-while prizes presented to those lucky enough to win then; and of these prizes there were plenty.

Opening of the Season.

This trip was looked upon—to a certain extent—as the first trip of the 1926 season; for it was the first half-day trip to which the general public had access, in consideration of an exchange of a certain amount of coin of the realm. It is true that on the previous Thursday the employees of the Brinton Carpet Factory had celebrated their annual holiday, that on Thursday evening there had been a quasi-moonlight excursion, for, I understand the moon was considerably conspicuous by its absence, and that on the following day, the students at the Normal School had their outing. It is proverbial that this particular day is always a bad day, but this year the students had it fine; but, oh! so rough. In fact so rough was it that that experienced seaman, Captain Scollard could not effect a landing at Hiawatha, where the good ship "Stoney Lake" was chartered for, but had to fall back upon Harwood, on the other side of Rice Lake.

On the arrival of your representative on the George street wharf, at about 1.20 p.m., he already found a large assemblage of folk either aboard or ready to go on board. There were old and young and middle aged, the flapper and the boy, and children galore. Anyway a very happy crowd they appeared to be, all intent on one purpose, viz., enjoyment for themselves and everyone else.

Just before the start Follis' orchestra came on board, and all was in readiness for the voyage.

The Start.

Pretty punctual to the dot the start was effected at 1.35 p.m. There was a brilliant sunshine, an azure-blue sky, flecked here and there with a snow white cloud, which added to the general beauty, but it was rather cool—at least cooler than one expects to find with forty-eight hours of the "longest day," viz., June 21. For rightly or wrongly, the longest day is supposed to be one of the hottest days of the year. Our friend, "W. P." will no doubt tell us that "midsummer day," i.e., St. John Baptist's Day ,or June 24, should be the really hottest day of the year. Anyway, after to-day (June 21) the days begin imperceptably at first. to shorten or be "drawn in."

But no more moralizing; everyone was happy and prepared to make the best of every or anything.

In due course we passed through the one and only lock, called at the street railway wharf where we embarked a further contingent of passengers, and then made a real start for our destination.

The Journey Down.

The river and its surroundings were looking at their best. The bright ripple on the water, the breeze moving everything on shore, and the lovely foliage of the country made an entrancing scene. On such an undulating river as the Otonabee there is something fresh and new to be seen at almost any minute, at least by those who have eyes that will see.

After nearly two hours of pleasant sailing on the "Stoney Lake," we arrived at Wallace's Point, which was to be our destination. During the trip down, it is needless to say that dancing had been a great event, the orchestra commencing directly we had cast off the George Street Wharf. This was interspersed with community singing of popular words and tunes, the former being provided on song sheets distributed among those present, the music being provided by the dance orchestra.

In due course the good ship "Stoney Lake" was made fast, and bit by bit all the voyagers got on to terra firma again. Then the great work of the day began, viz., the sports. There were races and competitions of all conceivable kinds. So I will now refer my readers to 15—Mrs. Slaughter (a nail well driven).

The ball game was won by the Peterborough Lodge, 32 against their opponents', the Otonabee Lodge, 30.

The tug-of-war was won by the Peterborough Lodge, who will retain the cup, this being the third year to win it in succession.

The sports over, supper became the great institution for the time being. Then not only children but their elders, hied themselves off to swings, see-saws, giant-strides, toboggan slides, and various other amusements with which this admirable picnic resort, i.e., Wallace's Point, is so admirably provided. Only one condition—a most reasonable one I consider—is made for the use of the property, and this is that during the stay of the party, the refreshment bar on board should be closed so that such commodities as ice cream, confectionery, fruit and all those kinds of goods, should be purchased at the booth on the property. One cannot help contrasting the liberal open-handed spirit encountered at Wallace's Point with the narrow, close, parsimonious treatment meted out at Gore's Landing, to the unfortunate who is by the folk there described as an "excursionist."

The Return Journey.

At 7.15 the last whistle was sounded; everybody was found to be safely on board, and the homeward journey was begun. Singing and dancing were at once the order of the day, or rather evening; for with the sunset the air had become somewhat chilly, and it was really too cool to stay long on the upper deck. However, every one was happy, the kiddies had all put on a garb of good behaviour, and the dancing and singing were thoroughly enjoyed by all and sundry.

And so we returned to Peterborough, reaching the George Street Wharf as the clocks were striking nine. After a few appropriate songs, such as "Home, Sweet Home," "Auld Lang Syne," and such like, closed of course with God Save the King.

The Sports Committee was as follows:

Bros. R. S. Cotton, J. Lancashire, Geo. Worboy, H. Webb and C. C. Mowry.

Starters—Bros. J. Lancashire, R. S. Cotton, H. Webb.

Judges—Bros. Geo. Worboy and C. C. Mowry.

Booth Committee—Bros. H. Huffman, Geo. Hillier, W. Fair and Geo. East.

Boat Committee—Bros. E. Stanley and H. Lemmings.

Advertising Committee — Bros. Geo. Worboy, S. Thompson and Geo. East.

These gentlemen are to be commended for the care and attention everybody received. The arrangements were well carried out, evincing much previous thoughtful care, and were well appreciated by all.

Although, with the exception of the captain, the chief engineer and the capable stewardess, it was a new crew aboard, yet they all seemed to have learnt the traditions of the former crews, and each and every one was as kind and helpful as if they had been years on the service. Of course the three veterans were, as ever of old, only too ready to do all in their power to add to the comfort and safety of the voyagers. The stewardess as usual took great care of this writer and added considerably to his creature comfort.

Some of the new cloth coats show interesting treatments that feminize and intrigue. One is the use of flowers, made of the material forming the collar or perched on the shoulder.

COUNTY ORANGE LODGE BANQUET

County Master Entertains Officers and Past Masters at Lakefield.

MANY SPEECHES.

LAKEFIELD, June 21. — The semi-annual meeting of the Loyal Orange County Lodge met at Lakefield on Monday evening, June 14th, in the Lodge Room of Beresford Lodge, No. 122, with the Worshipful County Master, Mr. Stephen Harrison, Lakefield, in the chair. After the business had been transacted the Worshipful County Master invited the officers and Past County Masters to the Commercial House, where they sat down to a bountiful supper served by Mine Host Peacock, Mrs. Peacock and their staff. After the supper had been partaken of toasts were drunk and several of the Past County Masters gave brief addresses.

The first toast was that of the County Lodge, proposed by Worshipful County Master S. Harrison in an inspiring speech. He said the kind of men who were needed in the Lodge were those who were four square, men who were willing to extend a helping hand, not only to Orangemen but also to those who differ in belief from them, men whom they meet and come into contact with from day to day and whose acquaintance is a benefit. Then, as the days go by the bond of comradeship becomes stronger and the companionship dearer and the spirit of fellowship becomes the ruling and guiding feature of all our gatherings.

Bro. E. F. Reid, P.C.M., replied to the toast in a very able manner, stating that if the County Lodge was to occupy and hold the position outlined by the County Master, that he should receive the sympathy and support of every officer and member, and if this was done it was certain that the year will be crowned with success.

Bro. George Porter moved that a hearty vote of thanks be tendered to the County Master for his generous treatment of the County officers by giving such a splendid supper.

Bro. J. H. Spence, P.C.M., seconded the vote of thanks, paying a warm tribute to the County Master's kindly nature and his efficiency. Those present joined in singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," followed by three cheers and a tiger given heartily.

Bro. Harrison, in replying to the vote of thanks extended with such obvious sincerity, stated that he was just waking up to the fact that he had allowed the County Lodge to place him in a tremendously responsible position. As to the banquet, he said, it was in doing these little things which contributed to the comfort and welfare of others that he derived his greatest pleasure. It was better to live in a house by the side of the road and help the wayfarers who pass by than to live all alone in a mansion isolated from one's fellow men. Mr. Harrison said, in closing, that he would endeavor to measure up to the required standard but the splendid record of those who had preceded him in the responsible position makes the task more difficult.

Bro. Fred T. Brown, Deputy County Master, said a few words as to what one man may accomplish with perseverance and there were few tasks impossible if he set his mind and heart to the work. If the county officers and past officers stood together, success was certain. In closing, the speaker assured the County Master of his good wishes and loyal support.

Bro. J. J Cunningham, P.C.M., spoke at some length referring to the record of long and efficient service of the County Master who had been connected with the Order for many years, holding in turn many important positions in such a capable manner that it afforded sufficient proof of his ability to fill the post of County Master with credit, not only to himself but to the county also.

He, too, pledged support to the County Master.

Bro. F. J. Moore, P.C.M., and Bro. Frank Millard, County Chaplain, also expressed their pleasure at being present on such a happy occasion which will remain always a delightful memory. It was the unanimous opinion that this was one of the most profitable and pleasant evenings that they had ever spent in connection with their official meetings.

After singing the National Anthem the members dispersed to their several homes.

The spring has been very backward and cold for seeding. There seems to be a very rapid growth during the past couple of weeks.

The Canadian Freeman Compliments The Examiner Upon Reports.

Our respectful congratulations are herewith tendered to His Lordship Bishop O'Brien on the great success of the Centenary Celebration of the First Mass celebrated in Peterboro.

Our compliments are also due to the Peterboro Examiner. In former days the writer frequently crossed swords with the authors of Mr. Glover's sport page. But the full-page devoted to the Peterboro Centenary on Saturday last and the lengthy and well-handled account of Sunday's ceremonies in the Lift Lock City showed an appreciation of the great work of the Church and an understanding of the various rites unusual in a secular paper in Ontario.—Canadian Freeman, Kingston.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

PEGGY HAS A TASTE OF A QUEER MELON.

Peggy stood under the palm-like tree looking up at the queer fruit.

"Well," laughed a soft voice, "what are you thinking? A penny for your thoughts."

Peggy turned around, and when she spied the wee elfin at her side she gave a cry of delight.

"Oh, Squeedee, you dear, I'm glad you came. Tell me what kind of a tree is this? I love its silvery white bark and the lovely great big green leaves. Is it some kind of a palm tree?"

"No, it's not a palm tree," laughed the elfin. "Don't you know; that's a Melon tree and——"

"Melon tree!" Peggy exclaimed. "So those round things hanging up there are melons? My, what kind of melons are they, anyway? I always thought melons had to grow down under the ground."

"Most melon s do," replied Squeedee. "But this is a Melon Papaw tree. I wish you could have seen it a few weeks ago. Where you see those melons was a beautiful waxy, fragrant blossom, with its petals all turned backward in a whorl."

"Oh, dear, it must have been pretty," sighed Peggy. "Maybe I'll stay in Florida long enough to see the blossoms, too. They don't grow up North at all. At least I have never seen a Melon Papaw tree before."

"Not this kind of a papaw tree,

"Is This a Palm Tree?"

anyway," laughed the elfin. "The Melon Papaw tree only grows in a warm climate. Some of the melons get as large as a man's head."

"But are they good to eat?" Peggy asked. "I should think they would be."

"Indeed they are good to eat," laughed Squeedee. "That is, if you can form a taste for them."

Squeedee shook the tree and one of the melons dropped at their feet.

"You are not supposed to let them drop." He picked up the melon and cut Peggy a slice. "They take great care to cut the melons down so they won't bruise."

Peggy tasted the melon and made a funny face as she handed it back to Squeedee.

"Some folks may like them, but I don't," she laughed. "What do they do with them? Eat them this way?"

"Either eat them raw or make them into preserves," replied Squeedee. "The natives take the leaves and bruise them, then they wrap any tough meat they happen to have in leaves and they claim the sap from the leaves makes the meat tender in a very short time. Yes, and, come to think of it, the negroes use the leaves as a substitute for soap in washing clothes."

"Well, of all things!" Peggy laughed. "I hope I'll like it before I leave. Thanks, Squeedee," and, picking up the rest of the melon, she took it home.

MOVIGRAPHS

(By NEA Service.)

New York.—Broadway choruses have long since become an established recruiting ground for the films.

Stardom is now boasted by any number of "glorified gals" who got their start as music revue kicksters, and most of them have been turned out of Mons. Flo Ziegfeld's beauty mill.

Checking over a list of screen notables your correspondent finds the following challenging ensemble:

In spite of the hordes of "film children" brought by proud mothers to movie camps, one of the great problems of directors is that of getting children to play subordinate and extra roles.

The trouble seems to be that the babies, like their elders, want to be actors rather than their natural selves.

David Wark Griffith tells a sad tale, to illustrate the point. Recently he was shooting a scene in "The Sorrows of Satan," intending to show the influence of Satan, in the person of Alphod Menjou, upon some street gamins.

This scene was to show two youngsters standing near a fruit peddler's cart. MM standing near a fruit peddler's cart. As 'Satan' swung up the street the youngsters were impelled to "swipe" some fruit and run away.

A young regiment of youngsters was ushered in to take the roles of the little gamins. All through a tiring afternoon Griffith tried first one pair and then another.

"And not one of them acted as though he had ever snitched an apple out of a back yard in his life," related the director. "They all were trying to be actors, instead of mischievous brats."

After going through the entire list Griffith, in depair, finally turned to two lads who act as "boys" to the camera men.

They went through the scene without a hitch.

Notes From Manhattan's Film Camps —Ed Garvey, All-America tackle on the Notre Dame line some years back, breaking in as an assistant director..... He is sponsored and coached by Alan Dwan, who once was fullback for "dear old Notre," and is getting his present experience in the filming of "Tin Gods," with Thomas Meighan and Renee Adoree.

Gregory Kelly, who now holds the world's championship as a theatrical commuter.....Kelly appears on Broadway in the lead of "The Butter and Egg Man" and his film role of the young inventor in "The Show Off" took him to Philadelphia on location.....This pre sented some problem in commuting..... Working through the day on the film, he daily boarded a train, reaching his theater just in time to go on with the how and then taking the midnight train for Philadelphia in order to be at work the following morning.....

ALBERTA'S OIL BOOM

Husband Must Stop Wife From Killing Self

NEW YORK, June 21.—United Press.—Any husband who stands by and allows his wife to try to commit suicide, is liable to arrest it appears.

Rogers McDermott, a 19 year old, of tall and husky build, has been arrested for failing to prevent his wife, 17 year old Katherine, a high school chum, from attempting to die by taking poison. He is out under $5000 bail on a technical charge of felonious assault.

The two children had attended the Erasmus Hall high school together where propinquity ripened into marriage. Katherine is the daughter of a wealthy contractor, with whom she has now returned to live. In an affidavit directed against her husband, the girl says they were standing in front of a candy store on May 24, when she told Rogers that she was about to poison herself.

"Don't take it in front of me," replied Rogers, according to the affidavit. I will go and buy some candy while you take it.

But McDermott was still there, it is alleged, while she swallowed two little tablets of bichloride of mercury.

She spent two weeks in a hospital but recovered to realize now that she was very foolish. The father declares his daughter took poison in fear of a husband who had bruised and beaten her.

"I won't let him talk," said McDermotts counsel on Friday. He did not do this. His wife wanted to commit suicide, and that's all there is to it."

Ever Thought of Endowing your Home?

SUPPOSE that — having purchased a home and effected a mortgage on it—you should die suddenly!

Wouldn't your wife and family have a hard time meeting the interest on the mortgage and discharging the principal sum when due?

Not so, however if you were insured under an Imperial Endowment policy for the amount of the mortgage.

A small amount invested each year in such a policy will enable your heirs to pay the mortgage immediately after your death; even if it should occur next week.

On the other hand, if you should live until the policy matures you can then pay off the indebtedness yourself out of the proceeds of the Endowment.

Have you a mortgage on your home? Why carry this responsibility yourself? Why bequeath an unpaid mortgage to your loved ones?

Let us show you how easily you can make sure of its repayment whether you live or die.

Send the coupon to-day—to-morrow you may be uninsurable.

BATHING ACCOMMODATION.

The City Council in providing a new dressing-room for women bathers at Inverlea Park are to be commended in thus meeting a long-felt need.

The accommodation at the bathing beach for several years has been utterly inadequate so far as women bathers were concerned, and the new quarters will be appreciated by the many women and girls who frequent Inverlea Park each summer.

It is to be hoped, however, that care has been taken in the location of the new dressing-room so that it will not be needlessly close to the quarters provided for male bathers.

It should be possible to find a site that would not involve this objection.

A USEFUL MAP.

The Provincial Government has issued a new road map of the Province, which is available to the public and will be of the greatest value to motorists.

It gives much useful information in regard to the highways, county roads, fish and game areas and summer resorts, and yet is easy to read and understand.

The map of northern and north-western Ontario and Quebec is on the reverse side, as well as the routes to the principal cities and towns in Ontario.

It is self-evident that much time and trouble have been expended by the Department of Highways in the preparation of this map, which is the best thing of the kind that has yet been issued.

SUPERVISION NEEDED.

Yesterday's double drowning adds tragic emphasis to the Examiner's recent articles on the necessity of being careful in canoes.

It cannot be too strongly urged that the canoe, delightful craft for those who know how to handle it, is a menace to inexperienced boatmen, particularly if they have not mastered the art of swimming.

The Examiner is firmly of the opinion that there should be more careful supervision of boat liveries and that more be done to keep tyro paddlers out of canoes. The amateur usually betrays himself by the clumsy manner in which he gets into a canoe—yet the most unskilled seem to have no trouble in coming into contact with of a craft that may prove a death-trap to them.

FLAG ETIQUETTE.

The action of the American Automobile Association in issuing a widespread warning to United States motorists intending to visit Canada to avoid a needless display of the United States flag in this country, is appreciated by Canadians generally.

We are a mild-mannered people, and we are always glad to see our American cousins, yet it must be admitted that when a motor car makes its appearance with Stars and Stripes flamboyantly displayed and the Union Jack we are upset and resentful.

The A.A.A. puts the whole thing in a nutshell. "Courtesy more than courtesy to a friendly and kindred people is involved," says the association's bulletin. "It is one of the best-established and oldest rules of international conduct that when you fly your flag in a foreign country you should fly it only along with that of the nation whose guest you are and whose protection you are travelling."

That is all that we over here ask of our friends who come to the border.

Fly your flag if you like, but fly the Union Jack with it.

THREE NEW LAWS DAILY.

An average of about three new laws come on the statute books of Canada every day of the year, says the Financial Post. The number of laws introduced in the Parliaments of Canada last year was 1,000. Most of them passed into law.

It is getting to be impossible for the average man to know all the legislation that is introduced in Canada each year. It may be argued that he does not have to, that he need only follow the legislation of the Federal Government and of the Province in which he resides. That in itself would be a heavy enough task, but business men know that that is not enough; they must watch the bills of the Provincial Legislature of every Province in which they are doing business. Secretaries of trade and other associations have to read carefully every bill proposed, are constantly to keep informed on the meaning behind the many and numerous bills that zealous legislators are constantly fashion into laws.

Canada has not reached the ridiculous limits noted in some American States, where laws are turned out by the thousand; nor have we gone to the other extreme exemplified by Alabama, where the State Assembly meets only once in four years and then pays its members such small wages that they do not bother to stay much longer than to shake hands and O. K. bills.

But the early production of legislation is getting to be much of a good thing.

THE LONGER DAY.

A barefooted boy runs across the sun-flecked forest. It is vacation time, a long sweet day in the country. The boy pauses to look at a strange flower. It is strong, straight and colorful. He is like it as it stands in the forest's shade; youthful, brave, unafraid of the sun and from cares that wilt. It is the longest day, but tomorrow will be as long and as cool, the swimming hole as pleasant.

The boy breaks rocks in the noonday heat. His face is red with sweat. It is June 21 and hot. It is a day of the year. But it is like any other. There will be more rocks to break, and the boy will be, for 10, perhaps 20 years, until the quarry is to a maze of stone, and the swinging crane mechanical and as bloodless as the arm of the crane that lifts them for him to break.

The girl sits at the piano. She has been playing, but music stirred a dream within her, so she sits gazing through the window that opens upon the fairyland of the future. Her dream now is her sweetheart, tomorrow it will be her husband, and then she will have a dream for her boy. It is June 21, the longest day, but her dream and life are longer.

An old man, sitting in a deep chair, watches the long shadows melt into twilight. The noonday heat and the storms have passed, and the music from within has died away. It is the evening of June 21, the longest day. The air is sweet with a breeze that brings memories from the old swimming hole in the forest.

A JUDGE'S PLEA.

In the news columns of today's issue The Globe publishes an extract from the summing-up of Judge Huycke of Peterboro in the Dwyer case which was tried in that city last week, and which ended with the conviction of the accused. The evidence given to the court disclosed conditions existing, or which had existed, in a home in Dummer Township, a prosperous and respectable part of Peterboro County, which shocked the moral sense of the Province. It was a recital of ill treatment of little children that would not have been allowed to continue had the residents of the community known of it. They did not know of it; and it is just this feature of the case to which Judge Huycke draws attention, in manifestly carefully considered language, in the course of his address to the jury.

> "I do not suppose the good people of Dummer knew the conditions of this family," Judge Huycke says. "I am sure, if they had known, or you had known, or the people of the city of Peterboro had known, there would have been a general outpouring of food and clothing for those little children. . . . They did not know, and they made no effort to know; and that is where the blame attaches."

Judge Huycke's remarks contain an arraignment of the community to which he referred—an arraignment, not for heartlessness, but for indifference to the condition of those in its midst—but it is equally an arraignment of all communities in the Province where similar things may be happening or may be possible. It is an intimation to every Christian community that it cannot escape its responsibilities.

Judge Huycke dwells upon the thousands of dollars which the public willingly contributes for benevolent purposes—for charity, for missions, for social and moral reform, for fads, too, of one kind and another—and often sends to distant lands. He does not condemn these benevolent activities. They are well intentioned. But here is a case to arouse pity and horror existing at our own door, and we overlook it; we know nothing about it, and we do not seek to know anything about it. Here are little children in our very midst who are cold and hungry and ill-treated, who have never knelt at a mother's knee or been taught a prayer, and whose life is a drudgery, and not a thought is given them nor a penny of the thousands supplied for benevolent purposes diverted to relieve their misery or to feed or clothe them. There surely can be but one response to Judge Huycke's question whether, in the promotion of many things that are good, we should forget or overlook the duty that lies at our very hand and under our very eyes.—The Globe.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

HAVE THAT CRY.

Man is but a boy older grown, and what this boyman needs is to hear the crooning songs that his Mother used to sing. So take this suggestion, act upon it, and the whole world will taken on a new tint.

Walk right over to where your dear old Mother is sitting in her armchair, and, the very first thing you do, return that kiss with the accumulated interest of years—return that baby kiss.

Then start to sing snatches of childhood songs. Your Mother will join you with the melody that you have not heard in years.

Talk with her about the old home. Bring back recollections of her early struggles and show her how you appreciate these self-sacrifices. Make her understand that the rough part of the road is past.

Almost before you know it, you will be weeping—you will be crying like a child, and it is this childhood cry in your soul that must come out.

There are tears that have been in your heart for years—cave-locked, childhood tears—sleeping fountains of sympathy.

Just lay your tired old head in the hollow of your Mother's work-knotted hands until you loose the grip of the dignity of years. Be a boy again.

No matter how old you are, be a boy again. The older you are, the more you need this sentimental season.

UNFAIR.

Man wants a girl with winning smile and wondrous disposition: a girl who always togs in style, perhaps by intuition. He pictures eyes that twinkle bright and never shed a tear. He craves a miss with spirit light, that deals in naught but cheer.

His type of maid is one who lets the sadder things drift by: who laughs at them instead of frets—and never bats an eye. She looks the world square in the face, and stands above the crowd. The girl man wants will fill that place and kinda make him proud.

And that's just where the thing's unfair. A man's demands are high, but does he always seem to care or e'en pretend to try to make himself the self-made man who has good points to burn? Too seldom does he stop to scan what she gets in return.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, June 21 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market Saturday was very quiet owing to the fact that few firm bids were received for foreign buyers. There was some demand for oats from local exporters and sales of No. 2 feed were made at 1 cent per bushel over the Winnipeg July option c.i.f. The trade in car lots was quiet and prices were unchanged.

The foreign trade in spring wheat flour during the past week was fair owing to the large enquiry from the Continent. The domestic trade, however, was inactive, but prices were unchanged. The movment of winter wheat flour was only on a moderate scale, but prices were well maintained.

Prices for most lines of millfeed were steady with a moderate amount of business passing. The trade in in standard grades of rolled oats was steady and the feeling was steady.

Local jobbing prices for eggs were well maintained and a fairly active business was transacted during the week. The receipts were 2,560 cases.

The feature of the butter trade for the past week was the weak feeling that developed and prices closed with a net decline of 1 3-4 to 2 cents per pound. This was attributed to the large receipts. The volume of business was small The receipts Saturday were 4,505 packages.

The movement of cheese for export was the largest of any previous week. Saturday's receipts were 14,887 boxes.

Thsi map shows the location of McLean Canyon in the Ungava territroy, which contains Hamilton Falls, one of the world's greatest cataracts, 800 feet high, and nearly a mile wide. The Quebec government is sending a survey party into the district this summer.

CHICAGO GRAINS

CHICAGO, June 21 (Canadian Press).—Wheat bulls were under fire again on Saturday on the Chicago Board of Trade and despite a rather stiff defence, lost more ground.

The close was at the low for the short session, with options off 3-4 to 2 1-4c.

Corn held well in the face of wheat weakness and finished 3-8c off to 1-8c up. Oats were 1-4 to 3-8c down and provisions 2 1-2 to 12 1-2 cents net lower.

Local bull interests in wheat bought early in the belief that rains in the southwest would continue over the week-end and would probably injure some of the standing grain. More unfavorable crop reports from abroad helped this attitude until some of the longs started to take profits.

At this point a prominent commission house started selling and a sharp break developed. It went below $1.40 for July and caught some stop loss orders and the whole market became weak. Sellers of bids had to protect themselves and although there was nothing in the news to account for the weakness, the selling continued practically up to the close.

Corn received relatively better support than for several days. Weather conditions were generally favorable for the crop. The spot basis was higher. There was quite a bit of buying of July and selling of September at a difference of around 5 1-8c. Some shorts covered and helped steady the market.

Oats finished weak.

Provisions were easier. A decline in hogs served to ease the market.

5,000 MASSES MARK OPENING GREAT CONGRESS

Cardinal Bonzano Is Formally Installed as Legate of Pope Pius.

HOST OF PILGRIMS.

Magnificent Procession Glittering With Pomp and Ceremony of Ancient Rome.

CHICAGO, June 21. Canadian Press. — Solemn and stately ceremonies, symbolizing with all the pomp and glory of ancient Rome the unity of a world wide church, marked the formal opening yesterday of the 28th International Eucharistic Congress.

One of the mightiest hosts of pilgrims ever assembled in Christendom for the purpose of making public profession of faith in Jesus Christ, inaugurated their five day festival by worship in more than five thousand masses which preceded the magnificent services in the Cathedral of the Holy Name in which His Eminence John Cardinal Bonzano was formally installed as the legate of Pope Pius XI.

Cardinal Mundelein, sponsor of the Congress and host of its pilgrims, uttered thanskgiving in his address to Cardinal Bonzano for the spiritual harvest epitomized in the reception of holy communion by more than one million souls in the Chicago archdiocese yesterday.

Archbishops, bishops, abbots, priests and lay pilgrims from the far flung realms of the earth bowed before the resplendent cathedral sanctuary, whence eleven cardinal priests, on princely throne, led in the adoration of the eucharist. More than four hours elopsed between the sounding of the first notes of the processional and the bestowing of the apostolic blessing by Cardinal Bonzano as he descended from his throne at the right of the marble altar, at the conclusion of the services.

Among participants in the cathedral ceremonies were approximately 400 bishops, a score or more of mitred abbots, more than 200 monsignors, several thousand priests and monks, six hundred seminarians and hundreds of nus—all clad in the robes of their office or order.

The ecclesiastical procession assembled in Quigley Seminary, three blocks from the cathedral, passing in a narrow line through reverent throngs to the sanctuary. It began with a group of youthful acolytes in white silk and lace, white shoes and gloves, red girdles and capes, and carrying a large gilded crucifix surrounded by burning candles; it ended hundreds of nuns—all clad in the in their scarlet robes and trains.

COOK EXASPERATES LABOR EXECUTIVES

Conduct Will Be Discussed at Trade Union Conference Next Week.

LONDON, June 21. — (British United Press.) — The enemies of "Emperor" A. J. Cook, leader of the miners, are exploiting the fact that his portrait appears side by side with that of Lenin on a silkin embroidered banner which he will unfurl to-day at Pewlaw-on-Tyne, in Durham, which is in the very heart of the Communist area of Britain.

Cook's attacks on other labor leaders have aroused the most intense hostility and his conduct is coming up for discussion at a meeting of the Executives of all the Trade Unions which will assemble for a conference a week from to-day.

Rector Limps To Church To Unite Waiting Lovers

Raymond Wallrath and Gladys Hoffman are man and wife today, their union blessed by the Rev. John A. Goodfellow, dean of the Philadelphia City's Episcopal clergy, who waved aside the burdens of his 80 years last week, arose from the chair in which he conquered the critical injuries of an automobile accident on May 21, and limped into the church on crutches that their wedding might not be delayed.

DEATH SENTENCE FOR MRS. GALLOP

TO BE HANGED OCT. 15.

ROBERVAL, Que., June 21 (Canadian Press)—Emily Sprague, found guilty of the murder of her husband, Abraham Gallop, who died at Ile Maligne on August 6, 1925, was sentenced by Mr. Justice Gibsone to be hanged on October 15. The verdict was rendered after the jury had deliberated for three hours.

Abraham Gallop, an employee of the Duke Price Company, was a native of Kingsfield, N.B. On the morning of August 6, last year, he died under circumstances that aroused the suspicions of the police. His body was taken to Kingsfield and buried, but later, under instructions of the department of the Quebec Attorney-General, the corpse was exhumed and an examination made. The result of this examination showed, according to evidence sworn to in court, that the stomach of the dead man had contained "enough strychnine to kill a man."

Mrs. Gallop was arrested and charged with the murder of her husband, and the trial of the woman began on June 11.

It was brought out during the evidence that strychnine had been bought by Gallop, who intended to employ it in hunting foxes, and it was also stated that a bottle of strychnine, the contents of which were undistruded, had been sent by Gallop to a friend. Other evidence tended to show that Gallop was a man of good physique and in perfect health.

The principal witness for the prosecution was A. Walter Simpson of Poine Blue, who had boarded with the Gallops. He swore that the convicted woman had told him she did not love her husband, but that it was he (Simpson) whom she loved. He also said that he had accompanied Mrs. Gallop to Kingsfield being present at the interment of the dead man, and that following the burial Mrs. Gallop had confessed to him that she had poisoned her husband with stychnine. Mrs. Gallop, according to Simpson, had asked him to marry her, but this Simpson had refused to do.

Mrs. Gallop, testifying in her own defense, denied the allegations of Simpson.

RUBBER FROM OIL TO CUT TIRE COST

Chemists Salvage Waste From Petroleum Wells For Synthetic "Gum."

Before long, experts say, your car may ride on tires of oil! In place of india rubber from the East Indies may be substituted synthetic or artificial rubber from the waste of petroleum wells, a new wonder of the chemists' laboratories.

One reason why the chemists are busy in this new field, says the July Popular Science Monthly, is the fact that today the world, and the United States in particular, is facing a critical shortage of crude rubber. In four years more, experts say, the world's demand with exceed the supply by some 37,000 tons unless new sources of supply are found.

Some of the fascinating possibilities of synthetic rubber were described the other day by Professor James F. Norris, director of research in organic chemistry at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Earl P. Stevenson, of the Arthur D. Little laboratories, Cambridge, Mass.

Stevenson declared that synthetic rubber is more than a fancy.

"It has not only been realized in the laboratory," he said, "but during the war its was produced in large quantities in Germany. It can be made from a certain class of hydrocarbons that are produced in huge quantities in every pretroleum refinery in this country. They are present in crude cracked naptha, where they are unwelcome and a source of trouble to the refiner, who must dispose of them. At present he disposes of them by destroying them."

These are the substances which, if left in gasoline, forms gums and stick up the valves of your automobile. To remove them the petroleum industry each years suffers a loss close to 90,000,000 gallons of motor fuel, worth almost $9,000,000. Yet in so doing it throws away what might be of enormous value not only in supplying the demand for rubber, but in creating countless other useful by-products.

"Petroleum is being wasted just as coal once was wasted," said Professor Norris, "because refineries are not sufficiently interested in saving millions of dollars. The profits of the petroleum industry are so great and the supply so immense that petroleum chemistry hardly has been developed."

By MALCOLM DUART

COPYRIGHT 1926

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

She has asked him to marry her, but he has refused, and has encouraged the attentions to her of JOHN PARRISH, his secretary. Audrey is just recovering from a severe nervous collapse.

NONA, a Toronto dancer, who has made a great success on the stage, loves Morton, and at the end of the last chapter has written Morton to ask if she may come to Peterborough to consult him, as to whether she shall accept a proffered engagement to star in London.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER LVII.

Audrey looked up, beaming.

"We'll ask her to come, won't we?" she asked, eagerly.

He nodded. "I've already telegraphed her. She ought to be here tomorrow," he said.

She dipped her spoon into the tangerines, and paused in thought.

"Daddy, there isn't any reason why Nona should stay at the hotel, is there?"

He shook his head. "I'd like to have her stay at the house, myself. Is it all right with you?"

"Indeed it is," she said. "She's the best woman friend I have, and if these old people around here don't like it, I don't care."

She spoke with considerable vigor, and he laughed. "Feeling more like your old self, aren't you?" he said. More seriously, he went on: "I never would have had Nona stay at the hotel in the first place, but you hadn't met any of the sort of life she represents, and I was reluctant to introduce you to it."

She took a bit of toast, and bit into it. She thoughtfully chewed the morsel, regarding him with grave eyes.

The bite of toast disposed of, she replied: "I didn't know anything about anything, really, until I met Nona, Mr. Sunshine, and those funny chorus girls, and Mr. Parrish.

He laughed outright. "Do you class Parrish with the chorus girls?" he wanted to know.

She smiled, but assented. "I hadn't known that there was any kind of life, or any kind of mind, except yours and mine," she told him. "Mr. Parrish is different from us, and so is Nona, and so are the chorus girls. Everybody looks at things a different way—and after their own fashion, they're all correct."

Morton lifted his eyebrows in mock dismay. "Listen here, chicken," he said. "Every blessed person that I've met lately, has become a philosopher, including myself."

He tapped her on the wrist with his forefinger. "You and Nona and Parrish and Abe Sunshine and Lois and even the nurse upstairs, have been going up and down the land, delivering lectures on life to each other. You'd think that we were the first discoverers of mankind."

She poured a cup of coffee. "Well, everybody discovers life for himself," she said. "It's just as new to each of us, as it was to the first man on earth."

"And when it takes a new aspect, that surprises us, too," he agreed.

"Darn it!" said Audrey.

"What?"

"I said 'darn it'?" Audrey repeated. "I was just thinking that we really don't know how to live, most of us, until we've been so buffeted and bruised that all we really want is relief from heartache."

He smiled. "You've been taking an intensive course in living lately," he said. "You ought to be able to graduate with honors, pretty soon. By the way."

He told her about the arrangements he had made with Parrish the night before. She listened to him attentively, with little nods of her head as he described the conversation.

"But why don't you want to attend to my money, yourself?" she asked, when he was done.

"I'll tell you. You like Parrish, and he has business ability. It is a simpler matter for him to handle the income from your stocks and bonds, than it would be for him to handle, over any long period, my mining property. If he makes a blunder, I can catch him at it, and correct it in time without much loss. He will throw every bit of fervor in his being into the job of serving you. He will be learning something about business, and I hope to let him gradually absorb a general direction of my own affairs.

"But I don't want to shove him into it until he has made his mistakes, and learned his lessons."

He smiled as he went on. "Since you are going to be a housekeeper, you cannot be a financier too. So I thought I'd hire one for you."

"Can I fix his salary?" she asked him, expectantly.

He shook his head. "You can—it's your money. But I suggest that you let me do it. You'd swamp him with revenue, when he hasn't learned to spend what he has, yet."

She looked disappointed. "I was only going to give him a couple of hundred a week more," she said.

He gave an exaggerated sigh. "A couple of hundred a week!" He spread his hand protestingly before him. "My dear, do you want him to be trotting out with chorus girls again?"

She shook her head. "Would he do that?"

He concealed the amusement in his eyes by lifting his coffee cup to his lips. When he set it down, he said: "When a young man gets as much money as that, he has to spend it some way. And that, Audrey, is a mighty easy way of spending money."

She dropped the subject, and was lost in thought through the remainder of the meal. He smiled once or twice as he looked at her, but forebore to break in upon her reflections.

After breakfast he took her riding about the streets of Peterborough, and for a short distance into the country. As they were coming back, he asked her if she were too tired to wait while he transacted a little business.

"I'd like to do some business myself," she told him. "Could we stop at the stores while I buy some things?"

He directed the chauffeur to turn into the shopping district. "What do you want?" he asked.

She counted on her fingers. "A dozen kitchen aprons, and some cotton gloves, and some rubber gloves, and a dozen little caps to cover my hair when it's dusty, and some common-sense shoes—not these high-heeled ones—and a lot of little gingham house dresses."

"Good Lord, what for?" he asked her.

She looked at him, surprised. "Why, when I get well, and am housekeeping, I'll need aprons and house dresses and things, won't I?"

"But," he protested, "how can you use a dozen aprons, and all those caps?"

She still stared at him. "But I have to change them, every day, don't I?"

"Those things ARE laundered, sometimes," he suggested. "However, we'll get Parrish, and go to it."

They stopped at the office, and while Morton went upstairs, Audrey sat outside in the machine, waiting. Old friends drifted by, people whom she had not seen for a long time. One by one they stopped, and inquired after her health. When Morton returned, a little crowd had gathered around the town car, conversing with the girl who sat on the deep cushions inside. With Parrish at his elbow, Morton worked his way to the door, nodding acknowledgment of the greetings he received.

"We're going shopping," he explained. "You'll excuse us, won't you?"

As the car drove away, Audrey waved her hand at the group on the curb.

"They were all so nice to me!" she said.

"They should be," said Parrish.

They stopped at one store after another. Audrey, still too weak to venture upon the fatigue of shopping, waited in the car while Parrish brought out salespeople, laden with merchandise for her inspection.

"You're buying too many of those things," he protested, as she picked out samples for a heap of kitchen aprons.

She disregarded him. Morton chuckled, as he saw the injured look on the young man's face.

"Business managers don't always have such a pleasant time in life," he commented.

"I don't believe in WASTING money," observed Parrish. "She couldn't use all those aprons in a month."

Audrey serenely proceeded with her selections. "If you're going to be so stingy, I won't let you be my business manager," she said. "I haven't signed that paper that daddy gave me, yet."

Parrish snorted. "I'm not going to bring out so many things from the next place," he threatened.

"Son," Morton said, "wait a minute! The young lady is ill, and must be indulged. It's too early to be giving orders—yet."

Audrey completed her task, and gave her order to the saleswoman, who was standing expectantly at the car door. Parrish followed the young woman into the store. Audrey leaned forward, to the speaking tube. "Drive on two blocks to that big dry goods store down there," she directed.

"But we're leaving Parrish!" Morton said.

The car glided forward, and Audrey settled back comfortably into the cushions. "It serves him right, for telling me what I must do and mustn't do," she remarked, gazing interestedly into the street. "Isn't it nice, to see everybody so busy, dashing around?"

Morton laughed, but made no comment. They completed their shopping without Parrish's aid, and only when they got home and after his frantic telephone message, did he learn what had become of them.

"Lesson number three in the art of living," Morton told him, before he hung up the receiver, "Don't give orders to the ladies."

Nona arrived the next day and unexpectedly, Abe Sunshine came with her.

Morton met them at the train, and extended his hand in cordial greeting to the little theatrical man.

Nona kissed him, while he still was shaking Mr. Sunshine's hand.

"I feel as if I hadn't seen you for an age?" Nona cried, clasping his arm.

Mr. Sunshine had a grievance. All the time this morning she didn't talk about anything whatsoever but you," he protested.

"Wasn't that an attractive subject?" Morton asked.

"One subject all the time gets tiresome," pronounced Mr. Sunshine.

They climbed into the waiting automobile, and sped up the street to Morton's home.

"I expect you wonder why I invited myself to come along," Abe said "but I'm going to stay at the hotel."

"Nonsense," said Morton. "You'll both stay at the house with us."

"Shall I?" asked Nona, doubtfully.

Morton took her hand, and tucked it under his arm.

"Audrey and I have agreed you can't stay anywhere else," he said.

She kissed him again, to the interested amusement of passersby.

Mr. Sunshine went on: "You know, this chance Nona has in London. Well, I was afraid you'd crab it. That's why I came along, to see you didn't."

Nona bent forward, to look across Morton at the theatrical man.

"You aren't playing fair, Abe," she said. "We agreed that we should take this up with him together, and tell him just what's happening."

Mr. Sunshine made a gesture with both hands, palms upward. "But ain't I taking it up with him, together?" he demanded.

Nona laughed, and settled back. She said no more until they reached the Morton home. The driver carried their bags into the house, where Audrey awaited them on the front porch. She was standing up, and for the first time had abandoned the loose garb of an invalid.

She gave one hand to Nona, and the other to the congratulatory Abe.

"You weren't expecting me," said the latter, shaking Audrey's hand vigorously. "But I wasn't expecting myself, either."

Nona's arm was around Audrey's neck, and the two girls held each other close.

"Dear," Nona said, "I'm so glad you're getting well again!"

"So am I," said Mr. Sunshine. "You can help me, maybe."

He cleared his throat, loudly.

"Miss Morton," he said, "we've come here to decide, is Nona going to marry Mr. Morton, standing there, or is she going to go to London and make a fortune?"

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

TUESDAY JUNE 22.

Although a very lively day is prognosticated from the overruling figures among the heavenly bodies, yet the general trend of affairs may not be read as propitious. There may be many setbacks and delays, sorrows and disappointments. Both business and personal affairs are under a baneful sway. Those in employment are warned against inviting censure or dismissal, and all are admonished to stick to routine grooves and not invite calamity while the astral affliction endures, which is but temporary.

Those whose birthday it is are assured of a lively year in business, but these may carry setbacks and trials. In personal affiliations there may be sorrow, loss or anxiety. Be on guard against deceit and treachery, and if in the employment of others, take no chance by offending those in authority. A child born on this day should be fitted to overcome trials and attacks of many kinds in life, especially of a subtle and sinister nature. It may be naturally endowed with an alert and clever mind and be active and lively.

BAD ROADS AND YOUR TIRES

An answer has just been given by Professor S. S. Steinberg of the National Research Council's highway research board, through a series of tests in which an automobile was driven over different types of roads.

It was found, says Popular Science Monthly, that concrete or brick roads caused the least tire wear, the loss in weight of each tire being about one ounce for a 500-mile run. The wear caused by gravel roads was from two to seven times as great, while that on macadam was from ten to fifty times. The tests also proved that the wear on front tires is from fifty to seventy-five per cent less than on rear tires.

AUTO PLANE RIDES THE ROADS OR SKIES

Newest Air Flivver Is Housed in Ordinary Garage; Its Wings Fold Back.

From Germany recently came word of a spectacular development in the field of aeronautics—a flivver plane that is at the same time an automobile; a machine only 18 feet long and less than six feet wide when the wings are folded back; small enough to be housed in the ordinary one car garage.

This unusual automobile-airplane, says Popular Science Monthly, is the invention of J. H. Maykemper, a civil engineer of Frankfurt, Germany. Throwing one lever on the machine transfers the power from the road wheels to the air propeller, so that if you are travelling by road and you desire to take to the air the wings could be snapped out into place and a short run of 100 yards or so would see you scooting skyward. Although the engine is only 20 horsepower, the inventor claims that the machine will carry a pilot, a passenger and enough gasoline for a five-hour flight.

Another promising air flivver was recently designed by A. K. Peterson, pilot and chief photographer at the Naval Air Station, Anacostia, D. C., who declares his 40 horsepower machine will hop off from any backyard 100 feet long, fly 100 miles an hour and travel nearly 25 miles on a gallon of gas.

CHIMES IN HONOR OF MEMORY OF LIEUT. HAROLD S. MATTHEWS DEDICATED AT MURRAY STREET

Tablets Also Unveiled in Memory of War Dead of Church.

SPECIAL SERVICE.

Thought of Resurrection Dominates All Services of the Day.

The special services held in Murray Street Baptist Church yesterday, in connection with the dedication of organ chimes, and unveiling of a bronze memorial tablet, gifts of Mr. and Mrs. T. Frank Matthews of Toronto, in memory of their son, the late Lieutenant Harold Stratton Matthews, were exceptionally interesting. From the opening organ prelude in the morning to the final note of the organ last night, concluding a recital which followed the regular evening service, the ceremonies were marked by an atmosphere particularly adapted to the occasion. According to the wishes of the donors of the chimes, the services were not distinctively memorial, but every portion had been planned with an emphasis laid on the idea of resurrection after death, and the services were artistic in this respect, as well as very reverent, from beginning to end. There were large congregations at both morning and evening services, and the musical programme was splendid, adding immensely to the beauty of the services. Quantities of lovely flowers, lilacs, peonies, iris, bridal wreath, pink and yellow roses, with palms and ferns, decorated the baptistry, the pulpit and the choir loft. Over the bronze memorial tablets which are placed against the main wall of the church, on either side of the choir loft, hung large flags, the Union Jack veiling the tablet inscribed to the memory of Lt. Matthews, which accompanied the gift of the chimes, and the Canadian ensign covering the companion tablet erected some time ago to the memory of the boys of Murray Street church, who made the supreme sacrifice in the late war.

Explaining that efforts had been made to secure several out of town preachers for the memorial sermon, and that these had failed owing to inability to name a certain date in the requests, Rev. Dr. Rose proceeded to give the morning sermon, a beautiful address, marked by the thoughtful spirituality and clarity of presentation which are distinctive features of the sermons of the pastor of Murray Street Church.

Two texts, the subject of both being the idea of worship, were chosen for the sermon "Mine eyes and my heart shall be there perpetually," from Kings 1 1-3, and "The glory of Jehovah filled the house of God," from Chronicles 2- 5-14.

The Church the Home of God.

"The idea of the house of God as God's home has ever been closely associated with worship," said Dr. Rose. Under the Mosaic dispensation, the tabernacle was the place of meeting for God's people, as they journeyed out of the house of bondage into the land of promise, and later, the same was true of the temple of the Jews. When Solomon had completed his work, God manifested Himself in the house prepared for Him, in a visible way, just as He had under the Old Law, when He appeared over the tabernacle as a pillar of cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night.

"Again, when the Jews were released from captivity, their faces turned once more to Jerusalem and the temple there. One class of people today who are in harmony with the Jews in this respect are our friends, the Catholics. They do not go to the house of God out of curiosity with regard to the priest's message, nor with curiosity as to the quality of the music they may hear there. They go just the same when their Bishop is away, and when they know the preacher may be a man of only average ability, because they go to the house of God to meet God, and because they feel that God has manifested Himself in His house in a very special way.

"We should go to the house of God to keep an appointment with Almighty God, and we should have a great love for His house. Next to the home, the church should take place in our affections If the home had been all that it should have been, there would not have been the need of the public place go worship that there is today Anything we can do to add to the beauty of the house of God, to its tranquility and helpfulness as a place of worship, is an act in keeping with the worship of God. While meetings in olden times, in caves and rude buildings, have not been denied the presence of God, still it must remain true that buildings that are beautiful in every way must be most pleasing to Him, for God gave very minute instructions as to the building of the Temple erected by Solomon, showing that beauty in adornment of His home is pleasing in His sight.

"I do not think of heaven as a walled city, and yet there is a definite idea given to us of it, demonstrating God's love of beauty, in the description of it as a place of pearly gates and walls of jasper and streets of gold."

Speaking of the beauty of a service which is taken up absolutely by sincere prayer, offered to God as an act of worship, Rev. Mr. Rose said: "I believe that the sermon of today has become a menace rather than an aid to worship. The idea that we come together to meet God should be the heart of all worship. One of the greatest aids to the worship of God is music. This has always been true. In the Old Testament's descriptions of services of worship to the Almighty, many types of instruments are noted. God Himself is the author of music. An eminent scientist has made the assertion that the whole wide universe has been arranged like a musical instrument and that the world itself is in tune to music. There is music in everything in nature."

Rev. Dr. Rose's address, which was beautifully illustrated with poetical quotations, concluded with an explanation of the gift of the chimes as a memorial to the late Lieutenant Harold Stratton Matthews.

"It is fitting," he said, quoting the words of Tennyson, in the Ode to the Duke of Wellington; "Yea, that all good things await, the one who cares not to be great, but as he saves, or serves, the State"—"it is fitting that a memorial tablet should be erected here with these chimes, to one who in this church and in his home achieved the fine character which was to prepare him for the valiant service he rendered."

Tribute to Lieutenant Matthews.

Quoting here from the Church Calendar, from a paragraph prepared by Mr. L. J. Pettit, a former teacher of the young man at the Peterborough Collegiate Institute,, Mr. Rose read:

"Everywhere Nature seems to strew her paths with broken promises, buds that never flower, blooms that never find fruition, manhood cut off before its prime. Thus, on June 2nd, 1916, she quenched our hopes for a brilliant career of one of Canada's most promising young men. For Harold Stratton Matthews, in whose memory the tablet is unveiled today, although only twenty-two years of age, had already touched the circumference of life at several points. As a student, as an athlete, as a man, he had won many laurels. In a competitive examination for entrance to Royal Military College, he won first place in a class of nearly a hundred candidates, and this preeminence he retained throughout his college course. At the same time, he excelled in both rugby and hockey and by his manliness, won the respect and friendship of both professors and students. But his outstanding characteristic was his unswerving loyalty—loyalty to his friends, to his country, and to his God. It was this fidelity, indeed, that kept him at the Forward Observation Post, whence he knew there was slight prospect of return.

"The closing of this brilliant and useful career, ere it was scarce begun, is wholly incomprehensible without the consciousness of Eternity, which holds the solution to the problem of Nature's broken promises. Meanwhile, we, his friends,—

"MMst still believe, ...or still we
That in a world of larger scope,
What here is faithfully begun,
Will be completed, not undone."

Unveiling of Tablet.

Unveiling the bronze memorial tablet erected to the memory of the late Lieutenant Matthews, accompanying the gift of the chimes to the church, Rev. Mr. Rose read the inscription:—

"To the glory of God and in proud and loving memory of Harold Stratton Matthews, Lieutenant, First Brigade, C.F.A., C.E.F., killed in action at Mount Sorrell, Belgium, June 2, 1916, aged twenty-two years.

"The chimes in the organ of this church are presented by Mr. and Mrs. T. Frank Matthews, in memory of a brave son.

"All you had hoped for, all you had, you gave to save mankind. Yourself you scorned to save."

On the opposite side of the church hangs a companion bronze tablet, erected some time ago in memory of the members of the congregation who died in the Great War, with the following names inscribed on it —Norman Barrie, George Collins, John Ellam, Joseph Horton, Arthur Lewis, William Long, Harold Matthews, Fred Stanley. "And from the ground there blossoms red, life that shall endless be."

The order of both morning and evening services yesterday was very impressive, carrying out the beauty of the dedication ceremonies with fidelity in an attractive programme that was enriched by some very fine music. An organ prelude from Dvorak's "New World" Symphony opened the morning service, followed by two of the exquisite brief prayer hymns, and later, by a noble rendition of "By Babylon's Wave," a solo, "There is No Death," rendered in fine voice by Dr. S. J. Graham, and a finale in the postlude by the organ, "Triumphal March."

The evening service was mainly of music, without a sermon, and ended with an organ recital by the organist and choir leader, Francis Sutton, A.T.C.M.

Beautiful Musical Programme.

The music given by the choir in the evening was exceptionally good, with the majority of the pieces rendered "a capella." The progress which Murray street choir is making under Mr. Sutton's direction was amply demonstrated in the beautiful singing of these unaccompanied pieces, the hardest test of any choir's ability. They displayed a soft, reverent hushed tone in the pianissimo sections, with a full volume of melodious concord in the forte passages, and the singing added much to the beauty and impressiveness of the services.

An unaccompanied hymn, "How They Crucified Him," was the opening of the evening service, with several anthems sung in the same fashion, "The Radiant Morn, "Behold a Host," "The Vision of Christ," a fine, descriptive selection illustrating the Christian's vision of Christ at different stages, and "Sun of My Soul," with a rich organ background in the triumphant finale, and solo work by Mrs. L. H. Ingram. The Offertory number was Massenet's "Angelus," a lovely thing with chime accompaniment. The addition of the chimes, although the installation was incomplete yesterday, and did not allow of a full demonstration of their worth, gives a reverent effect to the rich organ music and was especially good in the organ recital which followed. A number of pieces were given in this recital, played by Mr. Sutton, whose splendid musicianship was amply demonstrated in a varied programme, opening with the lofty music of Bach, the powerful measures progressing to a finale of smashing chords in the "Prelude and Fugue in F. Minor," followed by a contrast in the effective sweetness of a lullaby, the chimes ringing out over the soft voice of the organ, in McFarlane's "Evening Bells and Cradle Song." An arrangement by Lemane of one of the favorite negro spirituals, was a melodious rendition of "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," and Russell's "The Bells of Ste. Anne de Beaupre," was an odd selection, with the bells chiming through the treble overtone on a bass tremolo. Lugini's "The Voice of the Chimes" was a descriptive bit, with the chimes much in evidence, and Franck's "Choral in A Minor" was a fitting conclusion to a very attractive organ recital which put the finishing artistic touch on a very dignified and impressive service.

A note in the Church Calendar with regard to the chimes says "This set of chimes, twenty-five in number, is of the very best quality and was made by the J. C. Deagan Company of Chicago, a firm ranking first among manufacturers of musical instruments. They hang in two rows and are struck by mallets actuated by small pneumatic bellows. These are connected by wires to the consoles of the organ and are operated by electricity. The Chimes are enclosed in a small room on the west side of the organ chamber, with shutters set in the partition capable of being so arranged as to give louder or softer effects as desired. The Chimes will greatly enrich the services. They can be played like tower chimes. Hymn melodies can be played on them, and they can also be used in organ solos with beautiful effects. The chimes were installed by L. E. Morel, of Toronto."

TRINITY CHOIR IS ENTERTAINED

Songsters Visit Home of Their Leader For Social Evening.

ENJOYABLE TIME.

On Thursday night last, the members of Trinity Church choir enjoyed a most pleasant outing, when about thirty-five members motored to the home of Miss Mabel Clarry, their popular organist and choir leader, in Millbrook.

The guests were welcomed by Miss Clarry and her mother, in the reception hall of her lovely old home, where the spacious rooms, filled with fragrant flowers, were so hospitably thrown open for the disposal and comfort of the guests.

An hour was spent in rehearsal of choir music, and this was followed by impromptu games and singing.

A delightful lunch, at which Mrs. R. J. Kidd and Mrs. R. F. Downey ably assisted by pouring tea, brought the evening to a close, but not without many expressions of thanks to our kind hostess, for a most pleasant evening.

CHICAGO'S PRIDE

Press)—Undaunted by threatening skies and a stiff off shore breeze more than 200,000 people assembled in Soldiers' Field, the great memorial stadium on the shores of Lake Michigan, to witness the first public session of the twenty-eighth international Eucharistic Congress. The day began with solemn pontifical mass at the stadium altar, celebrated by Cardinal Bonzano, papal legate, before the greatest throng of worshippers ever assembled for the rites.

Every foot of standing room within sight of the golden topped outdoor altar was packed spectators. Below in the field, in front of the altar, stretched a long expanse of white—the choir of 60,000 school children who sang the mass of the angels.

To the west side of the altar were thousands of nuns, their mass of black costumes set off with white capes under black veils.

Trumpeters far in front of the altar gave the signal that the cardinal legate was approaching and then from the sanctuary came a peal of responsq from a huge invisible organ.

As the legate came down the field a wave of handclapping rolled before him, but as he passed each of the massed sections the crowd knelt silently with bowed heads to receive the pontifical blessing.

Following the legate the eleven other cardinals approached the altar, each attended by a group of papal chamberlains in red military uniforms and white plumed helmets.

Amid cheering from all sides Cardinal Bonzano, his long scarlet robes whirling in the breeze, mounted the steps toward the altar, pausing mid way to kneel in prayer. He proceeded then to the side and was seated under the red and gold canopy.

The public stadium, more than topmost tier of seats and tens of thousands jammed the field at all sides of the towering stands, clamoring for admission. So dense were the multitudes about the fields outside the stadium that the Ecclesiastical procession of priests, bishops and cardianls could not enter the field until a police squad had struggled for half an hour at the clergy gate to cut a lane three feet through the crowd. The purple clad bishops then filed slowly into the field.

Speech By Churchill Taken To Indicate Great Differences. CONDEMNS SOVIET.

Miscreants Who, Having Ruined Own Country, Seek To Ruin Ours, He Says.

LONDON, June 21 (Canadian Press)—The British Government's gentle handling of the Russian controversy in the matter of strike contributions has been attributed in some quarters to strong differences of opinion among the ministers themselves. This view seems to be borne out by the forcible language employed by Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, in a speech yesterday in which he declared frankly that it would afford him great personal satisfaction to see Russian agents thrown out of England.

He asserted that he had tried to dissuade former Premier Lloyd George from recognizing the Soviet Government, which he considered a great blunder.

Describing the Bolsheviks as "miscreants who, having ruined their own country, are tireless in their efforts to ruin ours," Mr. Churchill declared the British Empire is an obstacle in their plans for a world revolution. If they could ruin and plunge Great Britain in anarchy they would be convinced the road was clear for world butchery. But the British government is under no illusions and is keeping a vigilant watch.

"Personally I hope I shall live to see the day," said Mr. Churchill, "When either there will be a civilized government in Russia or when we shall have ended the present one filled with men seeking our overthrow."

Must Watch Russia.

"The Russian Government is indeed mistaken if it has formed the view that our inactivity at the moment means the Government is ceasing to observe vigilantly their activities here and elsewhere," the Earl of Birkenhead, Secretary of State for India, declared in a public address here on Saturday night. "I cannot doubt that usless we observe the signs of change, though none at present is apparent, it will be necessary for us to re-examine the whole question—to decide whether or not we will be well advised in retaining any degree of association with a country whose avowed purpose in every part of the world is to undermine this country's historical greatness," he said.

Unity will in all probability advance another stage at the Regular Monthly Meeting of the G.W.V.A., which will be held this evening. From all accounts this is likely to be a record meeting. No member should be absent.

On Sunday, June 27th, the annual Decoration Parade will be held, when all the graves of comrades resting in Little Lake Cemetery will be decorated. On the following Sunday, July 4th, the graves at St. Peter's Cemetery will be decorated.

During the past week, employment has been found for four comrades, two of whom were unattached.

Notification of a further adjustment of pension has been received this week, the comrade in question having been awarded a class 19 pension made retroactive from January, 1920. The total amount of the adjustment $1008.00

Official notification from the secretary of the Peterborough Exhibition Board has been received, advising that the Exhibition Ground has been reserved for the G.W.V.A. for their annual Civic Holiday sports.

It is requested that flags will be flown again on Decoration Sundays and Dominion Day, Thursday, July 1st, those desiring flags may obtain them on application to the G.W.V.A. office.

GREAT GOVERNOR-GENERAL BORN ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO TO-DAY

Marquis of Dufferin Played a Notable Part in Canada During Early Days of Confederation — Won Good Will of All Classes.

CLASSIC AND ORIENTAL SCHOLAR.

LONDON, June 21.—In many parts of the British Empire today will be recalled as the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of the first Marquis of Dufferin and Ava, a diplomatist and administrator, who swayed the destinies of races in almost every continent of the globe. Governor-General of Canada, Viceroy of India, and British ambassador to Italy, to Russia, France and other of the most important countries of Europe—few men in the whole history of diplomacy have had a wider or more varied experience than he.

Although many years have passed since Lord Dufferin served as Governor-General of Canada, the people of the Dominion still refer in terms little short of affection to the "golden age of Dufferin." His governor-generalship was marked by the highest degree of tact, honor, kindness, courtesy and political wisdom. When he assumed the functions of office five years' expereience had been had of the workings of the Dominion government.

The adherence of British Columbia had been obtained on condition that the Dominion should construct a railway to connect that Province with the railway system of Canada within a period of ten years from the date of union. The undertaking, made in haste, was found to be entirely impracticable within the limits fixed. Party spirit ran high. The new constitution, not yet consolidated, was being sorely tested. It devolved upon Lord Dufferin to settle a host of difficulties. He was uniformly successful, and much of his success was due to his strict and unwavering partisanship.

He said himself that the main duty of the Governor-General was to prevent mischief rather than to accomplish good. He soon proved a representative of all that is august, stable and sedate in government, and in the history and traditions of the country: docile to the suggestions of his ministers, yet securing to the people the privilege of getting rid of those ministers the minute they forfeited public confidence. During his term of office he won golden opinions from all sorts of men and did more than had been done by any other Briton to stimulate the activities of the Canadians and to uphold purity of the Dominion civil service. Their affections and good will he gained in an extraordinary degree.

Lord Dufferin's career in Canada was further made memorable by a tour which he made of the country, and which extended from Halifax to Vancouver. He visited nearly every place of any size, and was the recipient of addresses from representatives of seventy-four municipalities. Before leaving Canada he was elected President of the Royal Geographical Society, and in the early summer of 1878 visited Harvard University, when the degree of LL. D. was conferred upon him.

Much of Lord Dufferin's social popularity was due to his wife, the daughter of Captain Archibald Hamilton of Killyleagh Castle, County Down, Ireland. He married her in 1862. Lady Dufferin accompanied her husband on all his travels, wrote entertainingly of them, and was particularly popular in Canada, where two children were born to the couple. The eldest son of the Marquis and Marchioness of Dufferin was killed in the South African war. The eldest surviving son and the successor to the title married Miss Flora Davis, daughter of John H. Davis of New York.

Lord Dufferin was a celebrated classic and oriental scholar as well as a diplomatist. He was something of a poet, a writer of numerous books of travel, an artist of more than average ability, and a keen sportsman in his younger days.

NO ORDER TO STOP USE OF U. S. FLAG

MONTREAL, June 21. Canadian Press. — That there had been no general instructions to the United States consular officials in Canada with regard to requesting Canadian civic authorities to discourage the use of the United States flag by business concerns for attracting tourist trade from across the border, or that, if any such instructions have been issued, they had not yet reached Montreal, was indicated by W. I. Jackson, United States consul here, when informed of the action of Col. R. F. Boyce, United States consul at Hamilton, Ont., in protesting agianst this employment of the Stars and Stripes by Hamilton merchants.

POINCARE AGREES TO GIVE ASSISTANCE

In Cabinet For Sole Purpose of Making Finances Sound.

PARIS, June 21. — (Canadian Press.)—Aristide Briand relaid the corner stone of his tenth cabinet today when he obtained a promise of collaboration from former Premier Poincare in a combination dedicated solely to placing the national finances on a sound basis.

A movie photographer was requested to gather up some reels of wild animals and such like. That seemed easy.

The machine was taken out into the woods and hidden in a clump of bushes where it would see and record many things.

Well, a bear came along and went his way: then a fox came along and went his way: then a partridge came along and went his way.

"This makes me tired," said the director, "all the wild folks are tame! all they do is come along, give a grunt or a cluck and move along again. I will have to invent something that will make them act up a bit."

So the Director went and purchased some peanuts. Then he found a nice flat stump.

Now, he tied a string from the stump to a nearby tree, so that it looked like a clothesline. In fact it was a piece of fine clothesline. Next thing he did was to tie a piece of string to the line, letting it hang down. He tied six strings that way, letting them all hang down from the clothesline, about four inches apart.

Now then, to the five strings hanging nearest to the stump, he tied peanuts: but the peanuts were empty! He had taken the nuts out and had made the husks look natural. But at the end of the last string he fastened a good peanut. Then he hid with the camera.

Along came Chatterer, the Squirrel.

He mounted the stump, looked at the row of dangling peanuts, which were just out of reach. He gave a leap at the nearest one but it dumped him on to the ground. So that was not the way to do it.

Mr. Squirrel sat on the stump and scratched his head for an idea, and he found one, for he immediately tried to walk the tight rope out to the strings, but he fell off. Then he scratched his head again and tried a half walk and half wiggle, and he succeeded in reaching the first line. He let his hind legs dangle, held the clothesline under his arms, pulled up the string and found the peanut was empty. So he tried them all, one after the other, pulling the string up as a sailor would pull a rope, until he found the peanut in the last one, and ate it.

ALARMING MISHAP.

Both Rear Tires of Prince's Car Blow Out at Once.

RAMSGATE, Eng., June 21 (Canadian Press).—The Prince of Wales, motoring to Sandwich for a week-end at golfing, met with a rather alarming mishap. Both rear tires of his car burst simultaneously outside the village of Littlebourne. The vehicle swerved violently but the Prince pulled up smartly to the side of the road without accident and waited for another car which was following, and in this he completed the journey.

TRINITY PRIMARY DEPARTMENT PICNIC

Little Tots, With Teachers, Have Enjoyable Outing on Friday.

"A most enjoyable time was had by all." This time-worn verdict was again heartily voiced by approximately two hundred people last Friday afternoon, June 18th, the occasion being the annual picnic of the Cradle Roll, Beginners, and Primary Clases of Trinity Sunday School.

Buses met at the Sunday School Hall at 4.30 p.m. to convey the picnickers to the home of Mrs. Carver, on the Provincial Highway. The party consisted of 87 children, a number of their teachers and a large percentage of mothers, augmented by neighbors of the hostess, who joined them later.

The spacious grounds provided ample opportunity for games and various forms of recreation and after a bountiful supper served on the lawn, a programme of races efficiently managed by Mr. Gates, superintendent of the Sunday School, kept enthusiasm at its highest pitch until the buses arrived to take the party back to the city.

All comments were of a decidedly satisfactory type and much gratitude is due Mr. and Mrs. Carver for their generous hospitality.

Plaits And Lace Effective For Daytime Dresses

Fashion dictates stress the importance of the plaited frock, and since plaits are so smart, this little frock takes full advantage of this fact, and joins groups of plaits front and back to a round yoke. Fashion also dictates the use of much lace, and wide bands of insertion serve as a trimming for the front and lower edge of the skirt, as well as fashioning the round yoke. The long full sleeves are gathered into narrow wrist-bands, and a string belt girdles the frock at the hip line. NO. 1152 is in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years. Size 18 requires 3¾ yards 36-inch material, with 3¼ yards wide lace insertion, and ¼ yard allover lace for yoke. Price 20 cents.

The secret of distinctive dress lies in good taste rather than a lavish expenditure of money. Every woman should want to make her own clothes, and the home dressmaker will find the designs illustrated in our new Fashion Book to be practical and simple, yet maintaining the spirit of the mode of the moment. Price of the book 10 cents the copy.

SUMMER BUYING.

The household budget often goes strangely awry in the summer time. Food supplies are so apt not to be fresh even when bought, and have so little chance in the ice box as "left-overs" if they are not. Don't buy a cantaloupe which yields considerably when pressed upon. Don't buy it if it has no odor. Don't buy limp string beans, carrots, turnips or cucumbers which do not feel firm, nor cabbage which is not bright in color. Watch for bright green hulls on your berries, and do not buy meat which is not firm when touched.

BRIDAL NOTES.

If you are having a small and informal church wedding and do not care to hire a florist, why not gather together a bunch of cronies, go forth in cars, and bring back a load of daisies, buttercups, wild apple and plum blossoms, wild roses, and make bouquets of these wild blooms which are tied or tacked on the end of each pew down the center aisle where the bridal party walks?

INFORMAL BRIDAL ARRAY.

"I cannot afford to be married in white satin," writes Bride-to-Be to me. "I want a suitable afternoon outfit for a home wedding, something I can wear after I am married, something in between the white satin and the going-away suit." Nothing could be lovelier than a beige georgette dress with beige hose and slippers, and beige maline or lace hat trimmed with either a pin of coral or one very good rose-hued flower. Do not wear gloves or carry any sort of bag. The dress would be lovely trimmed with dyed beige lace to match, or plain save for some simple harmonizing jewelry worn, a good string of pearls, some coral, or one of the lovely topaz, amber, or carnelian no velty strands.

HOME-MAKING HELPS

GARDEN GOSSIP.

An outdoor table or shelf under a grape arbor or tree is an excellent place to prepare the vegetables for the home kitchen, and saves taking the dirt into the house. The spring onions, lettuces, radishes, peppers and cress should be gathered early in the morning and, after being prepared, be placed in lettuce bags and be put next the ice to be ready when needed for salads, the tomatoes pared and chilled, the other vegetables fixed after the manner of their kind.

The precious garden herbs should be gathered and carefully dried for winter seasoning. Canvas gloves save the hands while picking and handling the vegetables.

In beet season cook and pickle a jar or two each week before they get large and they will be a tender treat when the snow flies. While the vegetables are plentiful and young prepare a few jars of macedoine for winter vegetable salads. Remember that when doing up the small fruits in jam or jelly, put a few into individual pots and glasses for holiday gifts: also for the children's luncheon baskets.

When it comes time to cut the grapes dip the stems in sealing wax, then pack the bunches in a barrel or box of sawdust. Keep in a cool, dry place and they will last well into early winter.

Of course, the flower garden is always fascinating. For the woman who really gardens the furnished baskets are almost a necessity. They contain all of the small tools, like trowels, dibler, dirt fork, shears, foot rule, twine, wire, labels, small hammer and axe, bulb trowel, pruning shears and other little odds and ends sure to be needed.

If the right roses are planted the garden may be a continuous joy until frost. The bushes planted two and a half feet apart each way allows room to go between them for the cutting. Rose leaves should be used for rosewater, rose jam, rose conserves and for the rose jar.

If sweet peas are cut faithfully each day the vines will keep on bearing well into August: after that they seem to produce short stems and smaller blossoms. The more you pick nasturtiums the faster they blossom. The seed may be used for pickles.

For Summer Dancing Lace Is the Lighter Side of Style

THERE is this to be said for lace—it finishes itself in a straight skirt and trims itself throughout. It is light, it is lovely, it suggests great elegance and yet costs no more than a fine print. It is extraordinarily becoming and gives twice the effect with half the work that you have to put on a plain fabric. The laces that are being used this Summer are the fine silk laces and are usually dyed. The frock illustrated was made in a very exquisite shade of blond, with ribbon flowers in nasturtium colors at the hip. The same style is extremely smart for races and weddings made in the beige laces with long sleeves of Georgette.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncliffe

SHE DESCRIBES SOME DAINTY SUMMER PAJAMAS.

"The hottest days seems to stimulate my girls to work," Madame remarked, coming into the manikins' room just after lunch time today and finding us all busily engaged sewing.

Gaby looked up with a smile and said

"The secret of it is that the hot days make me long for some cool sleeping garments for the hot nights to follow, and I'm trying hard to finish this pair of pajamas before I go home tonight."

Madame smiled at Gaby's logical reasoning and asked to see the pajamas in question.

For answer Gaby held up a bit of gay voile, as thin as chiffon. There were little pink and blue flowers with green leaves, against cream gound, and the effect really was too lovely for words.

Madame held up, first, the completed to poprtion, then the trousers, and said

"I see you are a good, practical seamstress and know the tricks of making kimono sleeves to save time and trouble."

"Indeed, I study up on such tricks, for they mean a lot of help to the person who does most of her own sewing," Gaby answered. Then she added

"But I did make trouble for myself, because I decided the cream lace would be much lovelier if I rolled and whipped the seams where I joined it, and, of course, that took longer."

"I am glad you did it," answered Madame,

We all agreed that one of the points in making one's own underwear by hand was that it could be dainty and attractive: otherwise if would be just as well to buy cheap ready-made underwear, which wouldn't cost more and would be far less trouble.

The only point 'I argued with Gaby on was that I like straight trousers to pajamas instead of the kind caught in at the ankles with little bands, leaving a frill beneath.

Flowered Voile With Cream Lace Trim Makes These Youthful Pajamas.

Gaby answered that, of course, I wouldn't be the one to appreciate feminine frills in pajamas, for I always buy boys' ready-made pajamas at a men's clothing store and put my handwork and time on dainty combinations and step-ins. Which I don't think is a bad plan for one who can't get around to making all her clothes.

SOME FRUIT DESSERTS.

Banana Pudding.

Skin and cut six bananas and arrange them in a lightly buttered shallow baking dish. Remove the shell and pare a fresh cocoanut and grate the meat. Cover with a large cupful of rich sweet milk and let stand for fifteen minutes. Place on the stove and bring to scalding point, remove from the fire and let stand five minutes, then strain off the liquid, turn the fiber into a cheesecloth square and squeeze out all the cream. Blend a heaping tablespoonful of vanilla, turn over the bananas and bake twenty minutes. Serve cold. The cocoanut fibre can be moistened with milk and used in a rice or crumb pudding or in a custard.

Persian Sherbet.

Melt two cupfuls of sugar in a pint of boiling water, boil up, skim and cook gently five minutes, strain, and add to it, when cold, a cupful of strawberry juice, strained juice of a lemon, two tablespoonfuls of orange flower cordial and freeze, but not hard' Serve in sherbet glasses.

Strawberry Cream.

Wash, hull and pass through a fine sieve a pound of fresh, ripe strawberries. Dissolve a heaping tablespoonful of gelatine powder in a little water; add to it, when ready, the strained juice of a lemon and four tablespoonfuls of sugar. Blend the mixture with the strawberry pulp and add a half pint of whipped cream. Turn into a wet mould and set in cracked ice in a cold place to firm.

April Fool.

Pare, core and quarter a dozen tart apples. Put on to stew in a cupful of water, and, when soft, put through a fine sieve. Sweeten to taste and add a cupful of stiffly whipped cream, fold in and set to chill.

Orange Float.

Beat the whites of two fresh eggs stiff and beat into it three heaping tablespoonfuls of orange pulp. Sweeten to taste. Have ready a pint of whipped and drained sweet cream. Put the cream in a glass dish and drop in the orange and egg mixture in tablespoonfuls. Chill and serve.

Compote of Peaches.

Dissolve a half pound of sugar in a quarter-pint of water, boil gently until the syrup is rich, then add six ripe peaches, pared, stoned and quartered. Cook just a few minutes, until the fruit is slightly cooked but not broken; then cool. Dish in a high glass dish and serve with a chilled custard.

Raspberry Jelly.

Squeeze the juice from a quart of red raspberries. Add a cupful of sugar, the juice of a lemon and three-quarters of a package of gelatine dissolved in a little water. Bring to boiling point, strain, add four thinly sliced bananas, turn into a wet mould and set to harden. Serve with whipped cream.

Very smart is this green plaid suede collar, cuffs and belt ensemble for the tailleur.

SAVE YOUR TEETH

Prepared by the Oral Hygiene Committee of Canada, with which the Peterborough Dental Society is Collaborating.

THE PIVOT TOOTH.

We are referring here of course to that type of artificial crown that is attached to the tooth root by means of a metal post or dowel implanted within the root for a considerable portion of its length, thus securing a stable anchorage for the replacing crown.

There are several forms of the dowel crown of which the essential feature is that it restores in its entirety, the tooth crown. And its field of usefulness is fairly wide for it is used where frequently through disease or accident, the natural crown is lost, leaving but the root or 'stump' of the natural tooth implanted in the bony ridge.

The 'pivot' tooth, where properly employed, can pretty well approach the restorative ideal.

With the almost perfect semblance which the artificial crown of to-day bears to the natural tooth crown, both in form and shade, it is not difficult, in most cases, to simulate Nature's own handiwork.

This type of restoration has been designed perhaps, more to meet cosmetic requirements than to fill a real masticatory need. Yet, it can be of a real practical usefulness, too, for, where properly employed, it is sufficiently stable to share with the natural teeth all normal occlusal stress.

Still another advantage it possesses is that it will protect the tooth root from further exposure to disease.

Like all of man's handiwork, however, it is not without its limitations.

In the employment of this type of crown, the tooth pulp must necessarily have been sacrificed so that at once the pivot tooth receives the status of the 'pulpless tooth,' which, as has been said, is one of more or less uncertain health in many cases.

But where thoroughness of pulp surgery has been the rule, this uncertainty of usefulness may be disregarded.

A NEW EMPLOYER.

"Dear Judy, I am so glad that you have come. You know, I told you my father would be out this evening and I would be all alone."

"It is certainly sweet of you to ask me on such a slight acquaintance, Miss Meredith," I said as I followed her toward the drawing room.

As I spoke she turned and looked at me closely, and I started in shocked surprise. She looked ghastly. I had never seen such a change in anyone in my life. All the girlishness had left her mouth which had settled in lines of utmost sadness.

She hadn't expected to hear me speak so formally. I was sure of that, for as I called her Miss Meredith a mist of hopelessness settled over her eyes, and I instinctively felt that I had failed her and she was desperate. I hastened to explain myself.

But before I could do so Joan had recovered herself somewhat. She was a brave little thing, but now she looked at me reproachfully.

"What has come over you, my dear girl? Why so formal all at once?"

"I expect I am formal because when I accepted the invitation to your party I did not know that you were the daughter of my employer."

"What difference does that make?" she said quite impatiently. "You are a girl just like myself, aren't you? This morning when I left you I quite envied you. You seemed so splendidly independent and happy. This afternoon I have been living life in the raw ever since then. I have been clinging to the thought of you. If you only knew how I wanted you, Judy. I have no one else in all the world, but you."

"But you only met me this morning."

"I have known you all my life, at least I think I have. And oh, Judy, Judy, don't disappoint me. I am afraid of it since you were so formal after you knew that Mr. Robinson was my step-father, for if the truth were known I am your employer instead of him.

"When my mother died she left to me in her will the Morton Department Store among other things. She made Mr. Robinson the executor of her will and the manager of the store.

"Dad—I have always called him dad—has always been quite like a father to me, and as I have known no other father I have respected his wishes not to make the terms of my mother's will public.

"I have always wanted since I was sixteen to go into the store and learn the business. That, however, is the only thing my father has ever refused me. And I must confess I have been rather rebellious about it."

KIWANIS CLUB GIVES PICNIC FOR CHILDREN

More Than Two Hundred Gathered Together By City Organizations.

THE PRIZE WINNERS.

Rendezvous Pavilion Resounds To Children's Fun Making and Laughter.

More than two hundred children gathered together by the Salvation Army, St. Vincent's Orphanage, the Children's Aid Society, and the Y. W. C. A. were given a splendid picnic on Saturday by the Kiwanis Club of Peterborough. Members of the Club carried the children to Chemong Park in their cars, and two big loads were taken, free of charge, by the Cooney and Jopling buses.

Gathering at the park at 1.30, the children amused themselves on the swings and slides attached to the Rendezvous Pavilion until the races and sports started soon after two o'clock. Tickets had been given them entitling them to five soft drinks, ice cream, or other treats; "pop" was handed out freely; and oranges and suckers appeared at the proper moments. It was a great day for the children.

Arrangements, which were made by the Underprivileged Child Committee of the Club under Chairman Art Moffatt, were assisted greatly by Miss Lena Brownscombe of the Y.W.C.A., who was indefatigable in her efforts to attend the wants of the children.

Many of the girls went wading in the rather rough lake, while others played softball and competed in races.

Among those who helped the Club in making the picnic a success were L. W. Lebarr, who gave prizes; Boorman Bros., who gave "pop"; Walter Oke Company, who gave oranges; Low and Outram, who gave candy; Cooney and Jopling, who carried many of the children to and from the Park; and Messrs. Kimmel and Forler, proprietors of Chemong Park Pavilion, who spared no effort to make the picnic a success. Scouts from the St. Andrew's Troop assisted greatly in the races and by carrying messages and in other ways.

'PRINCESS' ERNESTINE TO PICK OWN MATE

By VIRGINIA SWAIN,
NEA Service Writer.

NEW YORK, June 21.—"Princess" Ernestine Calles, daughter of the President of Mexico, may marry an American.

The toast of the Rio Grande promises to be the rage of Riverside Drive this summer, and the twang of guitars may be heard in the land, where the motor Klaxon held sway before.

For the Senorita is in New York for a six months' visit, "looking things over." "Things" include all the phases of American life—and American young manhood, which shows willingness to be investigated.

With many trunks full of Paris clothes and rich Spanish shawls and combs and laces, Senorita Ernestine traveled northward in her father's private car from Mexico City, to be the guest of her uncle, Arturo Elias, the Mexican Consul General in New York.

She will attend a finishing school, perfect her English, and "just have a good time" all summer. She is riding horseback every day in Central Park, with former Ambassador James Gerard as her official escort.

She isn't husband-hunting, of course. But—well, she may marry an American. She blushes when she says it. Velvet trousers and sombreros are very well. But she likes the tweeds and Stetsons of the Riverside swains, and she likes their way of paying court.

The senorita has the type of beauty that will encourage American homage—the rich, creamy skin, the clear-cut features, the dark hair and lashes that stand for Castilian beauty. Strangely enough, her eyes are not brown, but quite grey, or hazel or green—one cannot tell which.

And she wears her Parisian clothes with a grace that puts to shame the flappers who will have to compete with her.

There is one thing certain—Ernestine Calles will marry for love. Her pretty mouth is obatinate when she says it.

"I am of the new generation. I am not one to marry when the family say, 'Take this one. It is best.' I choose my mate, and I marry him—quick—like that!"

The man she marries must be a good companion, and a man of means. "It is not so easy to be happy, when there is no money for things the wife has always had," she says, shaking her head so that the dangling pearl earrings wink and shiver.

Her chosen mate must be a man who works. She has no use for the idle wastrel. "Play and no work makes a man so bored and boresome. Like all cake, no bread."

The Mexican girl's dream man, she says, is not a movie hero or a matinee idol, but a bullfighter. "The girls like the man who can risk his life with a smile and a flirt of his scarf. They throw flowers at him and roll their eyes at him. But I—I have to look away, because the fight is so cruel to the horses.

"But I too like to go to bullfights. Everybody goes."

Senorita Ernestine has been out to a late dance the night before, and she must dress for another date in a few minutes.

"I have my hair cut French boyish bob," she says in farewell, "to save time getting ready for parties. I don't want to miss anything in this America."

There is just one thing she doesn't quite understand in the northland. "I smoke my cigarette, just like your girls. At home I drink cocktails one, two, three. But I haven't any flask.

"Why is it right to drink from a flask and wrong to drink from a glass in your restaurants. This funny prohibition!"

Senorita Ernestine Calles, daughter of the Mexican President, riding in Central Park with former Ambassador James W. Gerard. Inset, the senorita's new boyish bob, for which she sacrificed her Spanish coiffure.

It sears the lining of the stomach like a hot iron. Terrible colicky pains and bloody vomit come next. An endless stream of saliva flows from the mouth. The tongue is swollen and thickly coated, the breath is offensive, the lips and face are swollen, and the bowels never stop expelling their bloody stools. Collapse and death give welcome relief from the terrible suffering.

What should you do if somebody near you took poison and you could not get a doctor at once?

The doctor will use a stomach pump to empty the stomach. You can give the victim something to make him vomit. A tablespoonful of mustard in a small cup of water, repeated in ten or fifteen minutes will do this probably.

White of egg is indicated. Mix the whites of four eggs with a pint of water or milk. Give this at once. Finely chopped raw, lean meat, or wheat flour, mixed with milk, may be used if no eggs are at hand.

Keep the victim quiet in bed, with hot water bottles to keep warm. Call the doctor at once.

PARIS PRESENTS! NOVELTIES FOR DAY AND SPORT WEAR

Here are three highly useful outfits that would take care of any day event. For morning or sport wear is the smart little suit of beige tweed, with decorative pockets and side belts, worn with a green silk blouse and green felt hat. For afternoon nothing could be more attractive than the ensemble of marine blue serge with its pleats and interesting pockets and tie of tan silk embroidered in gold. The coat, warm enough for early spring and very late fall wear is of gray English wool embroidered and banded in black and collared with black fox fur. All are from Amy Linker, the famous French couturiere.

YOUR HEALTH

There are a lot of ways to die, but I can think of few worse deaths than that resulting from poisoning with corrosive sublimate. Whether taken by mistake or intentionally, this method of ending life seems to be remarkably common.

Until our rigid drug laws were passed by the various States and divisions of government, it was possible to buy this poison at any drug store. Corrosive sublimate, also called bichloride of mercury, is used to kill insects and other vermin. It is placed in solution for medical and surgical use, too.

This deadly poison has so many useful purposes to serve that it enjoys great popularity. In powder or tablet form it is found in almost every house and barn.

Known to be a deadly poison, bichloride is chosen frequently as a means of escape from this life. Those who think of suicide rarely think far enough to realize that bichloride insures a lingering and terribly painful death. It does not end life speedily, but produces the most excruciating pain which continues for days and days before death arrives.

Suicide is usually the culmination of an impulsive desire to escape unhappiness of one sort or another. While there are many cases where the morbid inclination to die has lasted for weeks and months, even years, most cases are founded on brief periods of mental misery.

As a doctor, I could give you a series of really funny tales of men and women who desired and tried to commit suicide one day and, escaping death, they called for medical aid the next day for so simple a thing as the stomach ache! Ready to die today, but scared some disease may prove fatal tomorrow—you can't explain it!

Corrosive sublimate, as the name indicates, is a corrosive, burning poison.

Hospitality In The Hall

Panels will give your hall a note of welcofme

First impressions are the strongest, they say, and as your guests receive their first impression of your home from your hall, its appearance and decoration is of vital importance.

Usually it is impossible to use very much furniture in the hall so you must depend on the walls to radiate the welcome and hospitality which you want your home to have.

There is a new type of decoration coming into vogue that can be of great help to you in relieving the severity and plainness of the hall. It is the new style wallpaper panels which are created by applying a combination field and border over a wall completely covered with design. This new, economical method of paneling is so flexible, and so easy to apply, that it can be suited to the peculiarities of any room.

If the hall is odd-shaped or slightly out of proportion, judicious paneling will give the room symmetry and not only make it much more interesting but also lend a certain dignity to the room of welcome.

The illustration above shows how attractive and hospitable informal panels of a deeply brocaded paper can make a hall whose walls would otherwise be barren and uninteresting. Even the stairway takes on new life and beauty, while the window is set off to advantage by the panel frame around it.

The ORACLE

This day we fashion Destiny, our web of Fate we spin —Whittier.

Fixed fate, free will, foreknowledge absolute. —Milton.

Ted.—You were born to bring good cheer and happiness to the lives of others. Yours is a joyful destiny and you have a liking for the fine arts, particularly acting, singing and music of any type. You are inclined to be a little self-centred and to like your own way at all times. You have an aptitude for business, commerce and finance and should do well in any pursuit along these lines. You have also a good deal of ability along artistic lines, and have an unusual quickness of perception and vividness of memory along any line that interests you mentally. You have a strong interest in religious and educational matters, and do some of your best work along these lines. You are rather narrow-minded, and should try to broaden your outlook, especially along religious lines. Bigotry is not the sign of a strong mentality. You are very anxious to help others, sometimes overdoing things in this way. You have a habit of asking a great many questions about anything that interests you. You were born on Thursday. Your color is black.

Chick.—You have naturally a good deal of heavy physical power, indicating creative power and tenacity, which may; unless developed, have a coarse, pugnacious, material side. Your life tends toward reserve and retirement and you have constantly to fight shyness and a tendency to morbid thinking. You are a natural thinker and leader, and would do well in any commercial enterprise, being naturally fitted for commercial life. Are you sure that you are not trying to fit yourself, a square peg, into a round hole? You are kind and have a good disposition, making a very loyal friend, with a capacity for keeping secrets entrusted to you by others. A promise is very highly regarded by you at all times. You are of the type that may not ever realize all your reserve forces and innate gifts. Self poise and control of temper will make you more successful. Never mingle with scolders and faultfinders, who depress you very much. Change of scenery and a certain amount of excitement are really necessary to your good health. Be careful of falls and accidents to legs, hips and feet, also be careful of your diet. You were born on Tuesday. Your colors are blue and cream. Your lucky months are March and November, your good days Tuesdays and Saturdays.

Mickie.—Although you have naturally a tendency to wandering decisions and find it hard to control your desire to vacillate, you will do best by allying yourself carefully with others in any enterprise you go into. You are of the type that is said to have a double nature, and must watch always, in order to attain any measure of happiness and success, that your higher nature is in order. You have a tendency to be dissatisfied and nervous, constantly wishing that you were doing something else and away somewhere else. You will find, as you go through life, that, no matter where you go, your own ego will give you trouble. Circumstances and change of place will do you no good, if you cannot control this trait in your nature. You would make an excellent nurse, are affectionate and self-sacrificing, with a great deal of family pride. Your worst fault is your habit of nagging, scolding and fault-finding, which, when ill, is increased to a measure that makes you very unlikeable. You are disposed to go to extremes in everything you do and should cultivate moderation, in order to retain your good health. Be careful in your choice of friends. Marry a man born in February or November. You were born on Friday. Your color is pink. The day you ask about, a Friday, your seventeenth birthday, is one for lending a helping hand and working hard.

Bobs.—You have naturally rather a conservative element in your nature, not especially adapted to new enterprises and inclined to reserve and retirement. This is not always the best or most successful type of nature. You will do best, as you go through the world, by using tact and diplomacy, rather than by the use of force. You have a very active brain and are quite energteic. You will have to fight all your life against changeableness in your disposition, against a tendency toward quick anger, jealousy and suspicion of others. You have strong ideas and original conceptions of right and wrong, and, being very independent, are not easily deterred by the opposition of others. You will never work as well under others as when left to yourself, to follow out your own ideas. You would make a good executive in any sort of establishment. You will always be a braid worker, and do better in this capacity than when engaged in any manual type of labour. Always be careful of your head, guarding against brain fever and kindred illnesses. Marry a man born in December. You were born on Monday. Your colors are steel and purple. The day you ask about, a Sunday, is one for original thought and expression and for taking advantage of every opportunity.

Veletta.—You have naturally a peace-loving, gentle nature, and belong to the class that is styled the parents of the races. Circumstances and environment predispose you to a certain amount of reserve and introspection in your daily round and this element contrasts somewhat strongly at times with your liking for other people, for you have a very strong faculty of making friends with, and liking, your neighbors and acquaintances, although you may not make many very close ties. You have a frank, energetic disposition and are practical and executive. Your own individual way of doing things often conflicts with the ideas of those around you, who are not as quick-minded as you. You should remember this, and not expect others to see things as readily as you do yourself. You will have nervous trouble in time unless you can control your tendency to rush matters to completion. An unfinished task of any type is positive torture to you. You will always be more successful in following out your own inspiration than in following the advice of others. Grit and pluck and good cheer will help you to success in life. You were born on Saturday. Your colors are gray and orange. The day you ask about, a Tuesday, is one for avoiding arguments, and undertaking nothing new, especially in social relations.

by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

BLINK SERVES LUNCH.

In came Blink with the lunch. Blink was the Dream-Maker Man's cook, you know, who always kept his hands in a muff when he wasn't cooking.

The lunch was arranged on a tea-wagon of quite unusual size.

Indeed when the Twins looked at it they couldn't help thinking of the Muffin Man's stand in Daddy Gander's Land.

"Would you like some of this?" asked Blink, pointing to a large brick of three-colored ice-cream.

"If you please," said Nancy and Nick, sitting up on the edges of their chairs.

They were glad that Blink understood English as well as Moon. Moon language was most difficult to understand.

Blink took a large spoon and two large plates and dished out most generous helpings of ice-cream, which he passed to the visitors.

"Aren't you having any?" said Nancy politely to the Dream-Maker Man.

"Oh, no! I never eat, thank you," said he. "Go right ahead."

"But why do you keep a cook then?" Nancy started to ask, when suddenly she remembered the three sons, Snoozle and Snuggle and Snore. "No doubt they eat quite a lot," she said to herself, opening her mouth wide and taking a large bite.

But the queerest thing happened! She couldn't taste one blessed thing. No, sir! The minute she put the spoon to her lips the ice-cream seemed to vanish. She tried it three times and every time it was exactly the same way. She looked at Nick and he, too, seemed to be having trouble.

"Finished?" said Blink, whisking their plates away. "Then do have some of these. And with that he stuck a large platter of cream puffs right under their noses.

Nancy took one and Nick took another and both of them started to bite.

"Everyone likes my cooking," said Blink. "The proof of the pudding is in the eating. I knew you would like those cakes. Now here is some of my famous fudge. See what you think of it."

The cream puffs seemed to disappear, and the Twins each took a piece of nut fudge instead. But it was the same as before. Not a thing could they taste.

Blink remarked that he hoped they had had a pleasant time and that they had enjoyed his cooking. Then he wheeled away the tea-wagon the way he hadcome in.

"And now, my dears," said the Dream-Maker Man, "while you have been eating I have been thinking and I have it all figured out. We shall go to the Man-in-the-Moon with Snoozle in his airplane, and ask him if we may go elephant huntihg in his forest. I have n't a doubt in the world, I mean on the moon, that there is where we shall find your lost friends."

"Won't you have to take your dream to the earth first?" asked Nick.

"The Sand Man said he would deliver it for me," said their host. "We often do favors for each other. But hark! Here comes Snoozle now."

PETES ALMOST TOSS GAME AWAY BUT WIN IN NINTH BY GREAT RALLY SCORING TWO ON TIMELY HITTING

Belleville Score Seven Soft Runs in Two Innings, Taking Lead.

FINAL SCORE 10-9.

Heavy Hitting By Heckman and Swanston Saves Game.

(By F. D. C.)

Making his first start of the season Al. Heckman, the veteran of the Petes' pitching staff, emerged with a victory over Belleville on Saturday afternoon but the fielding deficiency of his supporting cast made his task task a needlessly tough one and finally "Heck" had to win his own game with a timely hit in the ninth. The final count was 10 to 9.

The Petes won and lost the game once before it was finally won for keeps although the brand of pitching delivered by Heckman should have earned him an easy victory by a wide margin. Heck had a snapping fast ball and a neat curve and until his teamates went suddenly to pieces behind him in the seventh he had the Belleville crew well in hand.

Hitting a fly ball to Herb Wolfe is usually one of the surest ways for a batter to suicide that the history of baseball records. Yet it was a muffed drive by Wolfe in two successive innings that started Belleville on a scoring rampage that netted them seven runs in these two frames and turned a Peterboro lead of five into a Belleville margin of two, making it necessary for the Petes to go out and win the decision all over again. When you offer this Belleville team a slice of pie they usually go after the whole dishful and so it was on Saturday with the result that a game that should have been a mere exercise gallop for Heckman developed into the hottest kind of an argument with the Petes winning by an eye-lash after a drive down the stretch.

It was the first time the well known firm of Heckman and Swanston have done business this season and the Petes battery were not only a big factor defensively but their bats spelled trouble for Belleville every time they walked out to the plate. Swanston in six times up cracked out four singles, walked once and scored four runs and Heckman also up six times had two hits, a sacrifice, two walks and was robbed of a perfect average by a sensational catch by 'Hoot' Gibson, Belleville third-sacker. It was the batting of Swanston and Heckman that put the Petes back in the game in the eighth after Belleville had taken the lead and the same pair won the ball game in the ninth, Swanston punching out the single that scored Pinch-Hitter Lennox with the tieing run and then carrying the winning counter over himself when Heckman came through with a safe drive to left.

Johnny Ouellet carried the Belleville pitching burden over the full route and was never much of a mystery to the home talent who cuffed his delivery for sixteen safeties and were assisted by half a dozen complimentaries Ouellet has lost his old time smoke.

The sudden reversal of conditions in the latter stages when a Peterboro lead of 7 to 2 was turned into a Belleville margin of 9 to 7, followed by the Petes' fighting finish and ultimate victory converted a somewhat colorless ball game into a real nerve tingling affair that sent the fans away happy.

Their ire had been roused when Belleville refused to give Swanston a runner in the ninth inning after allowing Batten to run for the Petes' catcher throughout the game when he was spiked in tagging Ross in the first inning. And then, when after a long argument the game was resumed and Swanston trotted home from second with the winning run on Heckman's hit, the crowd gave the first real outburst of cheers of the season.

The victory sent the Petes up ahead of Belleville in the League race.

All About It.

Ross walked to open the game and was sacrificed to second by Weir. Harry Mills rolled to Holyman, Ross going to third. He was out when he tried to score on a short passed ball, Swanston being spiked in the play.

The Petes got two. Wolfe smashed to Ouellet and was out but Rose singled to right and Swanston cut a single past Gibson. A pass to Heckman filled the bases and Jack Hall's slow roller to Ouellet on which the batter was retired at first scored Rose. Jimmy Hall slashed a hot single past third to score Batten, who ran for Swanston. Jimmy Hall was slain trying to steal second.

In the second W. Mills fanned. Blakely got a life when Heckman's throw was missed by Harrison. He stole second but died there when Meagher flied to Helson and Hagerman struck out.

Helson opened the Petes' half with a walk and went to second when Gibson was throwing out Harrison. Holyman hit to the same player and was out but Helson reached third when Blakely dropped H. Mills' throw. Wolfe crashed a single past Weir to send Helson in. Rose rolled to Weir.

Two crazily hopping balls gave Belleville their first run in the third. The first came on Gibson's tap to Helson, the ball hopping over Helson's shoulder for a cheap hit. Ouellet flied to Rose and Ross to Holyman. Bad hop number 2 bobbed up here for when Weir lined solidly to left for what should have been a single the ball bounded off Jimmy Hall's shoulder, Weir getting a double and Gibson chugging over the home plate. Heckman then struck out Harry Mills.

Swanston walked in the Petes' half and Batten ran for him. Gibson made a sensational catch of Heckman's hard drive. Jack Hall hit to Gibson, who erred, and when Harry Mills threw to third Hall ran down to second. Peeney Mills tried to pick Batten off third but his snap throw was high and another run was in. Jimmy Hall's hard smash was knocked down by Ouellet for an out at first. Helson was hit. Harrison bounced a hit off Weir's chest, scoring Jack Hall. Holyman was thrown out by Ouellet.

W. Mills gave Belleville a good start in the fourth when he singled to right. Blakely fanned. Meagher got a life on Holyman's fumble. Hagerman, however, struck out, and Meagher was forced on Gibson's roller to Holyman.

The Petes died in order. Wolfe was thrown out by Ouellet, Rose fouled to W. Mills and Swanston was called out on strikes.

Belleville got their second counter in the fifth. Ouellet walked, to be forced at second by Ross, Heckman to Holyman. Weir singled to centre and Harry Mills walked, to fill the bases. W. Mills' long sacrifice fly to Wolfe scored Ross. Blakely popped to Helson.

The Petes got that one back in their half. Heckman walked. Jack Hall lined to Blakely. Jim Hall slashed a single through the box. Helson single off Blakely's foot, filling the bases. Harrison beat out a roller to Harry Mills, scoring Heckman. Holyman was out on an infield fly and Wolfe raised one to Weir.

In the sixth Rose tossed out Meagher and Holyman took care of Hagerman's fly. Gibson got a life when Swanston dropped his foul and took advantage of it by singling to centre. Ouellet struck out.

Rose began the Petes' half by bunting safely, W. Mills' throw pulling H. Mills off the bag. Swanston singled over second, Batten running for him. Heckman sacrificed the pair along and Jack Hall sent Rose in by a solid single to left. Jim Hall rolled to Blakely and Batten was caught between third and home. Helson struck out.

It was 7-2 against Belleville when they went to bat in the seventh. Then came the fireworks. To start with Wolfe missed Ross's easy fly and Holyman booted Weir's roller to put two foemen on the runways. Harry Mills smashed a hot one at Rose and a scientific double play was the result via Holyman and Harrison, the latter making a fine pick up of a low throw. Peeney Mills cracked a single to centre to score Ross. Blakely singled between short and third to send W. Mills to third and the batter then stole second. Meagher singled over Holyman's head, scoring Mills. Jac Hall dropped Hagerman's fly to right after a run, and Blakely and Meagher scored. Hagerman stole second but died there when Gibson flied to Jack Hall. That made it 7-6.

The Petes died quickly. Blakely threw out Harrison, Holyman was taken care of by Weir and Harry Mills and Ross grabbed Wolfe's smash to centre.

More trouble in the seventh and it started in the same way. Ouellet fanned but Ross raised a fly to center which Wolfe obligingly dropped. Weir singled to left and Harry Mills between short and third. W. Mills' hot single to centre scored Ross and Weir, putting Belleville ahead and a passed ball scored Harry Mills a moment later, making it 9 to 7. Blakely struck out and Meagher flied to Holyman.

The Petes got one back. With Rose out of the way Swanston singled through short and Heckman stabbed a single to right. Jack Hall walked, filling the bases. Jimmy Hall was called out on strikes but Helson rose to the occasion and cut a single past Weir to score Batten, running for Swanston. Harrison fouled to Harry Mills.

Belleville expired in order in the ninth. Hagerman rolled to Holyman, Gibson flied to Wolfe and Holyman tossed out Ouelett.

Lennox batted for Holyman and started the winning rally by smashing a hit off Blakely's shins. Wolfe sacrificed. Rose cracked one to Ouellet and was safe when Harry Mills dropped the pitcher's throw. Rose stole second. Swanston came through with his fourth hit of the game, a hot single through short, scoring Lennox with the tieing run, but Rose was out at the plate when he also tried to score. On the throw home Swanston reashed second. Belleville refused to allow the injured catcher a runner and there was a long argument. When play was resumed Heckman won his own game by a hard smash to left field on which Swanston carried the winning run over the rubber.

KEENE HURLER PITCHES WELL

FINAL SCORE 6-2.

KEENE, June 21. — Pitching his second game in three days Max Robertson turned in a brilliant performance when he beat Cognawagas six to two in an East Peterboro League ball game on Thursday.

His teammates supported him in fine style, only one error being chalked up against the Keene team, H. Renwick, the third baseman, making a high throw to first after making a good stop of a hard hit ball.

Freddy Whalen in centre field made two running catches while E. McCarthy played a star game at first base.

The boys could do very little with Robertson's shoots, only four hits being gathered off his delivery, one of these being of the scratch variety.

I. Fletcher led the Keene batters with two clean doubles, while E. McCarthy also got a double. Robertson struck out 8 while Smith for Cogs struck out 3.

A good crowd was in attendance and was treated to a good ball game.

Keene is now sure of at least a play off for the first half.

McGill Started Seige

Captain Griffine and Roy Black tossed for the choice of ends which fell in favour of the former who compelled the visitors to face the sun. A smart bit of work by McGill resulted in the Thistles goal being besieged until Wade headed clear, then he let Mayette transfer the ball to the other end where Ward accepted a well placed centre from the right wing to hit the inside of the crossbar and bounce back into play. Bayman coming in the nick of time to have the advantage of the Thistles defence that was down the field but Griffine nullified their efforts when close upon the goal.

Ward Headed Through

The visitors left made progress into the Thistle area when a clever combination movement by McAnnaly tested the goal-keeper with a rocket drive. From the goal-kick, the local boys right wing upset the Omemee full backs when Hutton gave his partner the opportunity to centre. Quick as a flash, Mayette lifted the ball across to Ward who headed into the vacant spot out of the reach of Fife. This set back to the visitors made play lively in midfield tactics, in fact, Omemee forwards dominated the situation for a while, and tried long shots at Griffine but failed to penetrate. Then they indulged in individual tactics that were unproductive, except hard knocks. A foul against McGill came as relief to the Thistles. Anderson sent his forwards back into the visitors' territory to see Mayette give his teammates a chance to score but McPhate lifted the ball into Fife's hands.

Tried to Walk Ball Through

Play swung from end to end, and the visitors half-backs never settled down to offset the attack which failed purvey properly to their forwards. An individual run and clever tactics by McGill was well worth success but he hung too long on to the ball, thereby giving the opposition the neessary time to beat him, as he tried to walk into goal with the ball. A few minutes later, Black dribbled his way into shooting distance but Scott stopped his left foot drive that re-bounded back to Buchan who banged the ball up between the two backs. They did not notice the alert Thistles forwards coming at a fast pace. McPhate deceived the whole defence when he scored with a dropping shot in below the bar. Omemee responded with dangerous raids on the local goal but could not make any impression on Scott and Anderson defence while Wade was always present to prevent a tally when they did get close inside. On one occasion Leiper sent a rising shot across the goal to Black on the left wing who picked the corner of the upright with a low ground drive, Griffine making a brilliant stop. The Thistle again got going, McPhate, playing the left wing himself, worked his way up on the visitors' defence and was a thorn in the attack at all times, even when he did miss two chances to score. No matter what the losers did, they could not get the pep and finish around the goals. A round of applause greeted McGill when he time and again dribbled his way through the defence but that was all the length he got. A foul against Anderson caused some excitement to Griffine's charge. The Thistles' mastermind did not like the Omemee's sand-dancing while in possessioin of the ball. Two or three Omemee men having a shot at goal until Wade headed through the bunch and sent his attack away again just as half time arrived. Half time: Thistles 2, Omemeeo.

Half Time

After a well-merited rest, the teams opened up at a fast pace in which the local half-backs responded with close dribbling and intervening tactics that held the fast going Omemee forwards when in proximity of goal. Wade, Buchan and Bromley were the mainstay in anticipation of play that was fololwed by passing at the opportune moment. It was in this department that the visitors were very weak, at no time did they assist their forwards. Bromley beat two of the opposition to carry the attack on the left with McPhate.

Ward Again Scores

Combination between the two Thistles players caused anxious moments to the visitors' defence when Bayman tackled the outside-inside left, he lifted an accurate pass to his centre forward who fell when tackled but he gained possession smartly to let drive past Fife for the third counter at close range. In the succeeding play both ends were visited, McGill and Black being very noticeable in operations which had almost nothing of the nature of combination—but high calss individualism which always proves a detriment in any team.

Ward Got the "Hat Trick"

After the successive bombardment against Griffine's goal, Wade took the ball from Black as he was in the act of shooting and swinging the ball to the Hutton-Mayette wing they baffled the defence in the corner. From a timely slip-back to Ward from Hutton, the former broke through the full-backs at a burst of speed to give Fife no chance with a rocket drive for his third goal of the game.

McAnnaly Scored

When the fourth goal was scored, Roy Black went into full back position in place of Bayman who occupied the inside birth. The latter worked in harmony with Nightongale at outside left to manipulate the ball to their success. Getting inside the defence Bayman shot a low grounder across to McAnnally who made sure with his fast shot.

Omemee Missed Penalty

Encouraged by their success, Omemee laid down a barrage of shots at Griffine who had no difficulty at any time in clearing, until a penalty was awarded Omemee. After some minor alignments in regard to the position of the goal-keeper, McGill who was trusted with the kick, failed to convert. The remainder of the game was more or less a defensive kind, set up by the Thistle to hold the opposition outside the shooting distance.

Full time: Thistles, 4; Omemee 1.

HONORS GO TO MAILEY.

MANCHESTER, Eng., June 21 (Canadian Press). — Following a week of atrocious weather, in which two scheduled games, including the first Test match, at Nottingham, were abandoned, the touring Australian cricket team again got under way Saturday when they began their three-day game with Lancashire at Old Trafford Park here. A huge crowd, estimated at 23,000, witnessed the opening stages of the game, and saw the Red Rose collapse disastrously before the redoubtable Mailey. Despite the fact that the wicket was in excellent shape for the batsmen, the Lancastrians were unable to take advantage of the many opportunities offered, the only player to make a stand being Hallows, who was dismissed by a catch to Everett off Mailey at 85. Makepeace, who was expected to punish the Australian bowling, put up a poor exhibition. Only three batsmen got into double figures, Hallows, Ernest Tyldesley and Duckworth. The rest counted a zero, a one, two, a pair of fours, a six, eight and a nine. The entire side was dismissed for 149 runs, and the honors against them went to Mailey, who secured seven of their wickets for 74 runs.

It was a sad procession to the wicket and back to the pavilion that followed the dismissal of E. Tyldesley. The combination between Mailey and Oldfield, the wicket-keeper, was too good. Oldfield being responsible for retiring three men out of their ground.

On their own side, the visitors did not make any too strong a showing when they went to bat, and but for the slashing game of Macartney, aided by Andrews, the Australians might have had rather a thin time. However, Macartney's 62 did them a world of good. This player will continue with Richardson to-day, the Australian score standing over the week-end at 124 for five wickets.

ABE MITCHELL—PLAYING MASHIE.

The great point to remember in playing the mashie is to hit down on the ball. Now, that is not easy with a flat swing. The downward direction of the club-head on to and just behind the ball imparts spin, whereas with a flat, traveling club the club face cannot possibly hit down. Rather must it hit along the turf, causing the ball to run after it pitches. In fact, it is just that flattish movement which is given to the clubhead when run is wanted on the ball.

In the mashie shot the aim is to pitch the ball up without any run. This will only be secured by imparting spin, and you cannot do that when you stand too far from the ball.

Thus we might safely say that the mashie should be fairly upright in the lie, and whatever its lie, it ought never to be pressed down at the heel, leaving the toe off the ground.

And the mashie pitch is done, not by the movement of the body, but mostly by the arms. The left knee may bend a trifle, but the feet should remain on the ground all the time and even at the finish.

SECRETS of STARS on INSIDE BASEBALL

as told to BILLY EVANS

BY RAY SCHALK.

To my way of thinking, the most difficult play for a catcher to make, at least it is for me, is thwarting the double steal.

I have in mind a double steal with a runner on first and another on third. In most cases the thought of this play is to score the runner from third, regardless of what happens to the man going down to second.

The inning, the score and various other conditions often enter into the proper execution of this play.

If with two out a run is needed to even the count and the man on third is a clever runner, while the batsman is rated just an ordinary hitter, often the runner from first is permitted to reach second unmolested. It is considered good baseball to gamble with the batter rather than attempt to get the runner at second.

This doesn't always hold true, but, as I have said before, the score and the status of the batter is alwasy given serious consideration.

Certain runners do so with their heads down, as we say in baseball. On such runners a bluff throw to second usually causes them to break for the plate and the rest is easy.

Sometimes a slight hesitation will drive the runner back to third and remove temporarily that threat and still give the catcher a gambling chance to get the man at second.

In reality the method of handling the double steal with runners on first and third is largely molded on the reputation the man on third has as a base-runner and the ability of the batter.

So many things must be figured in this play that I regard it by far the hardest one for a catcher to properly pull.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

(By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.)

R. B. Kennedy, editor of The Whittier (California) News, says

That during the past ten years communities have profit edfrom the organized efforts of the members of Chambers of Commerce.

That today many Chamber of Commerce boards face a seeming indifference on the part of the members.

That the Chamber of Commerce with a "service fund" in the bank accepts resignations from its members too easily.

That the time often comes when the contributors of the "service fund" resent the use of that fund for general expense.

That the man who is a member of a service club has forfeited the right to use the excuse "can't afford" the dues of his Chamber of Commerce.

That the man who does not contribute to the extent of paying regular dues is lacking in enthusiasm.

The success of nny Chamber of Commerce rests on the individual support and enthusiasm of its members.

BILLY EVANS Says

Diamond Repartee.

What do the umpires say to the players when they chase them?

Also what do the players say to the umpires to so ruffle the officials that they give them the air?

Such questions are often fired at me after some game in which certain athletes are given the gate for the rest of the afternoon, either because of too much conversation or pantomime.

As a rule the expulsion of a player is made on the spur of the moment. When such is the case, some snappy repartee is usually passed between player and umpire.

Here are the facts of several episodes that have already been staged this season, with the player ultimately wending his way to the club house.

For various reasons names will not be mentioned.

Sarcastic Comment.

A star infielder, trying for a double play, making the force at second himself and throwing to first for the other half of the play, failed to get the runner at second, according to the umpire.

The runner going to second was one of the fastest in the majors. The attempt at the double play should have been started by throwing the ball to the man covering the bag.

Either as an alibi, or because he believed the umpire had erred, the player made a mad rush for the umpire and jostled him about considerable as he spoke thusly:

"If a runner was ever out, that baby was at second base. I always thought you were blind, now I know it." The star infielder in question has a very large pair of feet and doesn't like to be kidded about their size.

"I don't know how you missed the base with those 'dogs' of yours," replied the umpire, "but you did, and officially the man is safe." Other players then proceeded to join in the argument.

Much Used Alibi.

"I refuse to stand for such a decision," said the player, as he deliberately delayed the game despite the warnings of the umpire.

"Well, you can sit down in the club house for the rest of the afternoon," replied the umpire, "you're through for the day."

"That's the way with all you umpires,' said the player, "you make a mistake and cover up by putting the ball player out of the game." I might add that alibi is an old one, not so good.

"Why don't you put yourself out of the game?" was the player's parting jibe.

"When you decide you are no Charley Paddock and make those plays properly, I won't have any reason to give you the gate," was the way the umpire ended the debate.

Player Passes On.

"You missed that one," remarked the coacher at third as he went to his bench after the umpire had called the batter out on strikes to end the inning with the bases filled.

"You've been missing them all afternoon," added the player as he continued on his way to the bench.

"Well, I am not going to miss you for the rest of the game. You can take your shower and good riddance," replied the umpire.

Sherlock Holmes Stuff.

A player on the bench is taking issue with the plate umpire on almost every pitch.

The umpire at third base, realizing the umpire calling balls and strikes isn't sure just what player is creating the confusion, decides to do a little detective work himself.

He finally discovers the player doing the kicking. At about the same time the player is aware he has been spotted.

"Well, who are you looking at?" asked the player as the third base umpire gave him a stony stare.

"Nobody but you," said the umpire, 'and I am sick of it. Get out of here."

The wrong Idea.

A star pitcher is disagreeing with the umpire on his judgment. Opposing players are constantly asking the umpire to look at the ball, believing the uncanny breaks it is taking must be due to trickery.

The star pitcher, displeased at the umpire's judgment and peeved at being forced to throw the ball to the umpire at stated intervals for inspection, loudly yells.

"There is nothing wrong with the ball, it's your eyes."

"Just for that I can see you on your way to the club house," replied the umpire; "the big idea in pitching is to fool the batters, not me."

Diamond Disputes Decided

By BILLY EVANS

Fly ball bounces out of the hands of the left fielder but is recovered by the center fielder, who is backing up the play, before it touches the ground. What are the rights of the baserunner to advance on such a play?

All baserunners on such a play shall have the right to advance the moment the ball strikes the hands of the first player handling the drive, in this case the left fielder.

If the runner properly holds his base until the ball strikes the hands of the first player who tries to handle the ball, he will have done his part.

In some quarters there exists the belief that the runner shall not leave his base until the ball strikes the hands of the player who actually completes the play. This is wrong.

RING VETERANS

Do former ring stars make efficient referees?

Recently friends of Richie Mitchell beseeched the downtown haberdasher with a view of having him steal some of Walter Houlehen's thunder. The idol of a few years back only smiled, and answered.

"Perhaps some day I will act as third man in the ring."

Other near champions of the Mitchell type have tried their hand at refereeing, and, in most cases, have been successful. America today recognizes Patsy Haley as the king of the third-men in the ring. In his prime, the New Yorker was a lightweight of note, and always a runnerup for the title while under the management of Billy Gibson.

Rivers A Referee.

It has been many years since Jose Ybarra, more familiarly known as Joe Rivers, the Mexican thunderbolt, strutted on a ring floor. He's back again in his doe-skin footwear, but is not attempting a comeback, although he has just observed his 34th birthday anniversary. Little Jose received his referee's license in California several months ago, and has worked in many coast classics before the large clubs, according to Tom Andrews, who acted in an advisory capacity to Jack Doyle, and formerly was matchmaker at the Olympic Auditorium, Los Angeles.

"Rivers today is heavy, weighing between 160 and 170 pounds, but as a referee he still can step around with the fastest boxers in California," says Uncle Tom. "He is a great referee, and I would not be surprised if he were called upon to handle some of the most important outdoor cards in and around Los Angeles when the outdoor season starts there."

Both Went Down.

When the little Mexican's thoughts are of referees he no doubt recalls that memorable afternoon when he fought Ad Wolgast for the world's lightweight championship in 1912. The Cadillac, Mich., Dutchman and his hated rival both connected for the chin in round 13. Joe and Ad went to the floor—OUT. The referee, however, helped Wolgast, who was then champion, to his feet, while he toiled the fatal 10 over Jose, whose courage always was doubted.

The Wolgast defeat was the last important start for Rivers and, although he furthered his campaign for another title trial, he finally fell by the wayside. Always a big money earner, the Mexican, however, ended his colorful career with no reserve funds. Joe did not squander his money, but invested in real estate long before the first boom struck the West Coast, and now, according to Andrews, is beginning to realize his first profits on his financial gamble of more than a decade ago.

Papke At It.

Rivers is not the only former great of padded fists to take to referee work. Billy Papke, once world's middleweight champion, also has joined the field. The former Illinois Thunderbolt, as Papke was known, is comfortably fixed financially and the referee work is merely a sideline with the conqueror of Stanley Ketchel. Billy won the title in 1908, only to lose it to the Michigan Assassin a couple of months or so later.

In Papke's time middleweight champions were not so fortunate as ye moderns to receive five-figure purses, but what money he did save Billy placed into an orange ranch at Altedena, a suburb of Pasadena.

"If all boxers would wind up their careers as did Papke," added Uncle Tom Andrews, "they would be looked upon by all as a credit to boxing." Billy really is enjoying life. On his ranch are 1,000 orange trees and he has adjoining property of about two blocks long, which he is cutting up into residential districts. He'll not be in want for the rest of his days."

OVERCOMING FOUR HOLE LEAD HAGEN WINS FROM MITCHELL

Outcome Was in Doubt Until the Seventy-first Hole.

AMERICAN WAS LATE.

Was Twenty-five Minutes Late in Turning Up.

WEYBRIDGE, England, June 21 (Canadian Press)—Walter Hagen, United States pro, was today receiving the congratulations of friends and supporters on his victory Saturday over Abe Mitchell, who is considered the greatest British golfer. Hagen won two and one in a seventy-six hole match for five hundred pounds a side and the unofficial world's championship at match play.

Hagen on Saturday overcame a lead of four holes taken by Mitchell on Friday and with a masterly putter downed the mighty Britisher.

The struggle was so closely fought with the outcome never certain until the seventy first hole, that although all admitted that the victory was clean cut and well deserved, few British golf experts can be found who won't still hold that Mitchell is the best of them all.

In yesterday's play weather conditions undoubtedly favored Hagen, and complained that he could not hold his clubs. To remedy this, he wore a chamois glove in the afternoon, but he stuck by his heavy coat.

Hagen was as much the master of Mitchell yesterday as Mitchell was of Hagen Friday. The United States flag carried by the marker was usually in front of the Union Jack, which marked Mitchell's drives while at approaching, pitching and putting Hagen undoubtedly was the superior.

One incident in connection with the match has not been passed without comment. Hagen's late arrival at the first tee caused the greatest indignation among Mitchell's friends. The match was due to start at 10:30, but Hagen did not appear at the tee until 10:55.

"This delay on a highly sensitive player like Mitchell, who was ready to strike off at the proper time, was considerable," says the Evening Standard, "and while one cannot attribute Mitchell's bad start to what happened, Hagen's wonderful feat would have been more convincing and satisfactory in other circumstances."

The same paper, in bold faced type, declares: "According to the unwritten law of golf, Hagen should have been disqualified."

whose bronzed face fairly beamed in the sunshine, but Mitchell sweltered

CANADIAN TEAM REACHES LONDON

RANGES KEPT BUSY.

LONDON, June 21.— (Canada's team of selected riflemen to compete at Bisley next month in the annual tournament of the National Rifle Association arrived to-day.

Although the National Rifle Association meeting does not commence until July 5, the Bisley ranges will be busy from next Monday on, with the annual respective shoots of the navy, army, marines, air force and territorials.

LADIES' SOFTBALL ON WEDNESDAY

Manager Strickland of the Hope Ladies' Softball Team, which plays here at the Riverside Park, on Wednesday evening, at 6 o'clock, is very much elated over the fact that his team defeated Danforth on Friday night, by a score of 8—5, before one of the largest crowds that ever saw a softball game in Toronto.

The C.G.. girls had a good practice on Saturday, and are in fine condition for the game, which should be fast from start to finish.

Manager Pilling says he would like the fans to remember that the C.G.E. girls have had only one game this year, and that the Hope Ladies' team, which is coming here, have had a number of games so far this season, but even in view of this fact he expects his team will win the game.

Business Manager Moore of the Danforth Club and Grace Childs, pitcher of the Danforth team, are coming along with the Hope Ladies, who are bringing six touring cars and will be met by the officials of the C.G.E. team and taken to the Y.W.C.A., where they will be served with a light lunch before the game.

Dot. Mortimer, c; Babe Vincent, p; C. Taylor, 1b; A. Evans or D. White, 2b; M. McLaren or A. Logan, 3b; E. Greenhalgh, ss. The outfield will be looked after by C. Conners, V. Langton, F. Greer, M. Mortimer, M. Nixon, M. Todd and A. Janeway.

RECREATION.

GEORGE ADE.

When the world famous humorist isn't grinding out funny yarns, you may expect to find him doing a round or so on the links. George likes his golf, they say; in fact, enjoys a good game just as much as the reading public does his stories. That's saying plenty, too. He's shown brushing up his game at French Lick Springs.

MASTERSON AND WOOD TO START

Opening Thrill in Battle For City Intermediate Honors To-morrow.

COGS LOSE AGAIN.

Plenty of excitement is promised the fans at Exhibition Park tomorrow night, when Raybestos and Crescents meet in the opening game of the City Intermediate series of the East Peterborough League. Crescents will start Casey Masterson, with Rishea or Brioux behind the bat; Biffer Ranger will be at first, Marchen at second, Hall at short, Scully at third, and a capable outfield will complete a strong line-up.

Raybestos will use Carl Wood and Delahaye for battery work, Lew LeBarr at first, Moore at second, Cameron at short, and Nicholls at third. Oscar Nicholls, Rogers and McIntyre will perform in the garden.

Cognawagas go to Keen tomorrow night for their first game of the second half with the Otonabee team, and will play at Exhibition Park on Friday evening with Curve Lake. The crowds at President Denne's popular playgrounds are being treated to some very interesting baseball.

Curve Lake gave Cognawagas another jolt in their week-end East Peterborough League fixture which the Indians won by the score of 11 to 8. Merritt Taylor supplied the punch that won the game when he crashed out a circuit drive with two on in the last frame. Muskrat started the twirling for Curve Lake, but when the Cogs took an early lead, Taylor relieved him. Half-way through the contest Curve Lake broke loose and scored seven runs.

AUSTRALIANS LEAD.

MANCHESTER, June 21.—(Canadian Press.)—At lunch to-day the scores in the cricket match between Australians and Lancashire stood: Lancashire first innings, 149, Australians, first innings ,262 (for six).

Alma Rubens portrays the "Gilded Butterfly," Linda Haverhill, a beautiful young girl who has been raised to think the world owed her a living. After her father's death she finds they have been living on funds borrowed from his friends and relatives and that all her surroundings are sham.

She becomes cynical and after her fiance proves to be a fortune hunter, she goes heavily into debt and leaves for Monte Carlo to forget her troubles. She loses all her money at the gaming tables and is on her way to Switzerland to join John Converse, to whom she is heavily in debt, when she meets and falls in love with Brian Anestry.

This proves to be a turning point in her life—and from then on she tries to live differently and more economically. How she succeeds in spite of her early training constitutes the rest of this fascinating picture.

Upward Move Continues Despite Stiff Money Rate

NEW YORK, June 21 (Canadian Press).—Speculators for an advance retained control of price momement in today's stock market, which was featured by a revival of activity and strength in oil shares. Temporarily stiff call money rates failed to check the upward movement.

Unusually high current earnings formed the basis for the advance in oil shares; Maryland, Maracaibo, and Californian Petroleum all sold two or more points higher, but heaviness developed in Union Oil of California on a denial of merger reports.

Equipments were bought on reports of large railway inquiries.

Dr. J. J. Craig Tells Local Rotarians of Kiwanis' Montreal Sessions.

NOTABLE SPEECHES.

Canadian Night One of the Biggest Features of Convention.

Peterborough Rotarians heard many interesting facts about their sister service organization, Kiwanis, at their regular weekly luncheon today, when Dr. John J. Craig, president of the Peterborough Kiwanis Club, gave a splendid resume of the recent Kiwanis International Convention, held at Montreal.

Dr. Craig, who was neatly introduced by Rotarian Dr. M. A. Morrison, told the Rotarians of the motor pilgrimage of some twenty local Kiwanians to Montreal and then passed on to review the principal events of the convention which was attended by thousands of Kiwanians from all over the continent.

The speaker told of interesting features brought out at the convention conferences, notably in connection with the musical side of club programmes, gave a brief synopsis of the principal speeches delivered at the convention; the speakers including Sir Henry Thornton, head of the Canadian National Railways, and Rabbi Wise of New York, and described the wonderful programme given on Canada night, a programme that made a lasting impression upon the thousands of American visitors present.

The thanks of the Rotary Club were extended to Dr. Craig for his splendid address upon motion of Rotarian Dr. Murray Fraser.

Past President J. H. Seels told his fellow members of the progress of the Rotary Carnival during the week of July 5th. "We're going to start with a bang on the Monday night," declared Rotarian Seels, who stated that a big parade would be the opening feature, while on Wednesday there would be a softball tournament under the supervision of Rotarian Chris. Graham for the Rotary Club of the district.

Rotarian Tom Dutton announced that everything was ready for the opening of the Y.M.C.A.-Rotary Boys' Camp, and that there would be forty boys in camp next Monday morning.

In Peterborough Churches

AT ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL.

Taking his text from the Epistle of St. Paul to the Romans, 8: 18-23, Rev. P. Butler spoke at the morning Masses at St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday from the verse, "I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy of the glory which shall be revealed in us."

Rev. Father Butler drew an analogy between the systematic search for success undertaken by the man of business and the similar rule of life which should be followed with regard to success in spiritual matters. Knowledge was necessary to the successful progress of any business undertaking, and was equally necessary to those who were ignorant of the truths necessary to the salvation of the soul. Enthusiasm was the second point stressed by the speaker, and the man interested in his spiritual welfare should be animated by a holy zeal based on knowledge of his religion.

Application was the third point. St. Augustine had said that while God had created man without his consent. He would not have him without his co-operation. Many obstacles stood in the way of success in spiritual ways, as in material matters, and our adversaries, the world, the flesh, and the devil, were augmented by sickness and sorrow, disease and suffering of many kinds, as well as the evil inclinations of a man's heart.

Sacrifice was the final point emphasized. Just as it was essential to make sacrifices to attain worldly success, so sacrifice in working for the salvation of the soul was an absolute necessity.

EVERY MAN HAS DOUBLE

Everyone has at least one double somewhere in the world, and doubles are always blood relatives, though they may be extremely distant ones. These recently announced theories of Professor van Bemmelen of Groningen University, Holland, are attracting wide attention in Europe.

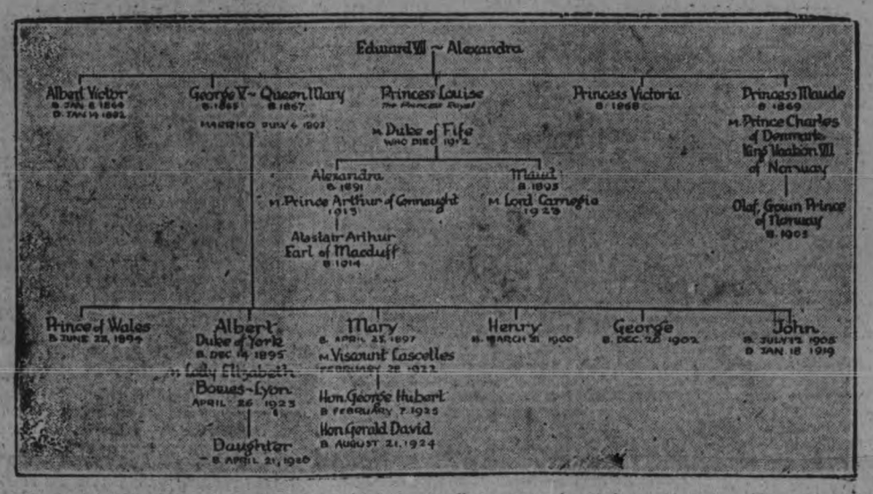
In every case of striking physical similarity studied by the professor, says Popular Science Monthly, a common ancestry was proved. Accordingly, says Doctor van Bemmelen, if you resemble closely one of the world's great men, you can properly claim blood relationship. He points out, however, that this is not strange, since if one goes back eight generations a man has 256 ancestors, and in thirty generations, 1,000,000 forbears.

There are a number of striking instances where men in ordinary walks of life closely resemble famous men in physical appearance. Judge Charles Bull of Reno, Nevada, is a "second Lincoln" in looks, height and weight. He is six feet four inches tall, weighs 185 pounds, and his features are remarkably like Lincoln's. When the late Warren G. Harding was President, George de Papalie of Brooklyn, N. Y., was often pointed out by startled passers-by as the chief executive.

Many doubles of the Prince of Wales have been discovered, but the one said to resemble the British heir most closely is J. A. Garrow, an assistant purser on a great ocean liner. The resemblance of James H. McCabe, a Brooklyn attorney, to the late Woodrow Wilson, has been commented on often.

Attracting almost as wide interest as Professor van Bemmelen's theories are the recent experiments made by Dr. E. O. Manoiloff of Russia. By color solutions and blood tests, this savant is said to have been able to diagnose with startling accuracy the dominating racial ancestry of men he never has seen. At a recent clinic he examined blood samples from 202 persons of various races and nationalities, and without seeing the subjects is said to have diagnosed correctly the race to which each belonged.

WINDSOR FAMILY TREE



The family tree above shows the relationship of the little daughter of the Duke of York to the other members of the House of Windsor. The little girl is in the direct succession to the British throne, and should her father the Duke of York, ever come to the throne she would become the heiress apparent. The table shows the children of the late King Edward and the late Queen Alexandra and their descendants.

THE STOCK MARKET

The action of the market following the sharp break in prices Friday afternoon shows most clearly that stocks are in strong hands and that a definite campaign for much higher prices is under way. There may be some irregularity at the start of the week; this will not be of long duration. The market is absolutely on weak spots and the stock of those companies with big surpluses will set the pace for the whole advance. Stocks continue in strong hands, and those who have been rather skeptical of the advance thus far are swinging into line on the constructive side.

Demand sterling $4.86 3-16, lire $3.60¼, francs $2.85½.

WHEAT

CHICAGO, June 21 (Canadian Press).—Wheat values took an early swing downgrade here today, largely in sympathy with easiness in the Liverpool market and on local and commission house pressure, little attention being given by the trade to reported rains in the southwest.

After starting at unchanged figures to 7-8c off, wheat values here underwent a further decline all around. Corn and oats followed in the wake of wheat, and on prospects of better weather over the corn belt. Provisions were influenced by weakness in grains.

Weakness of the Liverpool market was reflected on this side of the Atlantic.

MINES

TORONTO, June 21 (Canadian Press).—Dome Mines scored a net advance of 75 points in trading on the Standard Mining Exchange today. After opening 35 points up at 14.10 it closed at 14.50. The market was wide and trading continued active throughout the session after a strong opening.

Vipond Consolidated, Teck Hughes and Baldwin were active. Teck Hughes was unchanged after opening up one point. Baldwin showed fractional gains. Activity was demonstrated in Amulet with the close at 1.28, three points up. Lake Shore was up 10 cents per share at 11.35. Barry Holly gained 1-2 point, closing at 46.

INDUSTRIALS

TORONTO, June 21 (Canadian Press).—Prices were firm and trading fairly active on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. An upward movement on Wall Street was slightly noticeable in Industrials and in Canadian Pacific. Smelters, generally a leader, was conspicuous by its absence during the session. Rail and Traction securities exhibited the greatest activity. Canadian Pacific opened one point up and closed at 163 1-2 for a net gain of 2 1-4. Brazilian showed the greatest volume of sales, opening up 3-8 and closing at 97 1-2 for a net gain of 7-8. Barcelona was also active, opening up 1-2 and closing up one point at 32. International Nickle repeated its consistent activity of the past week, closing up 1-4 at 37 1-2. Twin City was down 1-4. Duluth Superior showed a net gain of 7-8 closing at 32 3-8. Goodyear gained 3-4 at 94 3-4. Massey Harris Preferred was up 3-4 at 94 3-4.

Dominion was the most active bank stock gaining one point at 212. Commerce was off one point and Royal was up 1-8. Dome was up 50 points from the previous close, closing at 14.25.

Dominion's Control of Foreign Affairs Again Discussed in Parliament

Delegates to Imperial Conference Should Be Enabled to State Attitude Of Canada Towards Empire's Treaties

Premier King Makes Statement in Connection With Resolution Intended to Deal With Relationships Between Mother Country and Dominion.

POSSIBILITIES OF FUTURE TROUBLES IN EUROPE DISCUSSED BY PROGRESSIVE AND INDEPENDENT

Henri Bourassa Supports the Motion, But Declares He Would Prefer Bond With Britain to Annexation to United States.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 22—The House of Commons yesterday afternoon was called upon to approve a resolution presented by the secretary of state, which dealt with the question of negotiation, signature and ratification of international agreements. The house was called upon to consider further that his majesty's Canadian ministers "advise full ratification of a treaty or convention affecting Canada, or signify acceptance of any treaty convention or agreement involving military, or economic sanction, and that the approval of the parliament should thereto be secured."

Imperial Conference

The prime minister explained the purpose of the resolution, stating that another Imperial conference had been called for October of the present year and the Canadian delegates should be in a position to state the position of the dominion. Furthermore the resolution would indicate that the Canadian parliament had passed upon the stand taken.

As to the first part of the resolution asking approval of the action taken in the imperial conference in 1923, Mr. King stated that the other dominions had approved. He thought it advisable to put on record the manner in which the decisions were reached.

He referred to the halibut treaty with the U.S., the negotiations being conducted by a Canadian minister of the crown given the necessary right by his majesty. It seemed only proper that a treaty affecting one part of the empire should be negotiated by that part alone. The Canadian position taken at that time had been done in a manner approved by the imperial conference which went still further and laid down that it should be the future procedure.

E. J. Garland (Progressive, Bow River) expressed his regret that the Prime Minister had not in the course of his speech made a more definite pronouncement respecting his views on the Locarno treaty. Other colonies of the empire had done so. Mr. Garland then entered into a lengthy discussion of negotiations respecting the various treaties since the war.

Treaty of Locarno

The treaty of Locarno involved commitments in regards to German boundaries, said Mr. Garland. For instance there was the question of the Saar Basin. At present the basin was under the control of France, but the treaty provided that in fifteen years the inhabitants of this particular part of the country would declare by plebescite whether they wished to become part of France or of Germany. If they voted for the return to Germany, there would almost inevitably be bad feeling in France. Great Britain would be in the position of supporting a treaty, the provisons of which were creating ill feeling in the country with which she was allied during the great war.

Cause of Wars

Mr. Garland hoped that Canada would not become a party to the Locarno treaty. He felt that it was a treaty which might involve the British people in future European wars. He did not believe that Canada, by becoming a aprty to such a treaty, would put herself in a position to help Great Britain or Europe. Canada should remain free to act as she saw fit to act. In 1914, Canada had acted. She should remain as free as she was in 1914. Canada did not require the shackles of a treaty to ocmpel her to do what she thought was right.

A New Experiment

J. L. Brown (Progressive, Lisgar) said that the British Empire was a new experiment. There had been other empires in past history but they had been held together by force. Force was not the binding factor in the British Empire. He believed that the bonds of love and affection were infinitely stronger than treaty bonds, said Mr. Brown.

"Canada's destiny must be determined by the people of Canada as expressed by the will of this parliament," Mr. Brown declared. It was inconceivable that Canada should allow her course to be determined by people on the other side of the Atlantic Ocean. He expressed disappointment that the leader of the opposition (Mr. Meighen) had not spoken and given the House a clear statement of his attitude on this matter.

Mr. Bourassa ridiculed the idea that there could be one policy for all parts of the Empire. Could Canada have the same interest in the frontiers of Irak as the oil interests of England Inevitably, different parts of the Empire found themselves concerned with different matters. Were the members from British Columbia, for instance, prepared, in the interests of England, to admit to Canada Hindoos, Japs and Chinese? No, they were not. In South Africa, there could be no English or Dutch policy,—there must be a South African policy. In Canada, there must be a Canadian policy.

The one imperial idea had marred the future of Canada, said Mr. Bourassa. In the old days, when the population of Canada was but a struggling handful of French colonists, the one imperial policy had resulted in bribing the Indians.

Growth of Rivalry

The imperial British policy and the imperial French policy had resulted in the growth of hatred and economic rivalry between French Canada and the British Colonies to the south. Because Great Britain and France were at war in Europe the colonies of both countries were at war in the new world.

Mr. Bourassa said that if the time came when there must be a choice between annexation to the United States and British Imperialism, he would choose the latter. At present, Canada should declare that she was

G.W.V.A. UNITED ENTERING UNION

Standing Vote Shows Local Branch Unanimous — Secretary's Resignation Refused.

COMMITTEE NAMED

There was a splendid meeting of members of the G.W.V.A. last night in the hall of Murray street, and, in response to an open meeting, five non-members were present.

The discussion centred around the entering of the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League, reports being presented by Past Commander G. G. Winterbottom and D. G. Lawrie, who were present at the convention held recently. In a standing vote the members declared unanimously in favor of entering the Legion.

Secretary S. Whatley, who has rendered good service for many years in the G.W.V.A., tendered his resignation, in the interests, he said, of unity. Spontaneous applause greeted the motion of G. G. Winterbottom and R. E. Layfield that the secretary be asked to retain the position until unity is consummated and the motion carried by a unanimous standing vote.

A committee of five, headed by C. H. Ackerman, was appointed to further preparations for entering the Legion and to arrange social activities for the local branch during the period of transition.

Commander J. Abraham, who presided, reported that during the winter $500 had been spent in relief work, and of this amount 85 per cent. had gone to non-members of the G.W.V.A., and only 15 per cent. to members.

HOTEL KEEPER ORDERED TO PAY GIRLS' WAGES

Case Against J. Eastwood, of Buckhorn, in Lakefield Police Court.

HIRED $30 A MONTH.

Complainants Discharged on Refusing To Work For $25.

(By a Staff Reporter)

LAKEFIELD, June 22. — Four girls, all from Toronto, who were hired at a Toronto employment agency to work at J. Eastwood's Hotel, Buckhorn, and who were discharged without receiving any money a few days after their arrival at the hotel formed the basis of a police court action which was heard here before Magistrate O. A. Langley yesterday.

The charges in each case read "for payment of $30 wages earned and which he refused to pay."

His Worship allowed two of the girls the amount of four days' pay and the remaining two, two days' pay with costs of $11.90 in each case.

V. J. McElderry asked for an adjournment in order that he might bring H. Jones, the man who engaged the girls, to Lakefield. His Worship said that he did not feel disposed to grant it owing to the small amount entailed, and in addition, he said, it would mean bringing the girls from Toronto.

Lizzie Dunn, one of the complainants, stated that she was a housemaid, and lived in Toronto. On June 8, accompanied by Bessie Berwick, she went to the Wood Employment Agency in Toronto. She told the man in charge that they would like to be placed together. He told them, she said, that they could be placed together at Lakefield and asked them to call back at 5 p.m. the same day with any other girls they could get, as he had positions for five girls. She, Betty Berwick, Chrissie Cameron and Elsie Sharrod went back that afternoon.

When they got to the employment agency, she said, J. Eastwood, the defendant, was there. He said that

Tucked In Bathing Suit Offends Beach Magistrate

NEW YORK, June 22.—United News. — The encyclopedia on fashion and etiquette will have to be amended next year, because Magistrate Folwell, who interprets in Coney Island, does not like the tuck-in.

This is not to say that his magisterial dignity is offended when a child is tucked into bed, but when a lady tucks her bathing shirt inside of her bathing trunks, and sports her tucked-in habiliments on the famous beach it is an affront to jurisprudence.

"Next time you go bathing wear your uppers on the outside," the judge told 17-year-old Lillian Gesenter as a fashion hint, yesterday. "It's being done in our best families."

One hundred other girls, arrested on the same charge, will apear before the magistrate this week.

BELLEVILLE, June 22. — The honor of the first presidency of the Eastern Ontario Chamber of Commerce, newly organized here today, falls to Peterborough. Mayor Holloway was the choice of the nominating committee of county representatives this morning and was installed as president at the continuation of the first annual convention this afternoon. The Peterborough delegation is composed of Mayor Holloway, Aldermen Ackermen and Hancock, City Clerk Armstrong, and G. A. Gillespie, president; F. G. Stinson, secretary, and James Dalton of the Chamber of Commerce.

The agenda for this afternoon's meeting includes a resolution from Stirling requesting the Provincial Government to connect Foxboro in Hastings County and Peterborough City with a Provincial highway.

A Campbellford Council resolution asks the C.N.R. for a gasoline-electric service between Peterborough and Belleville.

Eastern Ontario plans today the establishment of a sectional Board of Trade which has been successfully functioning for years. CARDINAL GIVES GREAT CREDIT TO CANADIANS

French Catholics Have Assisted Greatly in Present Congress.

MENTIONS LINCOLN.

Offers Weight in Gold For Chairs President Carved For Priest.

CHICAGO, June 22 (Canadian Press).—Their weight in gold was offered by Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago yesterday for any one or all of the six chairs Abraham Lincoln carved for his friend, the French priest, Father St. Cyr. "Don't let any one tell you that Abraham Lincoln was an anti-Catholic," Cardinal Mundelein told the French section of the Eucharistic Congress, "one of his closest friends was Father St. Cyr, a Frenchman." Cardinal Mundelein visited the section with Cardinal Bonzano, Papal Legate.

Cardinal Mundelein said:

"After all, there are no people to whom we owe more for their demonstration of faith than to the French," he continued. "It was a French priest who said the first Mass on this soil, and a French priest who gave the first report of our growth here. And today the success of our Eucharistic Congress is due in a large measure to the help we have received from the French. Montreal and its Archbishop gave largely of time and experience to help us. And so, also among the thousands with us there are none more devout than those from French Canada."

Cardinals Have Part

Six of the twelve princes of the Roman Catholic Church here for the 28th International Eucharistic Congress ceremonies have a leading part on today's programme, which includes a general meeting of the Congress at Soldiers' Field.

Sectional sessions continue through the day, with men's meeting at night in the Municipal Stadium. Dr. J. J. Guerin, M.P., St. Ann's, Montreal; Governor Al. Smith of New York; Mayor William E. Dever, of Chicago; and other lay Catholics stressed a note of tolerance in an address at the banquet of the English-speaking Knights of St. Gregory last night. The meeting closed a day of impressive pageantry and ceremony.

Progress in Canada

Telling of the Roman Catholic in Canada, Dr. Guerin said: "It is growing at a great pace. Catholic families in Canada often number ten and fifteen, so that our numerical strength is forging steadily ahead. We are penetrating the United States. There are three million Canadian Catholics in the United States and as their family ideals remain the same, we are becoming steadily more numerous here. Race suicide is unknown in our midst, because of the ideals planted in childhood.

"Divorce is also virtually unknown among Canadian Catholics," Dr. Guerin said.

NEW SPONSONS HOLDS UP CANOE

Local Man Invents Detachable Apparatus To Prevent Upsets.

AID IN RESCUES.

An attachment for canoes which he claims would eliminate such accidents as the drowning accident on the Otonabee on Sunday has been perfected by William L. Sharpe, of 412 George Street, and W. Goodwin, of the Goodwin Machine Tool Co., and will shortly be placed on the market. It takes the form of a detachable sponson which, its inventors claim, will absolutely prevent a canoe from upsetting or sinking. Mr. Sharpe backs up his claim with photographs, one showing himself sitting on the edge of a canoe which is listed badly but remains perfectly dry, and others showing a canoe filled with water but held up by the sponsons.

The sponsons are of waterproof canvas, filled with kapok, and are fastened just under the gunwale of the canoe by means of special hinges attached to a rod in the upper edge. As soon as the canoe starts to tip they swing out and form an air space which adds to the already great buoyancy of the kapok. A pair of the sponsons weighs about seven pounds.

An added advantage is a strip of canvas tape along each sponson, which provides a grip for anyone who falls out of a boat and needs support. With the sponsons attached it is possible to climb in over the side of the canoe, while the man who is numbed by cold water can hook his arms through the straps and remain there even after consciousness has gone.

Mr. Sharpe stresses the value of these sponsons to hunters, trappers and tourists who have valuable equipment in their canoes, but mentions that a ducking with one's clothes on is inconvenient even to the best of swimmers.

U. S. SUB CHASER ASHORE IN STRAIT

Fear That Vessel Manned By Naval Reserves Will Be Total Loss.

MACKINAW CITY, Mich., June 22 (Canadian Press). — A United States submarine chaser with a crew of twenty-five Green Bay, Wisconsin, Naval Reserves on board, early to-day was being lashed by the waves while fast on the rocks of Mackinac Island in the Straits of Mackinac. There was a possibility that the boat might be pounded to pieces.

The craft went on the rocks late yesterday during a gale which swept Lake Michigan. There is little anxiety for the safety of the crew.

Police Chief Newhall Credits Improvement To Chief Constables

Only Fifty Per Cent. of Applications For Parole Were Approved After Inspector Wallace Told Views of Chiefs—No Quarrel With Personnel.

EXTRA-MURAL PERMIT ALLOWS ONE TO OVER-RIDE HIGHEST OFFICIALS

Chief Newhall Elected To Executive of Chief Constables' Association—Long Service Recognized — Has Been Twenty Years in Peterborough.

Referring to a Toronto Telegram interview with Dr. A. E. Lavell, chief officer of the Ontario Parole Board, in which he was questioned regarding the complete support given regarding Inspector William Wallace's charges of abuse of the parole system at the Chief Constables' Convention in London, Chief of Police Samuel Newall told The Examiner today: "There is not a Chief Constable in Ontario that finds any fault with the paroling of prisoners—it is with the system. Not one word was said at the Chief Constables' Convention regarding the personnel of the parole board."

Many people, the Chief said, are confused by the word parole. "The main fault is the extra mural permit which was brought out during Mr. Raney's regime in 1921, and which practically permits one man to go over the heads of the highest authorities in Canada.

Chief Newhall drew attention to an article in a recent issue of The Telegram, under the heading of "Parole Board Pays No Heed to Charges," which quotes Dr. Lavell as saying, "We pay no attention to Inspector Wallace."

"Who is Dr. Lavell?" asked Chief Newhall. "Is he the whole Ontario Parole Board and can he afford to ignore all the paid executive officers of the cities in the Dominion when they are unanimous on this much discussed question?" he said.

The Bone of Contention.

Another statement attributed to Dr. Lavell to which he took exception was: "We wish they knew a little more about parole." "What I want to know," said Chief Newhall, 'is why he did not add 'extra mural permits' and give the very thing which is causing all the trouble. The trouble is we know too much about parole and extra mural permits.

I see where Dr. Lavell states in the same interview that at the last meeting of the Board at the Guelph Reformatory one hundred applications for parole were handled and less than 50 per cent were approved by the Board. Can Dr. Lavell state that since Inspector Wallace voiced the opinions of the various Chief Constables at Winnipeg last year, this statement of opinion is not the direct cause of less than 50 per cent being approved?" asked Chief Newhall. "Dr. Lavell is quoted as saying: "There are always some people who can run another person's business better than their own," and, if he is quoted aright, let me distinctly state that there is not a finer or more shrewd officer in the Dominion or in the United States than Inspector Wallace. He is not trying to run another person's business, but simply doing a public duty in looking after the interests of the citizens' lives and property, and his stand at the convention was thoroughly endorsed by every member in attendance there."

Co-Operation.

Another statement attributed to Dr. Lavell is: "We have had excellent co-operation from the majority of the police officials of Canada, including General Williams, chief of the Provincial police."

"I wish Dr. Lavell had been present on Thursday last at the convention," Chief Newhall remarked. "He would then have had an opportunity of seeing and hearing whether he had co-operation from the majority. I was rather surprised to hear of General Williams being included

R. J. BREYFOGLE IS HONOR MAN

Peterborough Well Represented at Dartmouth Graduating Exercises.

WITH DISTINCTION.

HANOVER, N.H., June 22. — (Special to The Examiner).—Dartmouth closed its 167th academic year to-day by graduating the largest senior class in history, conferring degrees of Bachelor of Science and Bachelor of Arts.

Graduating exercises started early this morning with the class assembling at the senior fence. The impressive academic procession formed with the senior class, followed by the college president, the trustees, recipients of honorary degrees, members of the Faculty and Re-union Alumni. Upon reaching Webster Hall the class heard the commencement addresses, after which the degrees were awarded by the College Dean.

The men to whom Dartmouth gave its diploma came from many states and from all parts of the country. Included among them was a prominent Peterborough, Ontario, young man, Robert Joshua Breyfogle, who was awarded a degree of Bachelor of Science with distinction. Peterborough was well represented in Dartmouth's traditionally impressive commencement ceremonies, her honor man playing a most important part in the class day exercises of yesterday, especially the solemn sachem oration, a custom held over from the days when Dartmouth was an Indian school.

The traditional sachem oration is delivered before the Alumni and guests at the bema, and from here the seniors move alone to the old pine at the foot of Thartlem Tower, where each in turn delivers his farewell to the old tree. Clay peace pipes are then distributed, and the seniors have their last smoke together, breaking their pipes on the stump of the old pine when the bowls are empty. It is a solemn ceremony, which lingers long in the memory of a Dartmouth man. Breyfogle enjoys the distinction of joining the Dartmouth Alumni roll from the largest classes ever graduated, larger by more than one hundred men.

PIANO PUPILS GIVE RECITAL

Do Great Credit To Themselves and Teacher.

VOCAL SELECTIONS.

A pleasing recital by the piano pupils of Miss Bessie Elcome, A.T.C.M. was held in the hall of the Conservatory of Music last evening, with a good attendance. The pupils, the majority of whom were of junior years, played very well, acquitting themselves with great credit to themselves and to the careful, painstaking tuition of their teacher. The majority of the selections were played from memory. At the conclusion of the programme, a bouquet of roses was presented to Miss Elcome by her class, the presentation being made by little Jean Howson.

The pupils were assisted by the Misses Helen Lytle and Jean Padget, vocal pupils of Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park, whose songs, with accompaniment by Miss Gwen Donley, made a pleasing interlude in the instrumental programme, which was as follows:

Trio, "Dancing Fairies," Jean Ackerman, June Best, Eleanor Brown; "The Merry Bobolink," Marguerite Hamilton; "The Little Prince," Ruby Milburn; "Vesper Bells," Jack Telford; Trio, "Playtime, Jean Howson, Betty Preston, Helen Reid; "Le Roi du Village," Edward Huffman; "Musette, June Best; "In the Row-boat," Helen Reid; "Sonatina in G. Major," Eleanor Brown; "L'Avalanche," Jean Howson; "Courante," Laura Edmison; Trio, "The Paper Chain," Donald McHoull, Melville Robinson, Orville Huffman; "La Jeunesse," Sadie Levine; "Elfin Dance," Jean Dawson; "A Curious Story," Marion Wood; "Valse, Op. 12," Margaret Warne; "Prelude, Op. 28, No. 20," Barbara Ackerman; "La Parisienne," Ruth Barnes; Trio, "Coquetterie," Barbara Ackerman, Elizabeth Mulholland, Margaret Warne; "Gipsy Rondo," Helen Bonney; "Valsetta, Op. 70, No. 1," Jean Robinson; "San Remo," Elizabeth Mulholland; "La Scintilla," Margaret McCulloch; "Rainy Weather," May Thorn; "Nine Variations in A Major," Fern Rahmel; "Scottish Dances," Margaret Johnston; "Second Mazurka in B. YOUR HEALTH

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

A charming girl with big blue eyes, like the brightest bit of delftware you ever saw, told me she was cross-eyed when she was a child. She was worried for fear she might still have "crooked eyes."

It wasn't hard for me to decide they were not crossed. They were big and bright and straight as a die.

What happened that a girl could be cross-eyed when she was little and that her eyes could be straight in her twenties?

Every child is born with little, short eyes. Babies are little in every way, so their eyes are little, of course.

In order to see things as they really are, the rays of light which enter the eyes must focus on the retina, just as the rays going into a camera are focused on the plate or film. If the camera isn't properly focused the picture is blurred and distorted.

Except for one thing, every infant and little child would have blurred and distorted sight, because the eye of early life is too short for the rays to fall upon the retina. The one thing preventing this uncomfortable state of affairs is that nature has given the child a powerful focusing muscle. By making great effort in using this muscle the rays of light are made to focus on the retina.

But this does not explain the reason for the cross-eyed condition. How does that come about?

When you and I turn our gaze from looking at an object far distant from us to one a few inches from the eyes the change requires that the powerful focusing muscle must be made to work hard. By this effort the image of the thing we look at is made clear and distinct.

But each of us have two eyes. It isn't enough for the focusing to work: each eye must be made to look straight at the object. This requires perfect team work, but unless there is such teamwork one eye will point at the object and the other will wander off to one side or the other. Then cross-eye texiss.

Sometimes glasses will do away with the powerful focusing necessary to make each eye see clearly. At the same time less effort is required to bring the two eyes into proper position as regards each other.

My blue-eyed friend, fortunately for her, fell into good hands when she was little. She was given the right kind of glasses. Wearing them gave good sight and overcame the tendency to cross-eyes at the same time.

When she grew her eyes grew, and after a while she needed the glasses no longer. Her sight was good without them and her eyes are straight as mine.

The first thing to do with a child who begins to appear cross-eyed is to find out if glasses will overcome the trouble and straighten the eyes.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

BETTY TAKES A TRIP WITH GOCOMEBACK.

When Betty looked up from her study book and spied two black eyes necking at her from behind the rose bush she gave a squeal of delight and, jumping up, caught the elfin's hands.

"Oh, Gocomeback, you dear," she cried, "I'm so glad you came along. I just can't seem to remember my lesson. It's on the city of Teheran. That's in Persia, you know."

"Just where I was going," laughed the elfin. "Come along and maybe that will help you to remember your lesson," and before Betty could ask any questions she was sailing through the air, over mountains and seas.

When Gocomeback at last stopped near a great wall Betty knew it was the wall surrounding the Oriental city of Teheran.

"That's Called the 'Drum Tower'."

"Yes, you're right," laughed Gocomeback, "this is Teheran. It has twelve gates." He led Betty into the gate nearest them.

The houses were nearly all made of mud, with low, flat roofs. The streets were thronged with dark-skinned people, most of them wearing gay-colored turbans. The garments worn by the men were of gorgeous colors, while the few women Betty saw wore loose black garments, with a linen veil over their faces.

"Did you notice the gate we came in?" Gocomeback asked, turning around to look at it again. "That's called the 'Drum Tower'."

"Qnd why do they call it that?" asked Betty, looking at the great tall tower above the gate.

"Because every evening at sundown a band plays there and the music is terrible," replied Gocomeback. "Now I want you to see a beautiful palace."

He led Betty up to a great mud wall and showed her the beautiful gardens surrounding a palace.

They entered the palace and Betty saw the most beautiful room she had ever seen. The tables and chairs were overlaid with beaten gold. Here she saw the crown jewels, a most wonderful collection of gems.

"This is the Audience Chamber," whispered Gocomeback. "One of the most gorgeous rooms in any palace in the world."

It was all so wonderful that Betty was sorry when Gocomeback said it was time to return home.

"Now," he laughed as they arrived in America, "if you'll read over your lesson again, then tuck the book under your pillow when you go to bed tonight, you'll remember it much better tomorrow," and before Betty could ask any more questions the wee elfin had disappeared.

Betty sat down on the steps and read her lesson over again. That night she put the book under her pillow and, sure enough, the next day Betty had the best lesson in the class.

LIKE A MAN.

I guess a dad's a sort of pest at morning, when he's gettin' dressed. With heaps of trouble he seems blest —"I'm shy a button on my vest."

By little things he's oft delayed and, as result, a fuss is made. He always needs the good wife's aid—"The collar on my shirt is frayed."

He has a tough time getting by. While dressing he will puff and sigh And ere he's through you'll hear him cry, "Hey, mom, come help me tie my tie."

Then, when he's set, to hie down town, you'll find him searching all aroun.' No wonder pop gets mother's goat. "Say, where the heck's my hat and coat?"

Drive thy business; let not that drive thee.—Franklin.

Arthur McCrea, of Toronto, an Omemee old boy, was also present and received a hearty welcome from his fellow brethren.

Following the exemplification of the Master Mason's degree by Lorne Lodge, Wor. Bro. Arthur McCrea presented to the Lodge two large group portraits of the Past Masters of the Omemee Lodge. As an appreciation of this gift, Wor. Bro. R. J. Patterson, on behalf of the Lodge, presented their former brother with a beautiful Past Master's jewel.

Following these ceremonies a banquet was held in the Presbyterian Sunday School room, where ample provision had been made by the ladies of the church.

The banquet hall was artistically adorned with Union Jacks and the tables looked exceedingly pretty with their snowy linen and cut flower decorations. The menu provided was an elaborate one, and ample justice was done by the one hundred brethren to the tasty food provided.

With Ruling Master Wor. Bro. E. R. Corneil as chairman, the following programme was given, Mr. Stanley Magee presiding at the piano:

Solo by Mr. Hubert Lowes, of Mount Pleasant; toast, 'The King'; toast, "The Grand Lodge of Canada in Ontario," proposed by Wor. Bro. Sutton, of Peterborough, and responded to by Rt. Wor. Bro. Hall, of Lindsay; trio by Bros. L. Brooks, L. A. Southworth, and W. Bro. C. R. Corneil; presentation of the working tools of a smoker Mason by Bro. A. Campbell of Lindsay; toast, "Visiting Brethren," responded to by Wor. Bro. Hornsby of Lindsay, Wor. Bro. Ross of United States, and Bro. Crichton of Lindsay.

During the evening short addresses were given by several American visitors who are enjoying a holiday at Fee's Landing, which were thoroughly enjoyed.

A few of the visiting brethren were as follows: V. Wor. Bro. Philip Morgan, Ford Moynes, A. Campbell, M. Hornsby, Ross, F. S. Crichton, C. V. Mulligan, H. Wood, F. MacFarlane, L. Wickett, B. Porter, A. J. McBride and others of Lindsay: K. Griffin, R. Bottum, R. Junkin, Bigley and others of Bobcaygeon; C. Larkin, A. McCrea, Toronto; Dr. N. H. Sutton, Albert Jones, R. Allan of Peterborough; J. Gilbert, Cambray; B. Horton, Cleveland, and many others from Lakefield, Saskatchewan and United States.

KLANSMAN HELD FOR BLOWING UP BARRIE CHURCH

William Skelly, a Shoemaker, Said To Have Confessed Crime.

MEMBER OF KLAN.

Has Lived in Barrie For Only Few Weeks—Arrested in Toronto.

BARRIE, June 22. Canadian Press—Suspicions of the hand of the Ku Klux Klan in the recent attempt to blow up St. Marys Roman Catholic church were given color yesterday by the arrest of William Skelly, a member of the order upon a charge of committing the outrage.

Skelly was taken into custody by Inspector John Miller of the Provincial Police. His capture marks the culmination of ten days of police investigation into an affair which at first left no clue of its perpetrators. Skelly, who was arrested yesterday, admitted that he was a member of the order. He is a native of Ireland, and had only been a resident in town for some three weeks, where he had been employed by a shoemaker.

Confesses his Part.

TORONTO, June 23. Canadian Press. — William Skelly, suspected of being implicated in the dynamite outrage at Barrie, was arrested here yesterday on a street corner by the Provincial police, and taken to Barrie last night. He is said to have told the Provincial police authorities at headquarters that he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan, and that he had been instructed by that body to carry out the destruction of the church.

UNION OF CHURCHES IS COMMEMORATED

St. John's United Church Holds Special Services on Sunday.

CAMPBELLFORD, June 22.—To commemorate the union of the United Church of Canada St. John's United Church held its first anniversary services on Sunday, Col. the Rev. William Beattie of London, Ont., preaching at both services. The altar and choir loft were profusely decorated with flowers, and the choir rendered special music, both morning and evening.

Rev. Mr. Beattie gave an interesting talk to the children before his sermon in the morning. He took as an illustration, the Israelites sojourning in the valley of Shure, and told the children that the fault with youth is they are dwelling in the valley of "too-cock-sure," and will not take the advice of elders.

The choir sang an anthem, "O Worship the Lord," Mrs. F. J. Smith taking the solo part; Miss Kathleen Connor sang a contralto solo, "Teach me to Pray"; Miss Helen Wood and Mr. G. W. Lucy gave a duet, "O Divine Redeemer," and the choir sang another anthem, "Was there ever kindest Shepherd."

Rev. Mr. Beattie took as his theme in the morning, "Privilege in Service," contrasting the difference between a sense of privilege in doing something one wants to do, and a sense of duty in doing something one has to do. He strongly urged all to cultivate a sense of privilege for the benefit of mankind and further the work of the church.

In the evening Col. Beattie gave a splendid address, "The Man Beside the Brazier." The choir sang two anthems, Miss Helen Wood taking the solo part in "This is a Faithful Saying," and Mr. W. Henson singing a solo.

The services were largely attended, and all enjoyed the helpful messages of Rev. Mr. Beattie. Rev. Mr. Daniel presided at the evening service and Rev. Mr. Elliot spoke a few words of appreciation to Rev. Beattie for his services and kindness in coming to Campbellford.

LEAGUE NOT DEAD FOSTER ASSERTS

Replies To Statement By Senator Casgrain About His Order.

OTTAWA, June 22 (Canadian Press).—In the Senate last night, when Sir George Foster moved that an order of his regarding the League of Nations be placed on the order paper for Wednesday, Senator Casgrain said that it was a pity not to have the matter before the senate. "If we had a free evening we might have a pleasant time talking about the League of Nations before it dies a natural death," he said.

"My honorable friend is looking for a corpse that has not yet materialized," replied Sir George.

not prepared to arm her youth and sacrifice her resources for any foreign policy in which she had no direct interest. Mr. Bourassa stated that he believed in developing in the minds of all Canadians a calm sense of duty towards this country, "The only part of the British Empire for which we are responsible morally, politically, socially and economically."

Agreements After Discussions

L. S. R. Morin (Liberal, St. Hyacinthe-Rouville) in supporting the resolution, said it was reasonable that agreements should be entered into only after full discussion and approval by parliament. Locarno would be a typical treaty with which the House would have to deal. In that pact it was left to the Dominions to signify their acceptance or otherwise Canada had refused to adhere to the Geneva protocol on account of the military commitments. Surely, there was no further reason why Canada should accept the Locarno Treaty. The Dominion should decide its course when each occasion arose. The country's obligations to the Empire could be adequately fulfilled though external commitments were limited as much as possible.

T. L. Church (Conservative, Toronto Northwest) objected to the resolution. It was based on "Separatism," he said. The representatives of Canadian Government should be able to go to the conference prepared to help in finding a solution of these problems as they came up. Canada should "stop whining" and complaining, he said, and remember that the privileges of citizenship in the British Empire involved responsibilities. Australia and New Zealand had recognized that fact more fully, and he hoped the Government would take an active part in the agenda of the conference and not "sit back" and let other people do the work.

Sure way of Ending corns

Don't tolerate the discomfort of corns a day longer. You can end them painlessly — and so easily! Plunge your feet into a hot Radox foot-bath and afterwards you will be able to lift your corns clean out.

Radox is better than all the old-time half-measures. Unlike cutting and plastering, it gets to the root. The real source of the pain is removed. Here is a letter from one who has proved the value of Radox.

"After the first foot-bath my feet felt much easier. I could walk much farther than usual without my feet feeling heavy and sore. With continual use my corns and all hard skin vanished as if by magic. My feet are now free of all old foot troubles. I still use Radox Bath Salts, and shall continue to do so."
18th December, 1925. P.R.

When you put your feet into a foot-bath containing Radox the salts soften the hard outer layers of the corn, and the oxygen which Radox liberates enters the pores, opens them, and penetrates further and further, carrying the corn-softening salts right to the root of the corn, which is thus loosened so that it can be lifted out bodily. The life-giving oxygen leaves the feet clean and healthy.

W.M.S. HOLDS TEA AND HEARS ADDRESS

Millbrook Ladies Guests at Home of Mrs. J. D. Hunter.

MILLBROOK, June 22.—Mrs. J. D. Hunter was hostess for an enjoyable afternoon tea, under W.M.S. auspices, at her home, Javan, on Friday afternoon, a number motoring over from Millbrook for the gathering.

The group coming into the Auxiliary of the United church since last June, from the Presbyterian church, has met all its allocations, a final call for supplies for a small bale being met, financially, by the receipts from the tea.

Hereafter all Woman's Missionary work will be merged, entirely under United church auspices.

Mrs. McKenzie, of Knox church, Peterboro, was the speaker, some years' experience as an organizer with a deep heart-interest in the work combining inspiration and instruction in her message.

Not every member can sing, or speak, or lead in prayer, at the missionary meetings, Mrs. McKenzie said, but all can respond to the call for help with supply work without needing any special talents, and all find it a privilege to give something for a bale.

A brief and illuminating survey of the 18 schools, and 16 hospitals, under W.M.S. control, in Canada, was given by the speaker; the difficulties at the beginning of the work, and the needs of the field today, being clearly set forth. Usually the hospitals have a ten-bed capacity, but the largest and best, at Canora, the gift of the late Mrs. Hugh Waddell, of Peterboro at a cost of about $50,000, has sixty beds. "Our workers are holding the fort of Jesus Christ in the far away places," was an outstanding thought as distances were spoken of, one station being 150 miles from a railway.

The three "goes" of the Master in Matthew 28th chapter, were emphasized as a direct appeal to Christian womanhood; "go quickly and tell his disciples"; "go and tell my brethren"; "go ye and teach all nations"; the promise, "Lo, I am with you always", being the guarantee of guidance, blessing, and strength. "If we respond to these 'goes' our country will be truly Christian, glad in the knowledge of Jesus and His love. I have faith to believe that we are going to move forward and measure up to the obligations that confront us."

Mrs. (Rev.) F. H. Howard spoke briefly on the importance of the foreign work, since without the women missionaries, particularly as doctors, the women of heathen lands cannot be reached.

Mrs. Smith, formerly president of the Auxiliary at the Centreville Presbyterian church, was in the chair, and added the message, "the King's business requireth haste," as she expressed the sincere thanks of the gathering for the fine address Mrs. McKenzie had given.

Mrs. P. Stinson contributed a solo, "Believing Prayer", and Mrs. Sayles and Mrs. Stinson a duet, "Hark, 'tis the voice of the Saviour" before the formal address, and at its conclusion Mrs. Sayles sang, most appropriately, the solo, "My Task."

Mrs. Hunter, assisted by members of the group, served tea, and a most enjoyable and profitable time was spent round the tables, personal conversation with the speaker bringing out many new points on the mission work of the home field. The fact that the Board of Managers now has nine appeals for schools, and eight for hospitals, shows how inadequate are present arrangements, and how great the responsibility and opportunity which confronts the woman of the church if the present need of the situation are to be properly met.

On Thursday evening Miss Mabel Clarry, organist of Trinity United church, Peterboro, entertained about fifty members of her choir at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Clarry, Park street, Millbrook. Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Johnston were also among the invited guests, and a most enjoyable evening was spent.

Miss G. E. Taylor of Hamilton, is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lavergne Fallis, Fallis Line.

Miss Marie Douglas, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Douglas, who has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. C. Larmer, Oshawa, has returned home Mr. Douglas and Mr. and Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Smith motored to Oshawa last week bringing Marie home with them.

The Women's Institute has purchased, and set out, the supply of plants round the Soldiers' Cenotaph in the Town Hall square, adding greatly to its appearance by this act of service to the community.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Edgar Burnham of St. Petersburg, Florida, with their granddaughter, Betty Darling, are visiting his mother, Mrs. E. S. Burnham. Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Burnham and daughter Dorothy, of Peterboro, were also guests of Mrs. Burnham on Sunday.

Attwool and Sheppard's pond has had a fresh supply of trout fry through the influence of Mr. A. J. Fallis, M.P.P., about 20,000 being recently placed in its waters. This should insure good sport for local anglers within another season.

League Fires Employees Who Fight Over Speech

GENEVA, June 22 (Canadian Press).—Two members of the staff of the Labor office of the League of Nations will lose their jobs as the result of a fight on the convention floor between an Italian and a Frenchman. The assault occurred when a Frenchman, replying to a German who asked what Signor Rossoni, the Fascist delegate, was talking about said "Macaroni." An Italian standing nearby heard the slur and struck the Frenchman with his fist.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH HELD GARDEN PARTY

Good Weather and a Large Crowd at Outdoor Fete.

LAKEFIELD, June 22.—A glorious summer's day, following one of the worst rain storms of the season, contributed not a little to the success of the garden party, given under the auspices of St. John's church on Tuesday afternoon and evening. The attendance was large and the receipts will be well over $400, which is indeed gratifying to the committee who had spared neither time nor effort to make the arrangements as perfect as possible. The central committee was headed by Rev. and Mrs. W. Cox and Mrs. Laurence H. Grahame assisted by the heads of the sub committees, co-operated splendidly in the great parochial effort. Riverside Park, a beautiful spot at any time, looked its best and many of the out of town visitors were enthusiastic over the beauty of the place chosen for the fete.

The pavilion on the dock was transformed into a most attractive tea room with daintily set tables with pretty china and each with a most attractive hand-painted menu card, the work of Miss Nancy Tate. Mrs. E. R. Tate and Mrs. J. C. Strickland were joint convenors of this department and were assisted by Mesdames A. O. Lampman, T. J. Wood, Don Fitzgerald and E. H. Northey and Misses Hewitt, Stuart and F. Mackenzie. Misses Margo Fletcher and Mary Strickland, two dainty little girls, sold ice cream cones. The entire committee wore becoming violet crepe paper aprons and bandeaux.

Mrs. Eric Grier and Miss Hazel Crawford did a thriving trade with peanuts, especially among the younger portion of the crowd.

Miss Winifred Payne, in a flame-colored crepe paper frock with touches of black, sold samples of Salada tea during the afternoon, disposing of all her wares before six o'clock.

Misses Mary Mackenzie, Mary Hewitt and Angela Osborne presided over the miscellaneous clothes line which provided fun for the children during the afternoon and early evening.

Another attraction which was equally popular with old and young was the Buried Treasure, in charge of Misses Mae Mahood, Helen Everett, Ione Sanderson and Lilian Suart.

Aunt Sally was once more an attraction especially to the boys and men, was the especial charge of Messrs. C. C. Stenner, S. E. White and Wilford Hampton.

A table which specially appealed to little girls had on sale dolls' furniture, including beds and cabinets and several small dolls. Misses Maxwell Hamilton, Alice Dench and Barbara Dench were in charge.

The home-cooking table was filled with cakes, pies, biscuits, preserved fruit and pickles and other culinary triumphs which were tempting to the housewife seeking to replenish a lean larder and which were all easily disposed of. Mrs. Mahood, Miss Hetherington, Mrs. Stenner and Mrs. Braden Blewett were in charge.

Mrs. Langley and Mrs. J. Sanderson presided over the table of home-made candy of every known variety and all tempting to the palate as well as to the eye.

At six o'clock high tea was served to nearly one hundred people of whom the majority were from Peterboro and included the members of St. John's choir and some of their friends. Mrs. Laurence Grahame headed this committee and among her assistants were Mesdames Connel, Dench, Junkin, Marling, Stuart and A. Wannamaker and Misses A. Watson, V. Payne, E. Ogilivie, Stuart and Mackenzie. During the evening Mrs. Junkin took charge of the sale of ice cream and soft drinks and was assisted by some of the young girls.

The Wheel of Fortune drew a large crowd who were attracted and held by the large display of useful and fancy articles. Messrs. Don Fitzgerald and Arthur Webster were in charge with Mrs. Cameron and Mrs. L. H. Grahame as cashiers and a large committee among whom were Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Northey, Mrs. Don Fitzgerald, Misses B. Curtis, M. Connall, Ida Webster, M. Brown, W. Payne, V. Payne and Hazey Crawford and Messrs. Ted Webster, S. Grylls, M. Hampton assisting.

Follis Orchestra provided an excellent program of music for the dance in the pavilion which was largely patronized. Messrs. F. Moore W. Chappell and L. Charlton were in charge of selling and taking of the tickets.

Among those who assisted were Mrs. Chappell, Mrs. Hamilton, Mrs. Millage and E. Robertson.

During the evening the drawing took place for the piano donated by Mrs. L. H. Grahame. Master Jackie Mose did the drawing and the lucky ticket number 102 was held by Miss Annie Crawford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Crawford of Lakefield.

Others who assisted during the afternoon and evening were: Mrs. Chappell, Mrs. Hamilton, Mrs. W. Millage and Miss A. Atwood, Miss Dell Watson and Miss Grace Watson.

Winners of the Hidden Treasure were: Messrs. F. Moore and B. Wannamaker, a five dollar gold piece each; W. Westcott, $2; Stanley Dever, $1; Miss Cora Charlton, 50c; Mrs. Lacey, Mr. Dela Fosse and H. A. Mackenzie, each 25 cents.

COBOURG, June 22.—The announcement that Edwards and Edwards of Toronto have purchased the Langslow Ltd. plant here from the Corporation of Cobourg (and have also purchased the Rice Lake Canoe plant) which was made yesterday, was welcome news to all citizens. No More Cloudy Teeth

You Restore Color Now

Gain gleaming, sparkling whiteness

Please accept full 10-day tube free. Note the amazing difference in the color of your teeth and firmness of your gums when dingy film is cleared off as leading dentists urge.

Many heartaches come from "off-color" teeth. Teeth that ruin pretty smiles. Now dingy teeth, authorities prove, can be restored to whiteness quickly.

It's been found that dingy teeth come simply from a film that forms on teeth. A stubborn film old-type dentifrices did not successfully clear off. A film that absorbs food discolorations, etc.

Run your tongue across your teeth and you can feel that film now—a slippery coating covering your teeth. Beneath it are the white teeth you envy often in others. It keeps your smile unattractive. It breeds bacteria, invites tooth decay, gum troubles and pyorrhea.

Dentists say the way to remove it is with the new-type dentifrice called Pepsodent. All druggists have it. Works wonders on dingy teeth. 10-day test will be sent free.

FALSE ALARMS.

Five times in the last two or three days the alarm system at the Lake street bathing beach, which notifies the Fire Department that the services of the pulmotor are required, has been tampered with, giving the firemen a needless journey.

The folly of sending in false alarms of this nature should be apparent, and parents should warn their youngsters to leave the alarm system alone.

When the signal comes in from the bathing beach a detachment of firemen is sent out in a truck carrying with them the pulmotor.

At the same time the police are notified and the officer on duty immediately sends a doctor to the scene, while police are also rushed down.

That means that a false alarm puts all this rescue machinery needlessly into motion, and it also means that while the rescuers are rushing to answer a false alarm there is always the danger that a genuine call for help will come in from the Inverlea beach or some other river point and the Fire Department will be unable to respond promptly.

The mischief is probably the work of children, perhaps too young to understand the harm they are doing, but the Examiner trusts that this article will be the means of all parents informing their children of the necessity of not tampering with the alarm system.

SEMI-URBAN FIRE PROTECTION.

The McGill street fire last week illustrates the desirability of the townships surrounding Peterboro coming to an agreement with the city authorities by means of which fire protection will be available to those township residents living just outside the city limits.

These are practically urban residents, inasmuch as they can be speedily reached by the Fire Department, and their homes are not out of range of the city's water system.

Under the present system there is considerable red tape to be cut before the Fire Department can swing into action at a fire just outside the limits, and while these preliminaries are being arranged, the flames have a flying start.

It should be possible for the townships to arrive at terms with the City Council ensuring protection for their citizens who live close to the city limits, and a working agreement would be of benefit to both parties.

Several attempts have been made to reach such an understanding, and it is to be hoped that these attempts will be persisted in until a satisfactory arrangement has been made.

With an agreement of that nature in force the loss in last week's fire might have been considerably curtailed, inasmuch as the firemen were powerless to act until the necessary permission had been obtained.

TAKING CHANCES.

The attention of all motorists should be directed to the statement issued by the Dominion Board of Railway Commissioners in regard to taking chances at railway crossings.

"If accidents are to be lessened," says the statement, "the sane motorist must educate the culpably negligent motorist."

That a very large number of drivers fall into the latter category the list of accidents and the figures quoted by the Railway Commissioners furnish conclusive proof.

Not even safety devices and cautionary signals can prevent such motorists from taking chances and disregarding safety.

Take the record of the Canadian National Railway lines from May 25, 1925, to May 12th of this year, and it is found that in 124 cases there was danger at protected crossings because people using these crossings were negligent.

That is, at points where every precaution had been taken by the railways to protect the public 124 people in one year, by carelessness and recklessness, placed themselves in a position of danger.

That was only on one line.

The figures from the C. P. R. in one year are even more striking.

They show 230 cases of dangerous practices by automobile drivers, 496,026 pedestrians and 38,850 cases of bicycles passing under lowered railway gates.

THE DUTY OF THE HOUR.

The majority of the people of Canada are not as greatly concerned over how much political capital can be gained from the customs inquiry as they are that the conditions disclosed by the investigation should be remedied.

When the probe was first mooted it was denounced as a waste of time.

It has proved, however, to have been well worth while, and has revealed a state of affairs that demands quick and effective action.

The loss in revenue to Canada, the injury done to reputable Canadian firms by the astounding amount of smuggling that has gone on, the utter failure of those entrusted with enforcing the customs regulations to discharge their duties and the indifference of those higher up to what has been going on, call for drastic remedies.

The people of this country, their eyes open to the whole situation, are demanding a thorough re-organization, and if the politicians are so keen over trying to protect one of their number or to drag him down, as the case may be, that they have failed to realize the tenor of public opinion, some of them may be in for a rude awakening.

The cleaning up of this whole unsavoury mess, no matter whose toes are trodden upon, whose political prestige goes by the boards, is the duty of the hour for Canada's Parliament.

The welfare of the people is a much more important matter than political advantage to one party or another.

The Canadian National Exhibition is to be opened by Sir T. Vizayaraghavacharya. How would you like to be the chairman who will have to introduce this distinguished visitor?

A FRIENDLY TIP.

Hon. Marcus Kavanaugh of Chicago, Chief Justice of Cook County, Illinois, addressed Canadian police department chiefs, in convention at London yesterday, on an original topic, "How can Canada keep from becoming like the United States?" And the sum and substance of his plea was "Do not coddle prisoners." Hon. Mr. Kavanaugh is presiding court officer of a county that has become a crooks' playground, where the law is laughed to scorn and an amazingly designed parole system functions to take the sting out of such convictions as may be registered in the war against the criminal class. "This," Chief Justice Kavanaugh is reported to have said, "is the lesson for Canada, law-abiding as she is; in England the murderer meditates before he kills. He knows that if he kills, in six weeks he will be mounting the gallows steps to pay for his crime—and he doesn't kill. In the United States the murderer also meditates. He knows it is 6 to 1 he will never be arrested, that it is 15 to 1 that the jury will let him go and that it is 110 to 1 that he will never pay for his crime—so he kills. What shall we do about it? Why, there is only one answer: Enforce the law." Illinois has deviated so far from the accepted principles of justice that nothing short of a great moral upheaval will get her back to commonsense treatment of criminals again. This disrespect of law, of which Justice Kavanaugh spoke, did not just happen overnight. It was a gradual development over a period of years. There is reason to believe that this same kind of development is in its incipient stages in Canada at the present time. It will be easier to check it now than it will be a year hence. Chief Justice Kavanaugh's warning: "If you forget those traditions for which your forefathers stood, your fate will be the same as ours," should give us pause. The time for stocktaking would seem to be at hand.—Hamilton Spectator.

THE NEW MARKETING PROPOSALS.

It is only natural that the proposals regarding the marketing of Ontario's surplus agricultural products, announced by Hon. John S. Martin, the Minister of Agriculture, should meet with rather a hostile reception at the hands of leading produce brokers and that producers themselves should be divided in the opinions which they express. The proposals constitute so radical a departure from the practice of years and are without precedent in this Province. They are, therefore, in the nature of an experiment requiring study, and their full value will only be appreciated when they have been put to the test.

If the scheme by which farm products intended for export are to be gathered into a central warehouse, there inspected, graded and sent forward under an official brand, is new to Ontario, it is not by any means new in other parts of the world, where it has been proved to be of exceptional benefit to producers. The reputation which Australia and New Zealand now enjoy in the British market is undoubtedly due to the attention which they have devoted to the quality of the goods released for export. Similar practice prevails in other countries which command a ready market for their products in the British Isles. It was only a question of time before this Province should be obliged to undertake the same regulation if it hoped adequately to compete in the same market. In the address delivered by him at Kemptville, when the new marketing scheme was announced, Mr. Martin remarked upon the fact that, with the exception of cheese, the position of Ontario products upon the British market had proved a marked disappointment to the Government. This had been in large part due to the dishonest shipper, the doubtful quality of whose products had brought Ontario's butter, apples and other farm exports into disrepute, although the great bulk of the exports had been of a high type. By grading everything and stamping the grades with the brand of its approval, the Government hopes to overcome this tendency, the defeat of which is as necessary for the protection of the honest shipper as for the increased prestige of Ontario products upon the British market.

The experience of other countries which have adopted legislation of this type is that according as the quality of their exports has been certified, greater confidence in them has been engendered and a greater demand for them has arisen. It is not too much to expect that similar benefits will follow the carrying out of what the Government has in view, provided, of course, that it does not contemplate embarking in the export business itself. By investigating the quality of every consignment intended for export, affixing to it the stamp of its approval, providing facilities for the storage and inspection of such consignments, and furnishing information of value to shippers, the Government will be rendering a service which will not fail to be appreciated by producers and will be carrying out in part the recommendations of the Special Committee on Agriculture which was appointed in 1924, as well as the recommendation of the United Farmers' Co-operative Company.

Standardization of export products is the demand of the moment. As long as Canada fails to make provision for such standardization it will be lagging behind in the race to capture the export market, and failing to grasp the opportunities which lie ahead of it. It is possible that before many more years have passed the example of Ontario will be followed by other Provinces of the Dominion, if not by the Dominion itself, since representations to that end are being made by officials of agricultural departments and by farmers themselves in all parts of the country.

The Ontario scheme carries with it necessity for an improvement of agricultural products at their source and that can only be accomplished by education of the producers. If they can be brought to realize that the better the quality of their products, the greater will be the price which they will command and the greater will be the demand for them, it will not be long before all complaint upon this score will have been removed.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Wear a maple leaf on Dominion Day.

Presently we may hear the explanation that there are to be no Provincial by-elections because the weather is too hot.

Few big fish are being reported, which may mean that fishing is not as good as usual or merely that fishermen are becoming more truthful.

The automobile was crowded out of the week-end casualty list by the record of water accidents.

Dad is wondering how soon he'll be able to get rid of that Father's Day tie the family pinned on him.

Indifference in Provincial politics is not indicated in Alberta where 184 candidates will fight it out this week for 60 Legislature seats.

Yesterday may have been the longest day of the year, but it is a safe bet that most children will find Thursday even longer.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

PHILOSOPHY.

.....But the cabin made it no easier to do nothing, for how can one lie sleepless in a bunk and merely look at time standing still because the thermometer has frightened it? Beside me was a book the skipper had lent to me, with a hearty commendation of its merits. "Facts," he had said to me significantly, looking at me very hard. "Facts, my dear sir!" ....

.....I will make no secret of the book which put away the heat for me, and abolished time—for I do not remember looking at the time after 1.30 a.m., when I was still far from sleep, and had been reading steadily for hours. Yet this book no more resembled a best seller than a chronometer resembles the lovely object out of a prie packet. Its name is "The Red Sea and Gulf of Aden Pilot"—the seventh edition, we may gladly learn of so respectable an exhibition of prose. Its price, I noticed, proved that the truth—or as near the truth as one should expect to attain—is no more, is really no more, than the price of more doubtful commodities. And let us remember that it is all very well for wise pilots in other and darker seas to assume they may teach young voyagers the right ways in the deceptive and fog-bound coasts of philosophy. Philosophy? That is easy.

UNVEILING OF WAR MEMORIAL TAKES PLACE AT CAMPBELLFORD

Soldier Dead of Town and Township Commemorated in Stone.

IMPRESSIVE SERVICE

Col. the Rev. W. Beattie, D.S.O., Unveils Monument After Fine Address.

CAMPBELLFORD, June 22. — Lives bravely sacrificed and the role the Empire gallantly played were given fitting commemoration here on Sunday, June 20, when the monument erected in honored memory of the men of Campbellford and Seymour Township who gave their lives in the Great War, 1914-1918, was unveiled in the presence of a large gathering of people.

Nearly every public organization of the town was represented in the event. The 40th Regimental Band headed the parade to the memorial at three o'clock, after which came the Great War veterans, under the command of Major Bygott; then the High School cadets, Boy Scouts and the Girl Guides.

A large platform had been erected for the speakers and other prominent officials, and on either side of the monument accommodation was provided for relatives of the war heroes.

The memorial is a handsome structure of light grey granite. The composition may be said to be in three parts, the central dominating shaft and the two wings. The wings are inscribed on the upper border with appropriate words of the purpose of the memorial. The wings have on either face in the panels the names of those who sleep in Flanders' fields. At the end of the wing is the simple encircled Calvary Cross. The connecting link unites the wings with the central shaft. The central shaft carries the battle honors in which the Canadians proved their valour, namely, Ypres, Somme, Festubert, Passchendale, Arras and Amiens.

Held aloft in this central shaft is the laureled sword showing victory with honor. Below is the laurel wreath, inside of which is carved the years that for decades to come will stir the soul of every loyal Canadian. Below the wreath is the word "Resurgent" (they shall rise again), the keynote of joy and hope in the memorial.

Among those who had seats on the platform were Lieut.-Col. McNaughton of Cobourg, the stately military figure of the district; Lieut.-Col. T. J. Johnston, 93rd Battalion, Peterboro; Lieut.Col. D. Green, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment; Major H. J. Smith, B.M., 7th Infantry Brigade; Major J. A. McLean, Capt. B. C. Armstrong, Capt. Angus Mowat, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment; Major A. S. Linton, 103rd Calgary Rifles; Col. F. D. Boggs, 40th Northumberland Regiment; Major Peterson, O. C., 22nd Mounted Rifles; Lieut.-Col. T. D. Johnson, Major H. W. Powell, Capt. D. A. Loomis, Capt. C. H. Stuart, Lieut L. R. Malane, Lieut. H. S. Mason and Major F. Hills, 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons, Peterboro; Major H. T. Dodds, Lieut. W. G. Perkes, Lieut. J. Turnbull, Canadian Machine Gun Company, Peterboro; Lieut.Col. J. F. Wolfraim, Lieut. M. Sargeant, Lieut. W. T. Ellis, M.M., 40th Northumberland Regiment; Major J. M. Bygott, Capt. G. Thompson, Capt. T. G. Hyland and Lieut. G. Free of town; Mrs. W. H. Ashton, Regent, and Mrs. A. Haig, Secretary, representing the I.O.D.E.; Miss Hazel Atkinson, the Beamerside Chapter of the I.O.D.E.; Mrs. Robert McCulloch, Seymour West Women's Institute.

Mayor G. A. Kingston was chairman. The formal service opened with all singing "O, God, Our Help in Ages Past," led by the band. Mr. Kingston gave a short address of welcome to all visitors and friends present and spoke of the hard work of the ladies and all to procure a suitable monument for Campbellford. Capt. Wright, S.A., read the Scripture lesson, after which Rev. D. A. McKenzie led in prayer. The band played a memorial march, "The Silent Tents."

M. E. Maybee, M.P. for East Northumberland, was the first speaker of the day. He spoke highly of all who in any way worked for the erection of the memorial, and also thought that those who valiantly fought and returned home should be honored along with the fallen heroes.

Rev. C. D. Daniel in a short address claimed it a privilege, although not associated with Campbellford men in the war, to be a veteran and friend of all the boys. He also praised especially the local branch of the I. O. D. E. for its untiring efforts.

Rev. James Grier in a few well chosen words said "Every time we look at this memorial we should be reminded of the sacrifices our boys made for us that we may live in peace and that we should try to prove ourselves worthy."

The band then played the Scottish Lament after which Col. the Rev. W. Beattie, D. S. O., gave a splendid address. Col. Beattie was chaplin of the 2nd battalion and told many war incidents, showing that a Canadian soldier could not be downed and always was the spirit of good cheer. Col. Beattie paid a wonderful tribute to the memorial in that it was as nice as any he had had the honour of unveiling. He told how the Israelites had raised a cairn of stones when they passed into the Promised land and that it was fitting that Campbellford should erect a memorial so that in future years deeds of valour will be told and explanations given as to why it was erected. He said that in his work as chaplain, he found the men developed marvellous heroism, courage, fortitude, self-sacrifice and along with the serious side of things could always see the bright side and many a lad, badly wounded, would ask, "Did the Hun get through," rather than questions about his own safety and likelihood of living.

The Colonel in closing paid tribute to all who had part in the erection of the memorial and to the friends of the "Fallen Heroes," he extended sympathy and said that they should feel pride in the unselfish sacrifice of loved ones for such a noble cause and that for liberty, so dear and so dearly preserved, it was a sacrifice not in vain.

The unveiling of the memorial followed, Colonel Beattie reverently raising the draped flags from the base and reverently dedicated it, "To the Glory of God and in sacred memory of all those whose names appear, I now dedicate this monument in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, One God, One King, One Throne. Amen."

A guard of honour was stationed at the monument during the service. All veterans came to the salute and three volleys were fired. The Last Post was well sounded by Veteran Walter Lowe in memory of the dead. Then two minutes of silence was observed, after which he blew the Reveille.

The Regent, Mrs. Ashton, led the service of placing wreaths on the memorial, followed by one from fellow veterans and many others.

Rev. Mr. Elliot gave the dedicatory prayer, after which Rev. G. C. Clarke pronounced the benediction, and the event closed by all singing the National Anthem.

"Exegerunt monumentum aere perennius—non omnes moriantur." (They have built a monument more enduring than brass—they shall not wholly die.)

CHEESE MARKETS

MONTREAL, Que., June 22 (Canadian Press) — At the United Dairymen Co-operative auction sale of Belleville cheese held here yesterday there were 1,364 boxes offered for which 18 1-8c per lb. was bid for 1,087 boxes No. 1 white, and 18 1-8c per lb. for 547 boxes of No. 1 colored, f.o.b. Belleville for shipment to Montreal which prices was refused it being 7-8c per lb. below the price bid a week ago.

CHICAGO GRAINS

CHICAGO, June 21 (Canadian Press) — With wheat again under pressure on the board of trade, prices of all grains declined and local sentiment was bearish. At the finish wheat showed a net loss of 1 1-8c to 1 5-8c; corn was off 1-8 to 5-8c, oats lost 7-8 to 1 1-8c, and provisions were unchanged to 10 cents down.

Bullish statistics in regard to the visible supply had little effect on wheat values and prices worked sharply downward in the late trading, uncovering some stop-loss orders. A break of from two to four cents in cash wheat premiums in the interior Kansas market with a decline of one to three cents here, had marked effect. It later developed that the southwest was experiencing cleared skies which will greatly aid the movement of the new crop. Beneficial rains also fell in the northwest where moisture is needed.

Export demand at the seaboard was slow, with sales of 300,000 bushels in all positions up to the close. In addition cable reports were less pessimistic. One Italian crop estimate placed the yield there at 220,000,000 bushels, or 21,000,000 bushels less than last year. However, it was pointed out that this is 42,000,000 bushels above the five year average.

Corn and oats were easier with wheat, the July delivery of corn touching a new low on the crop when that cereal sold at 69 1-2c. Trade was light and the market easily influenced.

Oats were dragged lower on local pressure, with some long liquidation indicated in July although oats reports were inclined to be bullish, the demand continued light.

Provisions were easier on selling by packers and commission houses.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., June 22 (Canadian Press)—With the decline in prices in the Winnipeg market yesterday, local exporters were in a position to do some business with foreign buyers in Manitoba spring wheat and Canadian western oats, but the volume of business on the whole was disappointing. The domestic trade was quiet, there being only a limited demand from exporters and sales of odd loads of wheat were made at C.I.F. prices, while tough No. 2 feed oats changed hands at 3-4 cent per bushel over the Winnipeg July option, and No. 3 Barley at eleven cents per bushel, over, C. I.F. Montreal. The demand for car lots of oats on spot was also slow and prices were easier.

A moderate amount of business was worked in spring wheat flour with English importers, but the trade for local and country account was quiet. Prices were unchanged. The demand for winter wheat grades was slow but the feeling was steady.

Prices for all grades of millfeed were well maintained uider a moderate demand. The movement of standard grades of rolled oats was slow and prices were unchanged.

Owing to the increased scarcity of top quality baled hay a stronger feeling developed in the local situation and prices were advanged $1.50 per ton on spot.

The feature of the potato trade was the further weakness and prices were reduced another 25c to 30c per bag and still lower figures are expected on account of the large receipts.

The trade in eggs was fair and prices ruled steady. The receipts were 2,183 cases.

The undertone to the butter market was easier but no change in price were announced. The volume of business was fair. The receipts were 3,348 packages.

Extreme dullness marked the cheese trade and prices were reduced fractionally. The receipts were 7,339 boxes.

The demand for beans showed no improvement and the market was quiet and steady. Car lots of choice white hand-picked were quoted at $2.15 per bushel, and broken lots at $2.25 to $2.35 per bushel.

These Butterflies And Moths Are Bottle-Fed Down On The Insect Farm 5 Miles From London

LONDON, Eng. — Five miles from the city, at Bexley in Kent, is a butterfly and moth farm where L. W. Newman, lepedopterist, trains the insects to lay eggs to order. He supplies the zoos of the world.

"Here," said Mr. Newman, opening one of the doors of a hot-house full of gauze-covered cages, in which there glinted the sparkling colors of fluttering wings, "is the 'Swallow Tail.' We only get 'Swallow Tails' from the Fens. They are wonderfully tame. They feed from your hand when you know them. We get a large demand for these from people who want to add to the color in their gardens."

He picked up a butterfly and it perched on his hand. When the butterflies are hungry they will take sugar and water or diluted honey from the palm of a hand sucking it up their long tendril like tongues.

In another corner of the hot-house a lad was engaged in forcing a very delicate butterfly to feed on a piece of cotton wool soaked in sugar and water. It had been put in the cage in a weak condition; hence the necessity of "bottle feeding." Afterwards it was put back in the cage to lay eggs.

SUBURBAN ROADS WERE INSPECTED BY COMMISSION

RE-SURFACE WORK.

Members Were Pleased at Quality of Work Being Done.

The members of the Suburban Roads Commission went on a tour of inspection yesterday. They went over the roads under their care and were accompanied by Mayor Holloway. The first road inspected was the Lakefield Road, part of which has just been taken over by that commission this year, they found the road in first class shape, as it was not damaged by the frost last winter as some of the other roads. It is expected that the part lying the farthest from the city will be re-surfaced this year. From Lakefield they went to the Chemong Road, which was badly cut up this spring and instead of just having to re-surface the bad place they have had to build a new bottom. This accounts for the depth of gravel in some places. From the Chemong Road they went to the Norwood Road, where there is a lot of construction work being carried on at Cochrane's Hill which is being cut down. The Keene Road was the next one inspected.

The commission is not going to be able to do as much work at building permanent surfaces this summer as was expected, as the roads broke up badly this spring on account of the great depth of frost and the time it took it to come out, in fact in some places the frost is still coming out, stated the Superintendent. The Mayor stated that he was well pleased with the work that was being done, although it was going on slow on account of scarcity of funds that which was being done was the making of a permanent road. The commissioners seemed to be well acquainted with the roads under their care and they knew where all the construction work was being done and where it needed to be done, and were much pleased with the work being done.

HEARST DEPOSITED ONE MILLION IN BANK

WINNIPEG, Man., June 22. — (Canadian Press.) — More than a million dollars in cash was deposited in the Chase National Bank, New York City, according to books of the defunct Hearst Music Publishing Company, A. MacLean, former secretary of the concern, testified at the trial of Joseph X. Hearst on charges of fraud.

Witness declared that Hearst had sought to keep the name of the company's bankers, a secret, and withdrawals had been permitted only on Hearst's personal authority. From time to time advices had been received showing that large deposits had been made to the credit of the company. It is expected that the case for the Crown will close before the end of this week.

More Than 200,000 Worshippers at Celebration of Pontifical Mass.

CHILDREN'S CHOIR

CHICAGO, June 22.—(Canadian Press.)—Pilgrims from all the earth met on the shores of Lake Michigan to-day in the most impressive demonstration of religious zeal ever witnessed in America if not in the world.

Defying threatening skies and a wind which approached a gale, more than 200,000 worshippers pressed into the great memorial stadium extended along a half mile of lake front for the celebration of solemn pontifical mass by John Cardinal Bonzano, the legate of Pope Pius XI to the twenty-eighth International Eucharistic Congress. Police estimated that 350,000 persons thronged the area of two square miles of which the stadium is the centre.

A choir of sixty thousand school children, clad in white and papal gold and seated in the vast green mall between the towering concrete stands, sang the responses to the altar.

BRIAND FORMING NEW MINISTRY

Hopes to Announce Holders of Various Offices Today.

TIRED BUT SANGUINE

PARIS, June 22 (Canadian Press) —Premier Briand's new Ministry will probably be announced this afternoon. M. Briand made this statement last night after he had had further conference with M. Poincare and M. Doumer. Though tired, he seemed confident of ultimate success.

"I will have a conference over the whole matter with a number of my former collaborators," the Premier explained. "I cherish the hope that we will agree. In the course of the conversations on the financial situation today, our viewpoints got together gradually.

"The bases of our combination will be laid to-morrow," Mr. Briand asserted, "and they will be solid."

The premier again declared that he was certain the Cabinet would be constituted this afternoon. It appears that M. Poincare had not decided to accept the ministry of finance, but would see M. Briand at 9.30 this morning. If M. Doumer or some other takes that portfolio, M. Poincare will likely accept the Ministry of Education.

QUESTIONS AT ISSUE.

Natural Resources Problem Northern Railway and Financial Matters Discussed.

CALGARY, June 22 (Canadian Press).—The 184 candidates, representing United Farmers of Alberta, Liberals, Conservatives, Labor and Independents, today are waging final campaign meetings in the sixty constituencies of Alberta, where polling will take place in the provincial election on Monday, June 28.

Expressing confidence in the result, the leaders of the three major parties, Premier J. E. Brownlee, U.F.A.; Capt. J. T. Shaw, Liberal, and A. A. McGillivray, K.C., Conservative, yesterday were making plans for the final drive. Premier Brownlee and Mr. Shaw are in the southern part of the province, while Mr. McGillivray is at home in Calgary after a political tour of three weeks, during which he covered most of the province.

The question of natural resources and the northern railway problems continue to be the dominant issue before the electors, while financial matters also are being discussed by all parties.

The United Farmers of Alberta party candidates, headed by Premier Brownlee, are facing the electorate on the record of the past five years, asserting that progress has been made in settling all the major issues of the province. Conservative and Liberal opposition is aimed chiefly at the slowness in competing the transfer of natural resources to the province, and also the unsettled conditions in regard to the settling of the northern railways question. Both these problems, declared Premier Brownlee in recent campaign speeches, are nearing solution.

In the cities there is much apathy about the election, but the interest in the country is lively. Most of the country ridings are being contested by representatives of the U.F.A., Liberals and Conservatives.

"Poor Fellow" Asks Aid Of U. S. For His Triplets

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Uncle Sam was appealed to yesterday by the father of triplets to "help a poor fellow in such a case."

Mr. Wilson sent his constituent a bulletin on how to raise babies, explaining that was about all he could expect from the Government.

ADDRESS TO BANKERS

Ferdinand Pegora Tells of Conversation with Leader of Whittemore Gang.

QUEBEC, June 22 (Canadian Press).—Yesterday's session of the thirty-third annual convention here of the New York State Bankers' Association was featured by an address on "Fighting the Criminal," delivered by Ferdinard Pecora, Assistant District Attorney for the County of New York. Mr. Pecora has been much in the public eye of late, principally through his prosecution of the Richard Whittemore desperadoes. Mr. Pecora referred several times to this internationally known case.

Prevalence of Crime

"If I were to be asked," said Mr. Pecora, "what is the chief factor in the prevalence of crime today, and basing my answer on my eight years' experience on the prosecuting staff of New York County, I would reply that it is the hope and belief on the part of the would-be-criminal that he can get away with it."

The speaker then referred to the Whittemore case. Three months ago, he said, not only New York but the entire nation was stirred by the report of the arrest of the Whittemore gang who, for eight or nine months had been terrorizing the jewellery business of the American metropolis by a series of bold robberies. It fell to his lot, Mr. Pecora said, to interview the youthful leader of the gang, Richard Reese Whittemore and his accomplices. At the conclusion of Whittemore's confession, involving nine or ten robberies and half a million dollars' worth of loot, the lawyer asked him what had prompted him to turn criminal. Whittemore answered frankly and laconically: "Mr. Pecona, we thought we could get away with it."

The speaker pointed out that Whittemore came of respectable parents and had also received a fair education.

To Combat Crime

The most effective method of combatting crime, the speaker declared, was to instill into the minds of the criminals the thought that they cannot get away with it, and that they will be caught and punished for whatever crime they may commit.

Two weeks ago, Mr. Pecona went on, the two remaining members of the Whittemore gang, the Kramer brothers, were prosecuted in New York, and were both sentenced to forty years in prison. This heavy sentence was imposed because of the frightful record of the two accused men. "Now, how many of you know," asked the speaker, "that the parole law will operate to liberate these men in sixteen years and five months?" Mr. Pecora was of the opinion that there was something wrong when the legislature could fix a maximum penalty of forty years for an offence, and yet the sentence could not be carried out.

These Butterflies And Moths Are Bottle-Fed Down On The Insect Farm 5 Miles From London

LONDON, Eng. — Five miles from the city, at Bexley in Kent, is a butterfly and moth farm where L. W. Newman, lepedopterist, trains the insects to lay eggs to order. He supplies the zoos of the world.

"Here," said Mr. Newman, opening one of the doors of a hot-house full of gauze-covered cages, in which there glinted the sparkling colors of fluttering wings, "is the 'Swallow Tail.' We only get 'Swallow Tails' from the Fens. They are wonderfully tame. They feed from your hand when you know them. We get a large demand for these from people who want to add to the color in their gardens."

He picked up a butterfly and it perched on his hand. When the butterflies are hungry they will take sugar and water or diluted honey from the palm of a hand sucking it up their long tendril like tongues.

In another corner of the hot-house a lad was engaged in forcing a very delicate butterfly to feed on a piece of cotton wool soaked in sugar and water. It had been put in the cage in a weak condition; hence the necessity of "bottle feeding." Afterwards it was put back in the cage to lay eggs.

SUBURBAN ROADS WERE INSPECTED BY COMMISSION

RE-SURFACE WORK.

Members Were Pleased at Quality of Work Being Done.

The members of the Suburban Roads Commission went on a tour of inspection yesterday. They went over the roads under their care and were accompanied by Mayor Holloway. The first road inspected was the Lakefield Road, part of which has just been taken over by that commission this year, they found the road in first class shape, as it was not damaged by the frost last winter as some of the other roads. It is expected that the part lying the farthest from the city will be re-surfaced this year. From Lakefield they went to the Chemong Road, which was badly cut up this spring and instead of just having to re-surface the bad place they have had to build a new bottom. This accounts for the depth of gravel in some places. From the Chemong Road they went to the Norwood Road, where there is a lot of construction work being carried on at Cochrane's Hill which is being cut down. The Keene Road was the next one inspected.

The commission is not going to be able to do as much work at building permanent surfaces this summer as was expected, as the roads broke up badly this spring on account of the great depth of frost and the time it took it to come out, in fact in some places the frost is still coming out, stated the Superintendent. The Mayor stated that he was well pleased with the work that was being done, although it was going on slow on account of scarcity of funds that which was being done was the making of a permanent road. The commissioners seemed to be well acquainted with the roads under their care and they knew where all the construction work was being done and where it needed to be done, and were much pleased with the work being done.

COLBORNE, June 22.—The marriage took place at St. Jude's church, Oakville, on June 16th of Miss Lulu Rosetta Smith, youngest daughter of the late W. H. Smith, Cobourg, formerly deputy-sheriff of Northumberland county, to Rev. Alexander Ketterson of Brooklyn, New York. The marriage was very quiet owing to recent bereavement in the bride's family. The bride's brother, Rev. Canon D. Russell Smith officiated, and she was given in marriage by her nephew, Mr. W. F. R. Smith of Oakville. The church was prettily decorated with spring bloom, and palms.

The bride wore ivory georgette over white satin, and black picture hat. Her flowers were roses and lily of the valley. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the rectory by Mrs. Smith, which was attended only by near relatives. Rev. and Mrs. Ketterson left to spend the honeymoon in Muskoka after which they will take up residence in Brooklyn, N.Y.

GARDEN PARTY GREAT SUCCESS

Despite Cool Weather Many Attended Social at Millbrook.

GOOD PROGRAMME.

MILLBROOK, June 22. — The garden party held at the rectory on Thursday evening, under the auspices of St. Thomas Church, provided a pleasant and successful social occasion, the attendance being quite as large as could be expected considering the cool and somewhat threatening weather.

The assurance of the rector, Rev. Canon Allen, that "while these grounds are spacious, they are not as spacious as our hearts, for the latter are big enough to have taken in a much larger number than are here tonight," gave expression to the generous and warm-hearted spirit of hospitality with which the guests were welcomed.

The well-laden and attractively arranged tea-tables were on the lawn west of the house, seating fifty or more at one time; benches and chairs on the front lawn offered an inviting resting place after appetites had been satisfied and late comers were being served, while the wide verandah on the east side made an excellent platform from which to present the programme, the big croquet lawn giving ample space for seating accommodation for the audience.

The booth, too, was on the east side, the high evergreen hedge affording good protection from the breeze which became almost uncomfortably cool before the evening was over. Messrs. H. Jordan and R. Shaw made capable salesmen and found a constant demand for their wares until the stock was practically exhausted.

Misses Ada Attwool, M. Curtiss, Muriel Smith, Beatrice Turner, Anna Kells, Lottie Vance, Helen Needler, were among those who waited on the tables; Mrs. T. Harkness, Miss M. Christie and others assisting in having the food ready for service at the tables.

Entertainment for the guests during the period of waiting after the supper hour and before the formal programme was presented, was furnished through the kindness of Mr. H. R. Armstrong who had his new Orthophonic Victropla on the verandah, the listeners throughly enjoying the music provided.

Rev. D. R. Dewdney acted in the capacity of chairman, talent from Omemee and Peterborough presenting an enjoyable programme about an hour and one-half in length; though only a few of the members of the orchestra from All Saints' Church, Peterborough, were present, their selections were warmly applauded, and an encore demanded each time. The items included:

Orchestral Selection (All Saints' Church).

Solo, "What of the Night?" by Mr. H. Rush. Encore, "I Passed by Your Window."

Solo, "The Garden of Happiness," by Mrs. Dwyer. Encore, "Love Sends a Little Gift of Roses."

Selection with violin and piano, The Stevensons (Omemee).

Recitation, "The Painter of Seville," by Mrs. Connolly. Encore, "Tit for Tat."

Orchestral Selection.

Song, "I'm Tickled to Death I'm Single," by Clare Winslow and Tom McCamus. Encore, "My Gal, Sal."

Song, "The Blackbird's Song," by Mrs. Dwyer. Encore, "Some Time."

Song "On the Road to Mandalay," by Mr. Stevenson.

Recitation, "Coronation Crowds," by Mrs. Connolly.

Song, "The Open Road," by Mr. Rush.

Orchestral Selection.

The chairman announced that the ladies had prepared so generously for the supper that a quantity of cakes and pies, uncut, were on hand and these Mr. A. H. Barnes auctioned off as rapidly as possible.

The receipts, clear, amounted to $85.00, this amount having been taken in at the gate; expenses were taken care of by the money from the booth and the sale of cakes, etc., just before the gathering dispersed.

HOTEL KEEPER ORDERED TO PAY

they would suit, and upon being asked what the wages would be, he said that they would be $30 a month, she said. He paid two fares for Miss Cameron and Miss Sharrod and told them to come on the Thursday following. He arranged for the witness and Miss Berwick to meet him at 10.00 o'clock that night and travel with him to Peterborough. When they arrived at Peterborough, there was a car waiting. They drove to Buckhorn and arrived there at 2.30 on Wednesday morning. They went to work that day. Next day, the other two girls arrived. "The following Saturday," she said, "the four of us were going for a walk and he called us back. He then produced a contract which belonged to the kitchen man," he said, "and said 'Look at this, there must be some mistake here, this reads from $25 to $30,' and asked us to work for $25 a month." She said they told him they would not work for $25 as they had been engaged at $30. He then said that he would never pay $30, and that he would get another bunch of girls from the city, and added that he would see about getting them out in the morning. He came up later, she said, and demanded $4.30 from each of them for train fare and threatened to keep their luggage if they did not pay it, she said.

His Worship found that the complainant had been discharged and allowed her four days pay and $11.90 costs.

He then called the other three complainants and asked them if their evidence would be the same as what they had heard and upon receiving an aswer in the affirmative, decided that he would allow Miss Berwick four days' pay, Miss Cameron and Miss Sharrod two days pay each, together with $11.90 costs in each case.

MURRAY TOWNSHIP O.R.E.C. CONVENTION

Many Delegates Attend Meeting at Wooler Last Week.

WOOLER, June 22.—It was a memorable day for the village when the County Township Sunday school convention of the Ontario Religious Education Council met on Friday, June 11. The county executive of the O.R.E.C. met at 10 a.m. to review and discuss problems.

Rev. Daniel of Campbellford; Rev. Beckel of Castleton; Rev. Clarke, Hilton; Rev. Neal, Wooler; Rev. Mutton, Smithfield; C. F. Wessels, Mr. Clark and Mr. Reynolds of Morganston; Mrs. S. L. Terrill, Mrs. Glover and B. C. H. Becker acted on this executive.

Lunch was served at noon in the basement of the church by the Ladies' Aid. The township convention was well attended in the afternoon.

Departmental conferences were as follows:

Children's division—Mrs. G. A. Glover, leader.

Young people's division—Rev. C. Daniels, leader.

Missionary division—Mrs. S. L. Terrill, leader.

Temperance division—B. C. H. Becker, leader.

These was followed by an inspiring and instructive address by Rev. J. Griffith, Toronto.

Supper was served in the basement of the church. Some fifty visiting delegates partook of the good things provided.

The evening session opened with a rousing song service led by C. F. Wessels.

The devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. H. B. Neal.

After the report of the nominating committee the staff of officers was elected as follows:

President—Harry Crews.
Vice-President—C. F. Wessels.
Secretary-Treasurer—A. E. Wood.
Children's department—Mrs. Jas. Bates.
Girls' department—Mrs. Ross Hubbel.

Rev. J. Griffith took charge of the installation of the officers and every officer was present.

The next very important number on the programme was the giving out of the certificates to those who passed the Teacher Training class. Rev. C. Daniels was in charge of this duty and those receiving certificates were Miss M. Teal, Miss Mabel McColl, Mrs. L. H. Rowe, Mrs. Clarence McMasters, Mrs. B. Vansickle and Mrs. S. L. Terrill.

Rev. J. Griffith gave the address of the evening. His closing sentiments were more serious consideration of the closing of life work; more instruction in Bible knowledge; better co-operation between parent and child and teacher.

This brought to a close one of the finest and best Murray Sunday school conventions, one in which every person could make it possible to catch a glimpse of the great work to be accomplished.

"THESE WOMEN"

By MALCOLM DUART

COPYRIGHT 1926

The Characters and Situations in this Story are entirely fictional.

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

NONA, a Toronto dancer, who recently has made a tremendous stage success, comes to Peterborough to ask HARRY MORTON, whom she loves, whether she shall go to London to accept a proffered engagement there.

Morton, wealthy, middle-aged, attractive to women and unmarried, also is loved by his adopted daughter, AUDREY.

JOHN PARRISH, Morton's secretary, loves Audrey.

ABE SUNSHINE, Toronto theatrical man, comes with Nona uninvited, to urge her to take the London offer. As this chapter opens, he has just asked Audrey to help him persuade Nona to go to London.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER LVIII.

Morton had been standing in the background during this conversation.

Now he stepped forward. "Abe," he remarked, "you're a confounded, embarrassing nuisance."

He took the smaller man by the arm, and steered him into the house. "You come in, to your room, and we'll arbitrate this difficulty later."

Nona followed them, while Audrey sat in a chair outside the open door.

"Take that room beyond Audrey's," Morton said to Nona. "The maid is taking your bag in there. Abe, you come with me."

Mr. Sunshine followed him into the great, airy guest-room at the farther end of the hall. He looked at the latticed windows, that opened in three sides of the room, and at the bright cheerful upholstery of the chairs.

"Bridal suite?" he inquired.

He sat on the edge of the deep, soft bed. "If I'd known it was going to be anything like this, I'd have brought Lois here on my honeymoon," he continued.

Morton leaned against the broad dresser.

"Abe," he said, "I want you short downstairs there, when you were talking about Nona's plans. We don't have to go down right away. Tell me just what you're thinking about."

Mr. Sunshine removed his hat, which he had worn since his arrival, and laid it on the bed. Drawing toward him a low chair, he placed his feet upon its tufted cushion.

"Mr. Morton," he said, "it's like this. You know, Nona was simply a wow in that show."

Morton nodded.

"Well," Abe continued, "this producer, he put her on in just a summer show, you know. It was a knockout—a riot. But he is producing another one over in London. He is using the same music and script, with some improvements, I made 'em," Mr. Sunshine added, with satisfaction. "I found the new music, and the new lyrics, and I bet the Prince of Wales goes there every night for three months' running!"

He turned, and swung his feet up on the bed, resting himself comfortably against the satin pads that descended from the enameled wood above him.

"Well, Nona is to be the absolute star, over there. The producer, he's got a pretty good girl, to take Nona's place for the rest of the summer run in Toronto. It is her chance of a lifetime. It's a good show—you know that. You know Nona's got the stuff. If she makes a hit over there, and you know she will, when she comes back to America, her fortune's made. Mine is, too!"

He drew up his knees, and hugged them with his arms.

"We'll both be rich," he continued. Then his face fell. "Of course, she'll be rich if she marries you, but what will I get out of that?"

He looked expectantly at Morton. Morton smiled.

"She might give you a commission on her marriage," he suggested.

Mr. Sunshine received this seriously. "I'm no schatchen," he said. "I don't want to make any money out of being a marriage broker. I'm in the theatrical business, and I've got a big star. I don't want to lose her."

"What have you done with your little cabaret revues?" Morton asked.

"All of 'em going strong," Abe assured him. "Every one a hit and a knockout."

He arose from the bed, and thrust his thumbs into the slack of his shirt, at the armpits. "Besides being personal manager for Nona, I've got the biggest lot of singers and dancers in choruses in Toronto, except one or two," he said, proudly.

Morton reached over, and drew him from the bed. "We'd better go downstairs, now," he suggested. "I suppose Nona's there with Audrey."

Together they descended the steps, and found the girls chatting in the yard, before one of Audrey's flower beds.

"Has Abe been tampering with the jury?" Nona inquired.

Audrey looked at her questioningly "Abe is simply bound that I shall go to London," Nona told her. "I wouldn't promise until I had talked with Mr. Morton—and you."

Audrey smiled. "Principally Mr. Morton!" she surmised.

The four of them strolled around the grounds, Nona and Mr. Sunshine admiring the flowers, the clipped hedges, and the rare shrubbery that Morton had imported for Audrey's delight, from Japan and China.

The neighbors next door were in their yard, and Morton and Audrey gave them a pleasant greeting.

"Do you know them?" Mr. Sunshine inquired.

"Certainly," Morton said. "Why?"

Mr. Sunshine looked about him. "Well, I was born and brought up in Toronto, and never yet have I known the people that lived in the next flat.

He returned to his more present concern. "What's become of that young fellow, that used to hang around?"

"Mr. Parrish," supplied Nona.

"Yes, Parrish," Abe said. "Where is he, now?"

"Down at my office, I suppose," Morton said. "Why?"

Abe studied a Japanese dwarf fir tree, that stood in a great green tub before him. "Why, while I was here, I thought I would transact a little business. Maybe this Parrish, now, could help me."

"I know he'd be glad to," Audrey told him. "He will be here today, some time."

Mr. Sunshine shook his head. "I won't bother him here at your house. But if I can get down to the office, I will take it up with him there."

He paused by the kitchen door. The cook, inside, was clattering with a large spoon, beating a mass of paste in a large crock.

"Breakfast is a thing I missed," he said, looking intently into the doorway.

Audrey gave a cry of concern. "Haven't either of you breakfasted! You poor things!"

Taking them each by the arm, she led them around the house, with Morton following after.

"I never thought to ask you—I'm so forgetful."

"My fault," observed Morton, from the rear. "I was so glad to see them, I never even thought about their comfort."

Nona flashed a smile at him over her shoulder, as they went in a side door, and entered the breakfast room.

Morton rang a bell. "Bring some fruit at once," he told the maid who responded. "Tell the cook to prepare eggs and bacon, and some coffee, and serve them right away."

He turned to Nona. "You know, for years I had a housekeeper here, until Audrey was fifteen years old or more. When she went to boarding school, I let the housekeeper go. Since then, there isn't anybody to think of my guests' welfar except Audrey and me—and you see the way we do!"

"Don't!" begged Nona. "It was all right, really! We could have gone until luncheon—it is too bad to make this trouble."

"I was pretty hungry," remarked Mr. Sunshine.

They laughed, Mr. Sunshine joining cheerfully. "If you don't ask for what you want, how do you get it?" he inquired.

After they had breakfasted, Morton asked Nona and Abe if they would like to drive around the city. Nona consented, but Mr. Sunshine said he had business to do.

"We'll take you down town, then," Audrey proposed. "You can get off at the office, if you wish to see Mr. Parrish. Then we'll drive on."

Abe assented, and half an hou later, swung out of the machine at Morton's office. "See you later," he said, and turned into the building.

They drove for several hours. Audrey's cheeks, still pale from her illness, took on a little color as they proceeded. Nona told her of it.

"Do you remember the pinks that used to grow in gardens?" she asked. "Well, you're just like one of those, today."

"And you're like a glorious, brilliant rose," Audrey told her.

Nona reached across Morton, and squeezed Audrey's hand. "Thank you, dear," she said.

Morton interposed. "What am I—a century plant?"

The two girls laughed, and the conversation drifted to other subjects.

Audrey was tired when they returned to the Morton home. The nurse had gone out—"for a breath of fresh air," the little maid explained—so Nona helped Audrey into bed.

Morton was alone downstairs, when she returned. She drew him over to the deep couch, and linking her arm in his, laid her hand upon his wrist.

"Harry, what am I going to do?" she asked him.

With his free hand, he dived into his inner pocket, and drew forth a small parcel, wrapped in tissue paper.

"For me?" she asked, as he handed it to her. He nodded.

She opened the parcel, and let it fall in her lap, her hands upraised, as she exposed a long diamond and platinum bar pin.

"My pin! How did you get it?"

Morton picked up the bit of jewelry, and looked at it contemplatively. "This is the third time I've given it to you, Nona," he said. "I hope it will stay better this time."

He passed it to her, and she fastened it to her waist. "But how did you get it?"

"Those people who robbed you had to turn it into money," he said. "To turn it into money, they had to seel it. The boys in my Toronto office hunted a long time before they located it. But they found it—and here it is."

He pointed to the tissue paper that still lay on her lap. "There is some more, inside."

She looked further, and found a pearl necklace, and several rings. "All my jewelry! Oh Harry!"

She embraced him, and held her cheek pressed against his. "You're so good, and so thoughtful, and so sweet!"

He smiled, gravely, as he replied. "I wish everybody thought that! The dealer who had this jewelry doesn't think so. He didn't make any profit on the deal. I told the boys to give him the choice between taking what he actually paid for them, or going to jail. So I got a bargain."

Nona put on the rings and necklace, and was examining the stones that adorned her fingers when Parrish came in.

The young man bowed to Nona, and she extended her hand. "We're friends now, all the time, aren't we?" she asked.

"You bet," he said. "But that fellow out there!"

He pointed. Morton and Nona, peering, could see Mr. Sunshine, outside the door.

"Mr. Morton, that man put up to me the most insulting proposition I ever heard in my life! If he hadn't been your guest, I'd have thrown him out of the office."

Rising, Morton followed him into the study. Nona looked after them, curiously, while Mr. Sunshine balanced himself on one foot, uncertainly outside the door.

WARSAW CHEESE FACTORY IS BUSY

Making About 17 Cheese a Day—Warsaw News.

WARSAW, June 22.—Warsaw cheese factory is getting in a good quality of milk and making about sixteen cheese a day.

No damage from lightning near Warsaw as a result of Thursday night's storm is reported, but the rain has given many farmer extra work. Much corn ground was ready for sowing and has to be re-worked Some had the ground all marked and have that to do over again. Poor catches of corn already up are still reported. Buckwheat and hungarian are likely to be more plentiful this summer.

Two Armenian boys are placed in homes near Warsaw and are well-liked. It is wonderful the mastery they have of the English language in two year's time. Both of them are musical and they will appear at the Institute convention.

The supper and entertainment at Bethel church on Wednesday evening drew a very large crowd. The receipts were over two hundred dollars. There are some expenses to come out of it. The entertainment was given by the George street Sunday school orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. Cunningham, and three young ladies who came with them. Every number was thoroughly appreciated. Some Hawaiian music was especially pleasing.

There was enough left after the supper to hold a social on Thursday evening. They took in over thirty dollars and had no expense. After tea there were ball and other games.

BOYS' CAMP IS BIG CHANCE FOR BOY TO ENJOY OUTING

Here's How, Why and When of Rotary-Y. M. Plan.

WHAT IS NEEDED.

Everyone Should Read About the Camp, Whether Hoping or Not.

Most men have been boys, though we can recollect two or three men who it seems never had a boyhood worth remembering. They came into town from nowhere, stayed for a time, never interested themselves in others or civic affairs, and finally drifted out carrying with them no memories at all of a good time during their lives. They had not even the good time the perfectly normal boy values in after life—some sort of an excursion, not exactly an adventure, but having something of the flavor and aroma of living away from home and doing the things he has dreamed of. Boys like to live in a cave and imagine the things that go along with such a life.

To direct such aspirations in a good way and still give the boy a chance to do with others the things he fancies he would liek to do, have been devised, among others, boys' camps—where the lad can go and be under reasonable restrictions and yet carry on safely and enjoyably. It has got to be so now that even parents of most moderate means can put their boys in the way of having a good time at merely the expense for food and a little contributed to the camp life. Rotary, Kiwanis, the Y.M.C.A., and other organizations in their activities pay attention to just such, and make such opportunities for outings for boys, and under other auspices for girls.

Rotary and the Y.M.C.A. working together, have made provision for a camp period of nine weeks at Clear Lake, on the Dummer shore of the waters, using the Rotary Camp buildings, for which the community is indebted to the Club. The camp season will start in a few days, and the camp will continue until the approaching school days in September warn all off the grounds.

Scattered over the city are parents just a little undecided what to do with Erasmus or Mordecai, with Tom or Ned, in the matter of holidays. Holidays used to consist in not going to school, but to-day something else is looked for. The camp supplies that want, and should be taken advantage of to benefit every boy. Give the "little feller" a chance. It will be for him the time of his boyish life, for an enjoyable holiday under decent auspices is a privilege not to be lightly esteemed.

Most Parents have Children.

Parents, and most parents have children, may plan to go out of the city to some rather expensive living place, when the cost of the family outing is concerned. Why not ease this outlay by sending the boy, or boys, to the Rotary-Y.M.C.A. Camp with others? Four dollars a week it costs, and eight dollars will give the lad a two weeks outing, and the days for him or them will slide by so quickly that they will be back home, seemingly, in no time at all. So when Dad comes home, get after him. Ask him if he wasn't a boy himself some time or other, and not having experienced the joys of a boys' camp to make sure that his very own boys shall go along. And when Dad says he'll see about it, don't let him be too long about the seeing. Tell him you'll not ask him to take you to the circus if he will chip in for the camp. Of course he will see the advantage at once, for if he agrees as to the circus he will have to produce the money right now, but if to the camp there will be a few days in which to find the coin. That is what is meant in the saying "Hope deferred." But don't let him renege.

Get mother on your side. Mothers have a way of understanding a fellow better than men do their sons. If Mother says "Yes" then it is pretty nearly settled, for Dad will not go back on his promise to the head of the house, even if he looks sideways at you. Perhaps Mother can help out, as she always does. This old world would be a poor place without mother, don't you see.

In order that dad may not find excuses (because he always takes a day or two to get mother to make his mind for him) while mother makes her up at once, the following list of things is here printed, so that there will not be any chance of excuses on the ground that neither of the above mentioned parents know what is required. First there is the boy. That's important. For if there's no boy, then no baggage.

What to Take.

A kit bag or sack. Suit cases don't apply, for the contents of the bag will be dumped on the floor of the camp ten times a day.

A Bible. All nice boys carry a Bible. Get mother's.

Knife, fork and spoon. Tie a red thread on all, so you'll know them when you meet them at table.

Gymnasium suit, if you have one. If not, some clothes that will stand considerable abuse. Also a change of clothing. Some one may ask the camp out to supper.

Soap, towels, tooth brush and comb. The tooth brush in the kit is an infallible sign of social standing.

Needle and thread. If you can't use it some other boy may have been taught to do so. Ask mother about this. Mother knows almost everything.

One blanket or quilt. You know the family quilt, well stuffed with batten and the squares in the pattern are comforting and remind one of home.

Scout hat, or wide brimmed straw. Also a cap. When a boy grabs your straw hat and sends it sailing out on the lake a cap can't be thrown nearly as far. You know all about that—don't tell mother.

Fishing tackle and worms. Plenty of worms. Don't borrow another's fishing rod. No one was ever known to catch much fish with borrowed tackle. And then often a borrowed line breaks. No one lends a real good line.

If you can extort musical sounds from some sort of an instrument take it along. Even if you can't play it looks like a good endeavor. An accordion is a telling thing to manipulate. It makes more noise for its operating area than anything yet devised. Even the fish appreciate good music. Don't be stingy in your efforts to contribute to the liveliness of the camp.

As to a camera—nice thing to take home to mother is a lot of snaps showing her son in all sorts of contortions, and one coming in first in the Long Swim contest. Mother'll get it enlarged and framed for posterity to look at. Never mind about posterity—he'll come along some time later.

Now all of this is written to convince mother and dad that it is up to the pair to send you along. Keep the subject before the family. Not too insistently, but just by careful and casual nudging. Express large hopes that you may go. If Sam Juniper and Teddy Roach are going, don't forget to mention it. Come in and ask the secretary at the Y.M.C.A. who's who and then you can be informed and your parents delighted. You will be taken to the camp site, and brought back, free of expense. The ride both ways is well worth the price of admission.

All information supplied promptly at the "Y." Don't put off a decision. Get ready now. Just think of it! Two whole weeks, and no girls. Of course your view point will change as to the girls further on, but just now the only view point you have is to get to the camp.

INSURANCE AGENT IS LEFT FORTUNE

Buys Cars and House For Family and Starts on World Tour.

BOSTON, June 22 (United Press).—A $30 a week insurance collector went shopping here Monday, bought a $50,000 house, five automobiles and booked passage for a "round-the-world tour." The shopper was Cornelius Sullivan, Jr., of Newton, one time Georgetown quarter back, who had inherited a million dollars over night.

He bought the palatial estate for his parents and the motor cars for his brother and four sisters. The world trip ticket was for himself. Since the death last month in Westchester, N.Y., of Mrs. Ethel Fennell Sullivan, an aunt, he had continued collecting insurance with no intimation he was to be the sole heir. Lawyers figuratively dropped the million in his lap.

"I've always wanted to travel and see the world," Sullivan said, "and one of the first things I'm going to do is some high-powered globe trotting. As for the girls, they've never interested me but maybe I'll be of interest to them from now on.

"I like the insurance game, and when I return from around the world I'm going back to it—as a broker, not a collector."

MANCHESTER MAN VISITS PETERBORO

Samuel Whittaker Guest of Wm. McLaren—Are Old Friends.

Renewing personally an old friendship which has been sustained by twenty years of frequent correspondence, Samuel Whittaker, a business man of Manchester, England, is the guest of William McLaren, 534 Chamberlain Street, on an extended visit through eastern Canada and the United States. Prominent in the councils of the Congregationalist Church in England, Mr. Whittaker has recently made an enquiry into the management of the Congregationalist Church in Massachusetts, and visited Plymouth, the landing place of the Mayflower's little party from the Old Land who founded the church in America. One of the churches that particularly interested him in his Masachusetts itinerary has kept its records from 1645.

In Holyoke, Mass., Mr. Whittaker addressed the Lions' Club on the subjects, "Is England Played Out?"

"I really don't like to mention it, but they told me it was the most interesting address delivered before the club in a long time," Mr. Whittaker said. Last Sunday evening he spoke by request at St. James' United Church in this city, and during the afternoon conveyed a message to the Sunday School from the Oldham Road Independent Chapel Sunday School of Manchester.

Mr. Whittaker has been active all his life in Manchester politics, and is the present chairman of New Moston Division of the Liberal party in Manchester. He is an ardent follower of Lloyd George, and is confident that Liberalism in Great Britain will revive again as it did twenty years ago after a serious split in the party.

Mr. Whittaker said there was no likelihood of the Liberals being absorbed by Labor. Recent events had shown the existence of strong kinship between Liberals and a powerful section of the Labor party which seemed to hold out promise of closer relations in the future.

As to the present controversy between Lord Oxford and Lloyd George, Mr. Whittaker declared himself a Georgian.

He emphasized the following paragraph in a letter he received Monday from his son as indicative of the popularity of Lloyd George. It refers to a visit to Conway in Wales early this month—"We went to hear Lloyd George address his constituents, a huge open air meeting; over 10,000 there. We were up near the platform and had a good view. Lloyd George is very much in the public eye at present owing to his row with Asquith. I suppose you will have read of it in the Canadian papers. Lloyd George seems to have the backing of the rank and file Liberals in the constituencies. He finished his speech in Welsh, and they wound up with "Land of My Fathers," also in Welsh, just like the time you and mother heard him thirty years ago."

Mr. Whittaker is delighted with Canada and especially Peterborough.

He recently motored with Mr. McLaren to Niagara Falls, the illumination of which impressed him as a wonderful spectacle.

ANSWER TO YESTERDAY'S CROSSWORD PUZZLE

FRENCH ACTRESS IS SUICIDE VICTIM

Is Decision of Coroner's Jury Investigating London Shooting.

LONDON, June 22 (United Press).—Regine Flory, the French actress who died last week, committed suicide while mentally deranged, a coroner's jury decided today.

Mlle. Flory shot herself during a conversation with Sir Alfred Butt, director of the Drury Lane Theatre, during which she had asked for a job. A detective testified that he had come from Paris to protect Mlle. Flory from herself, and had listened to the conversation in Sir Alfred's office. There was no quarrel, although Sir Alfred refused the request for a job.

The detective thought Mlle. Flory had talked to her lover, with whom she was living at a local hotel, before going to the theatre.

"That was a mighty interesting movie they showed down at the Boy Scouts' Club last night, Charlie, wasn't it?"

"Dunno," said Charlie, "wasn't there; what was it all about?"

"Well, you see," said Frank, "they were having a little talk about this year's camp, and we are all interested in wild folks, so a nature man brought along a couple of reels of bird and animal pictures. Boy, they were fascinating.

"The first one was about some little birds called Pine Siskin, and we may see some of them this summer, up north. They are a sort of winter canary, and they have the nicest little voices, just like the Goldfinches. They are sparrow-like in color, with a streaky appearance and a hint of yellow in wings and at base of tail, where it joins the body.

"You will have to see them yourself, but what they did was the big noise for they sure have more brains than these big bug naturalists will admit, for they acted very human like.

"First the picture showed a man at his window, scattering some food on a window shelf. Then it showed the birds coming after the food. Then it showed how the birds were not afraid of the man. Well, by degrees, it showed how the man and the birds became real good friends and how they would wait outside his bedroom window in the morning, calling and calling for him to come, but the lazy old duffer was snoring his head off, making up for lost sleep, as he had been out late the night before.

"The birds jabbered away, but he slept. At length they decided he was keeping them too long, so one went into the room and made an inspection. He came out to the tree and told the others that it was a harmless bedroom, and that the man was asleep in bed, and that if they wanted breakfast it would be a case of go in and wake it up. And in they went, through the open window, making such a clatter and pulling his hair so soundly that he awakened and saw them. He shut his eyes again, just to see what they would do, and they began all over again to raise a row. So he arose and fed them. It was a picture worth looking at."

by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

"Come with me," said the Dream-Maker Man to the Twins. "We shall try to find your lost friends, the china elephant and his little clown driver. They must be on the moon somewhere."

Just then Snore came back in his airplane with seventeen dimples off the dimple tree.

"Put the dimples in the ice-box to keep them fresh until I need them for my dreams," said the Dream-Maker Man, "and then come and take us on a journey."

"Yes, sir!" said Snore obediently. And away he went.

But pretty soon he came back and Nancy and Nick and the Dream-Maker Man all climbed into his airplane.

Away they went—brrrr!—like a great bee, for moon airplanes make even more noise than earth ones.

While they were riding, the Twins told the Dream-Maker Man about their adventures and what they had been doing since they had climbed the golden ladder to the moon.

"Well, I declare!" said the Dream-Maker Man. "I declare! One would almost, but not quite, say that you both had been dreaming. But of course, I know better. But we must watch and see where we are going. I want to ask my friend, the Man-in-the-Moon, something."

And the Dream-Maker Man looked over the edge of Snore's airplane and looked down.

"My goodness!" he cried. "There's nothing there! The moon's gone."

"I can't," shouted Snore. "I can't stop unless I have some place to stop on. If the moon's gone, I'll have to keep on going."

Nancy couldn't help wondering what had become of all the poor moon people, the Forty Winks and the queer policeman with the neck that stretched around corners, and the rubber alligators and the giant duck and everybody. And where could Inco and Flops be?

Suddenly Snore called out, "I have no more gasoline! We're going to fall!"

"And without anything to fall on!" thought Nancy and Nick. "Well, that's one comfort. At least we won't get bumped."

The airplane turned with its nose straight down, and the fall began. But it wasn't a fall that made you dizzy and took your breath away. It was a lovely, cool, delicious, soft fall that made you feel wonderful.

"I could keep this up for quite a while," said Nancy.

"I shouldn't mind myself," said the Dream-Maker Man, "if there was anything to fall on. But ——"

Suddenly bang—bump! They had landed on something dark and hard.

And Snore's airplane flew to pieces.

HER OWN WAY

by a Girl of Today

ALONE IN THE WORLD.

It seemed to me that we had been surrounded by servants ever since I had been in the house, but as both butler and footman left the dining room for a moment as we sat down to dinner I could not help remarking:

"I am afraid, Joan, that your stepfather would not approve of your having me out here."

"What he doesn't know won't hurt him or me either," she said, and then a shade passed over her face. "I will not tell him. I don't always tell Dad everything I do. Perhaps it would be better if I had. I can't tell. I can't tell.

'For instance, he would have a fit if he knew that I have been in the habit of going to The Circle and dancing with Barry every afternoon for the last three months."

"Who is Barry?" I asked abruptly, for I had a feeling that this young man was the reason why I had been asked to have dinner with Joan."

"Barry is the chap I bought the dozen bunch of handkerchiefs for this afternoon," she answered, "and—and —"

I kept perfectly still.

"Well, why don't you ask me 'and what?'" she questioned in a most peculiar tone of voice.

"Because I do not want you to say anything to me that you might regret, my dear."

"Judy, you say that 'my dear' as though you were old enough to be my mother and yet I don't think you are more than a year or two older than I."

Joan Meredith stopped, for the servants had returned. And then all through the dinner we talked of only the very commonplace things. The moment, however, that they left the room, she dropped her head upon her arms and sobbed as though her heart would break.

I was really taken completely out of myself with surprise. I left my seat quickly and put my arms about the girl sitting on the other side of the table.

"What is the matter? What is the matter, Joan? Certainly there is no reason for you to cry like this."

She raised herself to her feet, flung her arms around my neck, and said "Help me, Judy, Help me. I haven't anyone in the world, except you."

TOMORROW: New Entanglements.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

WEDNESDAY JUNE 23.

The forecast for this day is one promising particularly lively and eventful conditions, with the prospect of an unlooked for development that may be deemed as radical in its suddenness and importance. With iniative and aggressiveness rampant, under the high impetus of Mars and Uranus, with the convertible Mercury lending its meed of stimulus, there is every indication of stirring events. However, Jupiter withholds his succor, consequently the finances should not be wantonly placed in jeopardy through speculative ventures. Also affix the signature with unusual precaution.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for an extremely lively and stirring year, with sudden and abrupt openings of a surprising nature. All should lead to fresh undertakings and important projects, but safeguard the money and be slow in speculation. Also be cautious in signing all papers and contracts. A child born on this day may be bold, adventurous, resourceful and given to great and untried ventures into fresh fields of investigation and experiment.

Every three minutes a baby is born in London.

Four Hurt; Four Jailed In Quarrel Over Dime

CHICAGO, June 22 (Canadian Press).—A thin dime was lost, found, and confiscated in Maxwell Street yesterday, but not until four men were taken to a hospital and four others to jail.

Joseph Zern, a peddler, was juggling the dime when it fell and went rolling in a wide curve to the feet of a colored man, John Wins. Wins clamped his foot on it, then picked it up. That started an argument. Another colored man stood by Wins. In a minute a battle was on and others joined in. From using hands, missiles were taken up. Clubs came next.

Four were fractured and cut so badly the police carried them off to the county hospital. Wins and three others were carried to the cells. Nobody knows yet who has the dime.

MIDGETS TRIM MARRIED MEN

Average Age Among Benedicts Was 50—Tots Were 15.

MARMORA, June 22.—Somewhat out of the ordinary was the baseball game on Deloro sands last Thursday evening when a married men's team, ages averaging fifty, dared to try conclusions with Hector Boudreau's Midgets whose ages average fifteen. This unique game drew a good crowd of spectators who saw the Benedicts go under by the score of 12-7. For the men, G. O'Neil and F. Mathews shared the pitching and Arthur Hart the versatile veteran won notice by his agility at catching. W. Skinner and A. Phillips hurled for the boys and M. Callery was in his regular place as catcher. The game provided practice for the boys for their game with Madoc juniors and gave the spectators a laughable five innings of comedy.

W. Regan and W. Shultz were the umpires.

DELORO GIRLS' CLUB FALLS TO CORDOVA

Runs Were Made and Luck Changed in Quick Succession.

MARMORA, June 22.—Deloro Sunnyside Club visited Cordova on Saturday afternoon to play the local girls team at softball and retired defeated by the score 22-17.

It being the first occasion for team representing these villages to engage each other in this pastime, keen interest was centred in the game. Deloro for the first three innings had slightly the better of play, scoring seven runs to their rivals three. In the fourth innings, the Sunny's retired in order. Cordova going in to bat could not be ousted before they had chalked up eight counters. The score remained unchanged in the fifth frame. Deloro in the sixth duplicated the performance of Cordova in the fourth, adding eight runs in quick succession. Though behind once more Cordova were not daunted and seven runs came their way. The seventh inning was scoreless.

In the eighth Jean Reynolds obtained a home run for the visitors who scored again ere the innings closed. In their half Cordova did even better. Mary Yeomans and M. Bowen each hit a homer while two more runs were added. Deloro going in the ninth time tried hard to reduce the lead but success was denied them. Madeline Gaffney pitched good ball for the Sunnysides. Norah Foster, their catcher, was injured early in the game in collision and though returning to play retired later in the game. Cordova possessed a good battery in Mary Yeomans and B. Bowen.

The home team were heavier hitters but their fielding at times was somewhat poor and counted against them. Both teams are capable of making a good showing if ever a local league becomes a possibility. Rev. C. H. Ferguson and Floyd Gray umpired the game. The teams were as follows:

WORLD'S BEST PLAYERS GATHER AT JUBILEE TENNIS TOURNAMENT

Suzanne Lenglen Has Unusu al Experience of Suffering Defeat in Exhibition D oubles Game in Partnership With Miss Ryan.

MEETS MARY BROWNE TODAY

WIMBLEDON, England, June 22 (Canadian Press).—It was a royal opening that the jubilee Wimbledon tennis tournament had yesterday, with King George and Queen Mary officiating at the initial ceremonies, the Duke of York in the royal box with Their Majesties to watch the play and royal weather to crown the event.

The opening ceremonies, with the presentation of medals to the former champions by Queen Mary on the red carpeted centre court were so long drawn out that the playing events were late in starting, and it was not until after eight o'clock that the last of the day's matches was completed.

One of these was the contest in which Henri Cochet, French hard courts champion, defeated A. N. W. Dudley, the former English army champion, and the Frenchman's victorious start in the tournament was watched by a deeply interested crowd, as he thereby earned the right to meet Vincent Richards in the third match to-day. Though coming early in the tournament, this is one of the most important of the entire series, as it will probably have a vital bearing on the outcome of the championship.

The most interesting feature of the day's play was a one-set exhibition match in which Mlle. Lenglen and her partner, Miss Elizabeth Ryan, had the unusual experience of defeat at the hands of the opposing pair, who in this case happened to be Mrs. L. A. Godfree (formerly Miss Kitty McKane) and Miss Bouman, the latter of Holland.

The French star, shedding her green sweater, put every ounce of energy into her endeavor to stave off the determined attack, but Miss Ryan, who was off her game, gave her little help, and they lost to the tune of 6-8.

Mrs. Godfree and Mlle. Lenglen had several interesting exchanges over the net which gave them an opportunity to take each other's measure for they are likely to meet in the women's singles later on in the tourney. In the longest duel between the two, with their partners taking no part for the moment in the play, Mrs. Godfree won out when Susanne netted the ball in an attempt to make a kill.

Senorita D'Alvarez, originally scheduled to play with Mrs. Godfree, did not "feel just right for the game," and withdrew. There had been much speculation as to how the Spanish star would re-act on the Wimbledon grass courts opposite the French ace.

The formidable French team came through, with one exception, Cochet, Gobert, Borotra and Brugnon all winning their matches, but Feret, from whom considerable had been expected, failed to keep up the pace set by Baron Von Kehrling of Hungary, and was eliminated after a hard fight.

None of the women's events on the regular programme were contested, but to-day Mlle. Lenglen and Miss Mary Browne, of the United States team, will meet on the centre court, and there is keen interest in how Miss Browne will carry on the battle against Suzanne on the Wimbledon turf as compared with her play in the recent hard court match at Paris when she was easily defeated by the French champion.

SOFTBALL GAMES AT PETHERICK'S

Home Team Beats Wellman's at Orange Lodge Garden Party.

PETHERICKS CORNERS, June 22. — The local Orangemen and the members of the associated ladies' lodge, held a social in Mr. John Simpson's grove on Friday evening. The night being cold there was a somewhat smaller crowd present than was anticipated, but those who faced the raw air were well entertained. Music was provided by the Northumberland Regiment band. Refreshment booths dispensed various things to satisfy the inner man, while those who enjoyed athletic games were attracted by the softball game between Wellman's Corners and the local team. The home boys were successful winning by 36 runs to 21 in a five inning encounter. The game was very even until the fourth inning when the local batters opened up, driving in 11 counters, with 18 more for good measure in the final spasm. Four home runs aided the Wellman's boys considerably in piling up their total. Players were numerous on both sides.

The teams:

Wellman's Corners: F. Wannamaker, Harry Preston, H. Dafoe, Carl Clancy, Ted Preston, A. Anderson, L. King, F. Dracup, H. Browning.

Peterick's Corners: G. Kerr, Ted Owens, Gerald Petherick, Roy Barnum, Earl Fairman, W. Spencer, L. Anderson, Everett Fairman, Fred Barnum; sub., Thomas Fry.

Umpires: Grant Thain at plate; Roy Fry at bases.

About 60 attended the league meeting on Thursday evening last. The programme was in charge of the Citizenship committee. An interesting discussion on the subject "Are the week night meetings of our church organizations of any benefit o our young people?" provided entertainment as well as much food for thought. One and all voiced the opinion that the league and similar organizations were doing real good work for the young people.

The usual soft ball game before the service resulted in the Whites wresting a 9 to 6 victory from the unfortunate Blues after the latter had secured a five run lead in the early innings. The teams were confined to seven men each, as some were not present.

Whites: F. Barnum, Thos. Fry, Roy Fry, Grant Kerr, Don Kerr, A. Simpson, Gerald Petherick.

Blues: Ted Owens, Everett Fairman, Art, Petherick, Roy Barnum, D. Wellman, Ray Dunk, C. Barnum.

Umpires: At plate, Earl Fairman; on bases, L. Anderson.

Diamond Disputes Decided

By BILLY EVANS

Can a batsman score from third base on a balk?

He certainly can score. The calling of a balk on the pitcher entitles all baserunners to advance one base.

For some reason confusion often exists as to the rights of the baserunner on third to cross the plate when the umpire calls a balk.

The impression among many fans is that a runner has the right to advance from first to second and from second to third on a balk but there is a doubt as to his right to score.

The rule relative to the calling of a balk is very definite. It gives all baserunners the right to advance one base. It makes no difference whether it is from first to second, second to third or third to the plate.

Just remember that and any confusion about the play will be erased.

KIWANIANS SCORE OVER LAKEFIELD

Peterborough Battery Proves Too Strong for the Lakefield Juveniles.

Jack Deannard's Kiwanians had their second decisive victory when they defeated the Lakefield Juveniles in the Lakefield Exhibition grounds by a score of 5 to 0.

On account of the rain the game was shortened down to 5 innings, but all through snappy baseball was displayed on the part of both teams. Lefty Guiry pitched in his usual good style and with Harold Hutchison as battery mate they proved too strong for Lakefield. Guiry had eight strike-outs and allowed six hits.

Both teams were held scoreless until the first of the fourth when Gillespie, White, Guiry, Sturgeon and Hollingsworth brought in five runs for the Kiwanians.

The fine-up was as follows:

Lakefield—S, Payne, c.; Stabler, l.f.; McDonald, s.s.; Moore, 1b.; Porter, c.f.; Northey, 2b.; Hamblin, 3b.; Loosemore, r.f.; Madill, p.

HELPFUL HINTS TO GOLFING STARS

CECIL LEITCH—CONFIDENCE IN PUTTING.

There are women players who go up to the ball and putt without any hesitancy. The results are so good at times that it makes the ordinary mortal wonder whether she ought to adopt a similar casual manner, but in the long run a strong combination of determination and concentration on the green will reap its reward. Speaking of my own experiences I am convinced that my mind is not on the task in hand half the time. I am endowed with a particularly keen sense of hearing and, when playing before a crowd, I constantly find myself listening to whispered remarks when I should be concentrating to an extent which would make this eaves-dropping I am constantly asked why I do not learn to putt, but few people realize how difficult it is to practice this part of the game. To my mind there is nothing simpler than to put approach putts stone dead and hole out with regularity from a reasonable distance when nothing is dependent upon the result.

It is a very different story in an important event, for then the yard putt is doubly difficult and the long approach putts become terrifying.

SECRETS of STARS on INSIDE BASEBALL

as told to BILLY EVANS

BY JOE DUGAN.

DUGAN

The most difficult play a third baseman must make? Well, that is merely a matter of opinion.

To my way of thinking, it is the handling of a swinging bunt down the third-base line. Now to illustrate:

Let us suppose the batsman is a slugger, fond of pulling the ball down the third-base line with great speed. Such a type hitter is Harry Heilmann, champion batsman of the American League.

When batters of the Heilmann type are up, it is customary for the third-sacker to play deep, largely as a matter of self-preservation.

We will assume that Heilmann, after taking a healthy swing at the ball, merely tops it. The result is usually a slow bounder in the direction of third.

The fact that the third baseman is playing so deep is what makes the handling of such a ball so difficult.

In making this play, the moment I see the ball has been topped I rush in with all speed, keeping my eye on the ball. When I believe the proper time has arrived to execute the play, I make a sweeping downward motion with my right hand.

If I have properly judged the bound and am favored with good luck, I come up with the ball, which, however, is merely the beginning of the play. The more difficult part is just ahead.

To get your man at first it is necessary that you make a speedy and accurate throw to that base. This must be done while on the run and without straightening up to get set for the throw. Such a delay would invariably result in the loss of the play.

The fact that such a play is the exception rather than the rule adds to the difficulty of successfully executing it. To overcome this, I make it a point to try to handle a dozen such batted balls in practice every day.

MOVIGRAPHS

HOLLYWOOD.—Sweet, ingenuous youth, which has waited on the sidelines while audacious, flaming youth has had representative fling on the screen, is going to have its glorious day.

Fox Films, especially, is gathering a group of unspoiled, and in some cases entirely untrained, youngsters for choice parts in that company's best pictures for the coming year. Seven have been contracted, and others are being sought.

In the Kindergarten.

These boys and girls, all under 20, and displaying various personality, have in common that actual bloom and charm which every parent would like to see preserved in his own children—the idealism which seems so quickly squandered in this generation.

The Fox Kindergarten, as they have been collectively dubbed, comprises Janet Gaynor, Richard Walling, Olive Borden, Gladys, McConnel, Gene Cameron, Barry Norton and Reata Hoyt.

Winfield R. Sheehan, vice president of Fox, became convinced that the public is satiated with the antics of the worldly-wise, sex-hectic flappers and sheiks on the screen: that interest has reverted to the more sedate, unsophisticated boy and girl. And very carefully, from a great number tested, he selected the juniors because they genuinely could represent, wholesome youth.

Training was regarded as non-essential, if not actually detrimental, for this particular coterie of cubs, because the usual course of preparing youngsters for the films involves so much of trying and disillusioning experience that few real adolescent emotions are left.

Following out his experiment of bringing the very spirit of the lovely, unschooled "teens" to the screen, Sheehan assigned his proteges at once to important roles under the best of the company's directors. Janet Gaynor, 19, will be seen in "The Johnstown Flood," "The Shamrock Handicap" and "Pigs."

Important Roles.

"The Lily" will bring to light Barry Norton, an 18-year old boy from Argentine, and Reata Hoyt, 18, a dancer of Zeigfeld's Follies, recommended for films by Irving Berlin.

"Pigs" is also the starting picture for Richard Walling, selected from Fox's still camera staff, and Gladys McConnel and Gene Cameron, both of whom had some experience in two-reel comedies.

Olive Borden is the most experienced of the septet, and already has given excellent account of her talent and grace.

TWO SOCIALISTS WERE EXECUTED

Home Secretary Says Dutch Leaders Interfered With British Trade.

DURING STRIKE.

LONDON, June 23.—(Canadian Press.) — It was revealed in the House of Commons yesterday that the British Government refused to allow the Dutch Socialists, Fimmen and Oudegeest, to come to England to attend the International Labor Conference on Emigration now sitting here. Edo Fimmen is president of the International Federation of Transportation and Yan Oudegeest is head of the Dutch Labor Federation.

Replying to a question from Arthur Henderson as to why the men were excluded, Sir William Joynson Hicks, the home secretary, replied because he had ascertained during the recent general strike that they had tried to interfere with British trade by arranging that British ships should be held up in foreign ports. He had decided not to allow them to come here to concoct further plans of that kind.

WOMEN CROWD TO SOLEMN MASS

175,000 Women at Eucharistic Congress For Special Service.

WOMEN'S CHOIR.

CHICAGO, June 22.—(Canadian Press.)— The greatest assemblage of women ever gathered within one enclosure in North America banked the stands in the soldiers' field today at the second public session of the International Eucharistic Congress. It was women's day—and the vast arena harbored less than 5,000 men in the 180,000 worshippers.

Cloudless skies greeted the fair throngs and the sun shone brilliantly.

Solemn pontifical mass at the great outdoor altar was celebrated by the Most Rev. Joseph Palica, Archbishop of Filippi and Vice Regent. The women's choir of 15,000, including 5,000 hood nuns chanted the Missa Ross Mystica, famous mass of Vito Carnevali.

Unlike yesterday's programme addresses were begun before mass was celebrated. Speakers were Archbishop of Vienna, Cardinal Piffl, who spoke in German, and Associate Justice Butler, of the United States' Supreme Court, who stressed the importance of religious training as a factor in the moral development of the democratic institutions.

COAL COMMITTEE SUBMITS REPORT

Asks That Trial Shipments Be Made of Alberta Coal.

OTTAWA, June 22 (Canadian Press).—In its final report to the House this afternoon, the special committee on coal supply makes twelve recommendations. Some of them are that trial shipments of Alberta Western coal be made by rail and lake under supervision of the Dominion Fuel Board in order to ascertain the possibilities of moving Alberta coal, with modern loading and unloading facilities.

That such legislation be enacted as will encourage production of domestic coke from Canadian coal.

That the duty of fifty cents per ton, now imposed on bituminous slack coal be extended to apply to anthracite small coal, known to the trade as "buckwheat and pea coal."

That the Government consider the question of granting some assistance to encourage enlargement of markets of Maritime coal.

That the Railway Commission be asked to ascertain and report upon the cost of carrying coal from Alberta mines to Port Arthur and Fort William.

That early consideration be given by the Government as to advisability of renewing the vote in estimates for the purpose of assisting rail movement of Canadian coal of which the unexpended balance was $180,000.

POLICE CHIEF NEWHALL

in this co-operation with the extra mural permit and parole system, after having two of his best officers sent to their graves at the hands of Leo Rogers, who everyone remembers, and a system to which General Williams took strong exception at the Windsor convention."

"Again Dr. Lavell confuses the people," he continued, "by using the words 'Chief Dickson has told me he is in favor of the parole system.'

"In answer to that, every chief constable is in favor of paroling prisoners provided it is done in the proper manner. I think it would have been wise if the doctor had left off the word 'system' with Chief Dickson."

"Every case where a man receives an indeterminate sentence from a Magistrate in Toronto must be passed upon after sentence by Chief Dickson," was another quotation from the interview criticized by Chief Newhall.

"In the course of a few days," he said, "The Examiner may have some more information which will throw some light on whether the Toronto police get a chance of reporting on them or not."

In the same issue of the Telegram the Chief drew attention to a news item headed "Nickle Satisfied," reading "Attorney General Nickle emphatically stated to-day that in spite of the criticism by the Police Chiefs' Convention of the Ontario system of parole for prisoners, there will be no change as far as he is concerned." "It is working satisfactorily,' he said."

"How in the world can the Attorney-General of the province see his way clear to ignore such a resolution as that forwarded from the Chief Constables' convention?" asked Chief Newhall. "Surely there must be some mistake in the article."

Nothing apparently was done regarding the paper that Inspector Wallace read at the 1925 Winnipeg Convention, except that it was partially denied and found fault with by Dr. Lavell," said the Chief, "yet when thoroughly investigated by the executive members of the Chief Constables' Association they had no other option than to bring this matter before the conference again this year."

One of the speakers at the convention was Judge Marcus Kavanagh of the Superior Court of Cook's County, Chicago, the Chief said, adding: "Every person who heard that learned judge's speech will remember it to his dying day." He pointed out what this system might mean to Canada if it obtained anywhere the same leeway as in the United States.

A few of the Judge's remarks were: "In that land of teeming prisons, thousands of schools, and forests of church spires, one hundred thousand people have perished by poison, pistol and knife in the last ten years. Eighty-five per cent. of these crimes were committed by men previously convicted."

"Criminals never start their career with a serious crime," Chief Newhall said, "and while the convention agreed with the Judge that to abolish the Boards of Parole would be a serious step backward, the Judge answered, 'It's a great question if that backward step should not be taken'."

Elected to Executive.

Chief of Police Newhall was this year placed on the Ontario Executive of the Chief Constables' Association. He has had thirty-one years' experience on the London and Liverpool police forces, and for the past twenty years has been connected with the local police department. It is well known that he has had more dangerous criminals through his own hands than those in much larger cities in the Dominion.

Leaders Take Jump On Strong Stock Market

TORONTO, June 22 (Canadian Press)—Brazilian Traction, British Columbia Fishing and Barcelona, were strong points in trading on Toronto Stock Exchange today. The market was characterized by a firm tendency which sent leaders higher than they have been for some time past.

Brazilian closed at 98 3-8 for net gain of 1 1-8. British Columbia Fishing was next in volume of sales and registered an advance of 3 1-4 at 74 3-4. Barcelona was active and touched new high for present movement at 34, for net gain of 2 1-8. Smelters was inactive but showed net gain of 11-4 at 210 1-4.

Wheat Values Decrease Due To Favorable Weather

CHICAGO, June 22 (Canadian Press)—Continued favorable weather over the southwest and easiness in the Liverpool market tended to give wheat values here downward swing during the early dealings. Starting 1-4 to 5-8c lower, the wheat market declined still further on scattered commission selling and then reacted somewhat. Corn and oats were easier with wheat, corn opening 1-8c to 3-8c down, with July delivery quickly touching new low on crop and then rallying slightly. Provisions were weak in line with the grain values and the drop in price of hogs.

Railroad Shares Featured On Wall Street Market

NEW YORK, June 22.— (Canadian Press.)—Spirited bidding for railroad shares, probably inspired by unusually favorable nature of May earnings reports now being published featured resumption of upward movement of prices in today's stock market.

Oils started upward at a brisk pace under the leadership of Phillips and Texas Company, which attained new 1926 peak prices, but buying movement soon petered out. Steels headed upward after an early period of irregularities on reports that orders for structural steel and railroad track material were running heavy in the Chicago district.

Dome Features Trading At Standard Exchange

TORONTO, June 22 (Canadian Press)—Trading was active and was dispersed over a broad list, on Standard Mining Exchange today. Dome again featured the market, opening 40c per share higher, but later declining to 14.30 for net gain of 30c.

Hollinger was weak and inactive, closing 25 points lower at 19.75. Lake Shore was up three points at 11.38 and Teck Hughes, same amount at 3.65. Wright Hargreaves was stronger at 8.20 for net gain of 10c. Vipond was up three points and McIntyre was unsteady within ten point range of yesterdays' close. Canadian Lorrain and Crown Reserve showed fractional advances, while Keeley was off two to four points. Noranda was unchanged to five points off. Mining Corporation was unsteady from three points up to four points off.

BANK OFFICIALS CONFESS CRIME

Cashier and Former President of Kansas Bank Planned Robbery.

WOMEN INVOLVED.

CHERRYDALE, Kas., June 22.—(Canadian Press.)—Clarence Howard, cashier of the Montgomery County National Bank, and G. G. Robertson, its former president, confessed yesterday that they had planned the robbery of the institution which took place on May 26 and carried it out with the assistance of three hold-up men. Two women are involved in the story that Robertson told police officials.

DEPARTMENT MAY HOLD INVESTIGATION

Activities Into Klan May Be Made Basis of Inquiry.

TORONTO, June 22 (Canadian Press).—Hon. W. F. Nickle, Attorney-General of Ontario, intimated to-day that if facts warranted it, his Department might conduct an investigation into the general activities of the Ku Klux Klan in this province.

This announcement follows the arrest of William Skeely here yesterday in connection with the explosion in St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church, Barrie, Ontario, on June 10, and the alleged statement of Skelly that he had been instructed by the Klan to perform the act.

THEATRE

AT THE CAPITOL

"MANNEQUIN"

It is seldom that James Cruze puts his hand to the production of a picture for the screen that he fails to turn out something really worth while. The picturization of "Mannequin" from Fannie Hurst's $50,000 prize story, bears the earmarks of his artistic hand, and the combination of his work with the talent of the author in a story that has the characteristic little quirks that make her writings always interesting joined with the very excellent cast of actors, all make "Mannequin" an extremely entertaining feature.

The story is one of those absorbing affairs that have a very romantic atmosphere, and includes also in its unfolding the theme of mother love and of dramatic tragic interest, in the scenes where the heroine is tried for her life in a court of law.

It has, too, what most pictures lack, and what has really been always associated more with the spoken drama than with the silent sheet, a quality of sustained suspense in the various scenes. A sense of curiosity as to the meaning of the episodes is felt by the audience as the story unfolds itself. Right from the first moment, when the mother of 1907, with her pompadour and trailing skirts, her tight face veil and beaded 'reticule" at her side, appears with the perambulator that contains the baby Joan, the curious atmosphere increases. There is always something in the air that hints of the tragic moment to come.

The story has already been fully outlined in advance notices, but these do not give a hint of the quality of the production or the intense interest of the story itself. The cast is exceptional. Alice Joyce is the mother, Mrs. Herrick, and Dolores Costello is the lovely heroine, the baby Joan, who becomes, through the cunning of the half-wit nurse, Orchid Sargasso, while Warner Baxter is the hero of out of the ordinary mould, Martin Innesbrook.

Little items go to round out the story. A Ming shawl, heavy with Chinese embroidery, a white horse passing by at a crucial moment, a can of tomatoes with "Sargasso" written across its face, a heavy jewelled pin thrust through a ribbon sash, all have their part in the construction of the tale. It is seldom that a producer places the emphasis on such details as has been done in "Mannequin," but the result is an illustration of the forward steps in the moving picture art which have been taken in recent years, and a demonstration also, of the art of a very fine type of producer.

The music accompanying "Mannequin" is interesting, with the haunting "Remember" refrain as a theme. —Jeanette.

AT THE REGENT

GRIPPING DRAMA OF SOCIETY HERE WITH ALMA RUBENS.

"The Gilded Butterfly" Opens Engagement at Regent Theatre—Bert Lytell Co-Featured.

Beautiful Alma Rubens and handsome Bert Lytell are co-featured in the Fox Films production, "The Gilded Butterfly," which came to the Regent Theatre yesterday for 3 days.

This gripping drama of society tells the story of a lovely young girl, raised to believe herself enormously wealthy—who finds herself destitute at the death of her father.

She has always had everything she wanted—she knows nothing of earning money, nor of saving it—so she borrows money and sets out to "keep up the show." Her life from then on forms the basis of an absorbing story which comes to a thrilling and unexpected climax.

Others in the cast are Huntly Gordon, Herbert Rawlinson, Vera Lewis, Frank Keenan, Arthur Hoyt and Carolynne Snowden. John Griffith Wray directed the production.

A wise man among the ignorant is as a beautiful girl in the company of blind men.—Saadi.

CAPTAIN CENSURED FOR SHIP COLLISION

Commissioner Finds That Captain Failed To Exercise Caution.

OTTAWA, June 22 (Canadian Press).—Dominion Wreck Commissioner in the judgment delivered this morning finds that James Cuthbert master of the steamer Dalwarnio, failed to exercise "that caution which is expected of all seamen." Judgment is on case of collision between steamers Nisbest Granner and Dalwarnio, near 31 Mile Point, Lake Ontario, on May 31. Nisbest Granner was sunk and became a total loss.

The judgment finds that Captain Cuthbert on hearing one blast signal on his starboard bow should have kept out of the way by porting, stopping or going astern and sounding alarm signals. Capt. Cuthbert's certificate is suspended for balance of the season, but the court recommends granting of mates' certificate in interim. The mate of Dalwarnio, John Ferguson, is exonerated. The Master of steamer Nisbest Granner, Albert Laking, has had his certificate suspended for one month for failing to give implicit instructions to his officer. The mate, Marshall Robson, has had his certificate suspended for three months.

U. S. A. EXPECTS LARGE SURPLUS

Coolidge Warns, However, That Further Tax Cuts Cannot Be Promised.

MUST BE SURE.

WASHINGTON, June 22 (Canadian Press)—Announcing probable $390,000,000 treasury surplus for this fiscal year, ending June 30, and promising comfortable balances for the next two years, President Coolidge last night warned that another tax reduction must await the full test of the new revenue law. Outlining a programme of "constructive economy" to the department and bureau chiefs of the government in an address to the semi-annual budget meeting President Coolidge said the treasury should end next year with a surplus of $185,000,000 and the following fiscal year with a margin of $20,000,000. But it would be "unfortunate" to promise additional tax reduction on the basis of these figures, Mr. Coolidge declared, "until we are sure that the state of our finances justifies it."

TRUCK DRIVER FATALLY BURNED

Makes Unsuccessful Attempt To Extinguish Gasoline Fire.

JUMPS INTO DITCH.

WINDSOR, June 22 (Canadian Press)—Glen Hall, truck driver for the Western Motor Corporation, was perhaps fatally burned when he unsuccessfully attempted to prevent a gasoline fire at the Company's plant here today.

While the gasoline was being transferred from one storage tank to another it became ignited when it flowed over a hot engine, flames catching Hall's clothing. Hall climbed a wire fence and plunged into a water filled ditch. Before the flames were extinguished, however, he had suffered terrible burns.

Hall came to the Border Cities a short time ago from his home in Ostrander near Tilisonburg.

WEDDING BELLS.

BRADY—CAHILL

A pretty wedding took place at eight o'clock this morning, at the Church of the Sacred Heart, when Rev. J. J. O'Brien performed the ceremony which united in the holy bonds of matrimony Mary Ellen, third daughter of Mr. Patrick Cahill, 499 Parnell street, and the late Mrs. Cahill, and Edward Clare Brady, second son of Mrs. Mary Brady, 177 Douro street, and the late Bernard Brady. The wedding march was played by Mr. John Armstrong, and, during the Nuptial Mass, an "Ave Maria" and several other hymns were sung very sweetly by a sister of the bridegroom, Miss Stella Brady, wearing a dress of grey georgette, trimmed with silver lace, and leghorn hat.

The bride wore a lovely frock of honeydew flat crepe, made with pleated front section to the skirt and trimmed with cream lace. She wore a large blonde silk mohair hat, trimmed with contrasting shades, a georgette scarf with hand-painted ends, blonde shoes and stockings, and carried a bouquet of butterfly roses and lily of the valley.

The bridesmaid, Miss Marcella Cahill of Buffalo, N.Y., a sister of the bride, was in orchid canton crepe, trimmed with rose, a picture hat of orchid silk mohair touched with velvet and grey kid shoes and grey stockings. She carried a bouquet of ophelia roses and mauve sweet peas.

A brother of the bridegroom, Mr. Urban Brady, acted as best man.

After the ceremony, a dainty wedding breakfast was served to a number of guests at the home of Mrs. M. Brady, Douro street, where floral decorations were carried out with iris, peonies and lilacs.

Mr. and Mrs. Brady left on the afternoon C.P.R. train for a honeymoon trip to Toronto, Niagara Falls and Buffalo, the bride travelling in a sports costume of white silk and wool crepe, bordered in poudre blue, with white sports hat and white kid shoes. On their return, they will reside at 177 Douro street.

The young people were recipients of many beautiful and costly gifts. The gift of the bridegroom to the bride was a handsome leather purse, to the bridesmaid, a matrix opal rosary, to the soloist, an ivory-handled parasol, and to the best man a green gold penknife.

Circus Parade Not Cancelled On Account of Fee Required

A rumor is being persistently circulated that there will be no circus parade on Friday because either the city or the exhibition board had demanded an excessive fee for permission to parade on the streets or across the grounds. There is no foundation for this report.

It is true that there will be no circus parade. This is due, however, to the fact that, for reasons of time and money saved, the Ringling Brothers, since they combined their show with Barnum and Bailey, have discontinued these parades. They find that it means getitng everything in readiness for the opening at 11.00 a.m., instead of 2.00 p.m., and that three valuable hours are wasted. In addition when the arrival of the circus is delayed it becomes necessary to postpone or cancel the parade after people have waited for several hours on the streets.

FLAG QUESTION COMES UP AGAIN IN SOUTH AFRICA

Labor Party Resolution Suggests Equal Recognition of Both Standards

HERTZOG MAY AGREE

Nationalist Executive Accepts the Proposal and Pledges Support

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, June 23.—(Canadian Press Cable via Reuters)— The controversy over the government's proposed new South African flag, the design of which would have excluded the Union Jack, has assumed a new aspect.

The National Council of the Labor Party a few days ago passed a resolution that there should be equal official recognition of two flags, one a symbol of the Empire, and the other a symbol of South African nationality.

A deputation from the Council has now intervened, Hon. Tielman Roes, Minister of Justice, and the executive of the Nationalists Party at Pretoria. The latter have expressed complete satisfaction with the Labor Party Council's resolution and moreover have pledged the full support of the Nationalist party to it.

As it is by means of a pact between the Nationalist and Labour Parties that the Government of Premier J. B. Hertzog is in power, the Government may accept this compromise. If such a compromise is also ratified by Parliament, then the Empire Flag and National Flag or Union Jack and South African Flags, will fly side by side over the Parliament House when Parliament is sitting, and over public buildings on occasions when the flag is officially flown.

The bill providing for the New South African Flag has been withdrawn from the House of Assembly, to be re-introduced at the next session. Its provisions are that the Union Jack should be flown with the South African Flag "on state occasions."

Judge in Bankruptcy Court Gives Judgment Against Firm

TORONTO, June 23 (Canadian Press).—Characterizing the circumstances surrounding the failure of Gordon Brothers Limited, manufacturers of ladies' wear, as "one of the most brazen cases of fraud ever tried in this court," Mr. Justice Fisher, in Bankruptcy Court, yesterday, delivered judgment against Frank, Phillip, and Lily Gorden, directors of the bankrupt concern, and Jennie Gordon, Kate Soloman, and Frank Abrahams, the latter a brother-in-law of the Gordons; Miss Soloman, a sister-in-law, and Jennie Gordon, wife of Frank Gordon, for amounts which totalled aproximately $60,000.

COOK IS CHARGED WITH ATTEMPT AT RUIN OF BRITISH COAL INDUSTRY IN SPEECH BY LORD BIRKENHEAD

Cabinet Will Gird for Great Struggle If Driven To It

TO SAVE NATION

Will Not Be Broken by Men Taking Orders from Soviet

LONDON, June 23, Canadian Press. — Following closely upon the decision of the Labor party to offer strenuous opposition to the government's new bills which have as their purpose the re-organization of the mining industry, the Earl of Birkenhead, secretary for India, has delivered a verbal broadside against A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation.

Cook was charged by Lord Birkenhead in a speech last night, of aiming at the destruction of the coal mining industry and the nationalization of the mines. He virtually accused Mr. Cook and his followers of taking their cue in the labor situation from Soviet Russia.

Lord Birkenhead said that he and his colleagues were fully determined that if they were driven to it "by this attempt to blackmail society by men who declare they have a strangle hold on the vital cords of industry, we shall once again, sorrowfully, but resolutely, gird ourselves for a great struggle—we shall not permit the nation to be destroyed.

"We who have broken down every despot in Europe," Lord Birkenhead added, "will not be broken down by men who take their biddings from a discredited revoluntionary junta, in the most poverty stricken country in Europe."

CANADA'S PLAN GIVEN APPROVAL

Decision to Have Commons Ratify All Treaties Commended in London

GOOD EXAMPLE

LONDON, June 23 (Canadian Press).—The debate on the Locarno Peace Pact staged in the Canadian House of Commons, in connection with Premier Mackenzie King's motion that Parliament must pass on treaties before they are ratified by the Cabinet, aroused much interest here.

The Express declares that a useful purpose would be served if all the parliaments of the Empire, including the British House of Commons, followed Canada's example in the face of obligations involved. England's great task, the Express continues, is to give the lead in maintaining a common policy for the Empire, "which will never be achieved by embroiling ourselves in European intrigues and enmities."

CONCERNING WAR

OTTAWA, June 23 (Canadian Press)—"I now register vigorous dissent from the policy proposed by Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, M.P., leader of the Liberal-Conservative party, in a speech delivered at Hamilton on November 19, 1925, and later repeated at other points, to the effect that in the event of the empire becoming involved in any future war, it would be best not only that parliament should be called, but that the decision of the government, which, of course would have to be given promptly, should be submitted to the judgment of the people at a general election before troops should leave our shores'."

So declared Loftus H. Reid, of the Most Worshipful Grand Black Chapter of British America, in his address yesterday at the concluding session of the 52nd annual convention of that body.

Battle Over Customs Committee Report Opens With Charges By Hon. Mr. Stevens And Reply By Minister of Department

Conservative Member Whose Charges in House Led to Appointment of Committee Introduces Amendment Censuring Not Only Boivin but Entire Cabinet for Failure to Take Action Against Degeneration

MINISTER OF CUSTOMS SAYS BARGE TREMBLAY LIQUOR WAS FIRST OFFERED TO QUEBEC LIQUOR COMMISSION

Was Not Sold Cheaply to Please Political Friend—Claims That He Acted Within His Authority in Deferring Imprisonment of Moses Aziz—Other Members Take Part—Division Tonight.

OTTAWA, June 23 (Canadian Press).—Parliament will see before dawn what is considered the most crucial division of the present sesion. The vote on the Stevens amendment, which censures the Government, may be reached before midnight. It is said that a least three Progressives will vote against the Government, and a fourth is supposed to be inclined to follow suit. Other members of the farmers' party have by no means made up their minds whether they can continue to support the Government on the motion which calls for censure on the ground of mismanagement of the customs department. The vote arises out of the report of the customs probe committee.

OTTAWA, June 23 (Canadian Press).—Battling over the report of the customs probe opened in the House of Commons yesterday. There were again such scenes as were witnessed when the first test of strength between Liberals and Conservatives marked the dramatic opening day of the session. The galleries were jammed, the House was packed, in the corridors were waiting queues.

The issue came over ministerial responsibility for conditions in the customs department revealed in the customs' report. Paul Mercier (Liberal, St. Henri, Montreal), who was chairman of the customs committee, first moved the adoption of the customs' report, which does not make any specific reference to the responsiblity of Hon. G. H. Boivin, the present minister of customs Hon. H. H. Stevens, Conservative of Vancouver Centre, whose charges led to the appointment of the customs committee, then moved an amendment which constituted a motion of censure not only on Mr. Boivin but on the Government also. "The Prime Minister and Government" so runs the amendment, "had knowledge for some considerable time of the rapid degeneration of the department of customs and excise and their failure to take prompt and effective remedial action is wholly indefensible. The conduct of the present minister of the department, Hon. Geo. H. Boivin, in the case of Moses Aziz, is utterly unjustifiable."

Considerable time was taken up with the routine reading of lengthy final reports of the National Railways and fuel supply committees.

When finally the order was reached Paul Mercier, Chairman of the committee investigatng the Customs administration moved concurrence in the report presented last Friday. He said the House would find in the report material upon which the customs service could be reorganized. A proper preventative service would be the best means to gather in the revenues to which the country was entitled. Customs be divided into two parts— one, a means of revenue and the other an instrument of protection. The department was one of the most difficult to administer and one whose responsibility upon its Minister was immense.

Want Fair Treatment.

The evidence had shown that a Minister of Customs was subjected to all sorts of representations and influence, from all parties in the House and from people outside. Before passing final judgement on the facts, members should be fair and recognize that a Minister was a 'public" man, in other words "one who belongs to all." Mr. Mercier went on to say that error was always possible and, if the House would have Ministers turn a deaf ear to representations of the people, then they must "re-educate the public". He asked that the report be considered in a spirit of fairness. The committee had done everything to ascertain the extent and causes of smuggling in Canada.

Hon. H. H. Stevens was received with Conservative cheers when he arose. He said Mr. Mercier's utterance indicated an admission of dereliction of duty for which clemency was sought. Over and above any personal feelings there was a duty to the public that could not be overlooked. The charges he had made last February had been justified abundantly. He complimented R. P. Sparks and the business men associated with him. They had appealed to him (Mr Stevens) for a public inquiry when convined that the Government would do nothing Continuing, he said, the duty he had to discharge was not pleasant but having instigated the periury he proposed "to see it through to the ultimate end."

"Report Deficient."

Irritations in the committee at the start had given place to harmony He spoke highly of Chairman Mercier's industry. He thad presided over every one of the 144 sittings. With the committee's report Mr. Stevens agreed, but it was deficient in avoiding reference to the present Minister. Before he sat down he proposed to remedy that with an amendment. Hon. Jacques Bureau converted his opportunity of service to the state to opportunities for the distribuion of favours to his favorites. High officials of long and honorable service had been debauched and were now going out with a stain on their characters.

Mr. Stevens read from the evidence of R. Sparks to the effect that the evil doing of J. E. Bisaillon was well known to the Premier and his colleagues. If public revenues had been lost, it was due to faulty administration. Auto thieves found in the Customs Department a "safe haven." Their business was thoroughly organized and certain customs officials had connived with them.

Mr. Stevens calculated that losses actually demonstrated and of which recovery was reasonably possible, totalled $1,750,000.

Liquor Smuggling.

The member of Centre Vancouver next turned to liquor smuggling to the United States. Canada had been a "conduit." A treaty had been entered into between Canada and the United States, and it was the duty of the Government to see that its part of the obligation was carried out. Shorn of verbiage, the treaty was designed to suppress liquor smuggling to the States, and officials should be condemned for conniving at its violation. It was a contraband traffic with a friendly nation. Vessels, osetnsibly cleared for Nassau or Mexico, landed liquor cargoes at points where it was smuggled into the States or "bootlegged" back into Canada.

In the committee, evidence came up of four vessels carrying from four to ten thousand cases of liquor. Had duty been paid, from $450,000 to $750,000 would have gone into the public treasury.

Unholy Alliance.

Why should people engaged in the liquor traffic have their word accepted when others did not? "It is high time," he declared, "that this unholy alliance between the Government of Canada and a gang of bootleggers should be dissolved. And I would also say to the old established distilleries that it is time they ceased to sin by proxy and to enrich their coffers by dealing with law violators."

"Did the committee go into this to the source?" asked Mr. Gardiner.

"Frequently," replied Mr. Stevens.

Campaign Funds.

"Was it not shown that one of these old distilleries contributed to the campaign funds?" asked Mr. Woodsworth.

Mr. Stevens admitted that political parties old and new had received campaign funds, but he was not aware of any that had come from any distillery.

Detrimental Practice.

"Your committee is of the opinion that this practice is detrimental to the best interests of the country and prejudicial to the administration of the department.

"And that the committee for such purpose be revived."

Mr. Stevens referred to orders-in-Council releasing unmatured alcohol, and cited the case of the Dominion Distilleries—the "Hushion, George Cooper Aggregation," which in less than one month had sold 82,000 proof gallons of denatured alcohol, which had gone to bootleggers to be disposed of as potable spirits. There was a case where a craft had left Toronto with a load of liquor for Mexico and was back again in six days. He charged that Mr. Boivin was an "intimate associate" with some in his districts who were prominent in smuggling.

Dominion Distilleries.

Bissionette of Rock Island, who had destroyed his books, was one. Was the present Minister to be entrusted with the prosecution of this man or the Dominion Distilleries? Mr. Stevens then proceeded to speak of "multi-millionaires, unscrupulous bootleggers, who engage poor men to do their dirty work." He . . a list of the Dominion Distilleries and subsidiaries.

"Are the practices referred to confined to Rock Island and the Great Lakes?' asked J. S. Woodsworth.

Only the Rim.

Mr. Stevens answered: "This investigation has only touched the rim. The practice is general. It is on the Atlantic, the Pacific and the Great Lakes." Mr. Stevens asked if the present Minister would prosecute V. J. Hushion, who bought the alcohol that came off the barge Tremblay, or Cooper, or George, who had made millions by violating the laws of Canada or a friendly nation? The Dominion Distillers had produced only 600 gallons of their own, and it was in bond, unfit for human consumption, while as much as 82,000 gallons, secured in other places, had been sold in one month last winter for bootlegging in the States and Canada.

The speaker charged that alcohol was sold for from $7 to $10 a gallon without a cent being returned to the public treasury. He asked again if Mr. Boivin could be entrusted to prosecute these people who had defrauded the public treasury.

Tampering with Bonds.

Mr. Stevens then developed something new. Some weeks ago his attention had been called to the tampering with government bonds and

BRITISH WOMEN ASK FOR VOTES

Resent Limitations of Suffrage to Those Over Thirty.

MUCH SUPPORT

LONDON, June 23 (Canadian Press).—British women are about to open a vigorous fight to do away with the present suffrage laws which exclude them from the right to vote until they are 30 years old. Many prominent persons have agreed to join a great mass meeting staged by forty women's societies on July 7 in the interest of equal political rights. Among them are Lord Balfour of Burleigh; Lord Cecil of Chelwood, and Pethick Lawrence, member of the House of Commons. Under the present suffrage laws in England, 5,000,000 women above the age of 21 but below the age of 30 are unable to vote, while qualified men above the age of 21 have the ballot. All the old-time suffrage leaders and thousands of other prominent women resent this discrimination and are helping in an effort to force the Government to place men and women on absolutely the same political footing.

CAILLAUX ASKS GREAT POWERS IN FINANCE POST

Will Virtually Be Dictator According to Reports of Conditions

"THE TWO CONSULS"

Caillaux Refers to Himself and Briand by Napoleonic Title

By A. L. Bradford

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, June 23.—Joseph Caillaux to-day returned to official power reportedly under conditions which may give him authority resembling that of a dictator. The man who was convicted of trafficking with the enemy during the war, and whose first return to office last year was adjudged a failure because he could not fund the French debt to the United States, nor solve the domestic financial problems of the country, to-day accepted the Ministry of Finance in the proposed Briand Cabinet. He refused the post yesterday, but on again conferring with Briand last night, said he would accept, providing he were given abnormal powers.

When Briand demurred, Caillaux said: "Well, suppose you tell President Doumergue that you cannot form a Cabinet, and advise him to call on me." Briand refused, but offered Caillaux the Vice-Premiership with the portfolio of Finance.

Caillaux' state of mind was indicated in a statement to the United Press just before he definitely accepted the portfolio.

"I am entering the Cabinet under conditions. I have always deemed the Minister of Finance must have full powers. I will have no difficulty in sharing them with my friend Briand."

Smiling, he referred to himself and Briand as "the two consuls," words suggestive of the strong government of Napoleon.

PARIS, June 23. —(Canadian Press).— Aristide Briand, succeeded to-day in forming his tenth cabinet. The new ministry is being presented to President Doumergue to-night, Joseph Caillaux, the former premier, has accepted the post of finance minister in the cabinet.

WOMAN IN HOSPITAL IDENTIFIED AS AIMEE SEMPLE McPHERSON' EVANGELIST MISSING FIVE WEEKS

Tells of Being Kidnapped While Bathing and Held for Ransom

MAKES ESCAPE

Makes Way Across Border from Mexico to Douglas, Arizona

DOUGLAS, Arizona, June 23. — (Canadian Press).—Positive identification of the woman in hospital here as Aimee Semple McPherson, Los Angeles evangelist, who was reported drowned there on May 18 last, was made over the telephone by Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, the evangelist's mother, in conversation with William F. McCafferty, editor of the Despatch, this morning.

Identification was established through a long white scar on the second finger of the woman's hand and also by her giving the name of Pet Pigeon. The woman in the hospital here told the name of Pigeon, which was "Jennie," and also said that she was injured on the second finger of her right hand in Durham Township, near Ingersoll, Ont., where Mrs. McPherson was born.

The mother told McCafferty the same thing.

The woman said the scar was the result of being accidentally cut by a sickle years ago. She also gave the name of a cousin, Mrs. Emma Nickerson, now dead, and described the birthmarks on her babies for McCafferty. These statements led the mother to a declaration that the woman was Aimee Semple McPherson beyond a doubt.

The former evangelist, from her cot in the hospital, told a story of abduction from Ocean Park, California, a trip across the border to Mexico, and of how she escaped about noon yesterday and ran until she fell with exhaustion. Finally, sighting a mountain, which has been identified by officers here as the famous "Nigger Head" Mountain, fifteen miles south in Sonora, Mexico, she headed for it.

Mrs. McPherson told her story to Editor McCafferty of the Douglas Despatch this morning. She said that while in swimming she was called by a strange woman to pray for a dying baby, and as she neared the sedan in which the baby was supposed to be lying, she was pushed into the car and a coat was thrown over her head. She noticed the odor of a drug, and soon lapsed into a state of unconsciousness, from which she recovered the following morning. She was then in a small room with very little daylight. The captors then told her she was being held for a half million dollars ransom.

YOUR HEALTH

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

Somewhere I saw a motion picture with the caption

"It is better to build boys than to mend men."

Nothing can be truer than this. By properly building the youth of the country disease would be reduced beyond all measure. The change in the sickness rate would not be observed at once but twenty years from now the general sickness and death rate would be amazingly low, in my judgment.

Much of the energy of present-day doctors is spent in overcoming defects dating back to youth, or in treating the results of faulty habits acquired in childhood. The doctors are spending their time mending men.

I know it isn't financially good for the medical profession to spread wide the knowledge of how to prevent disease. But I am proud of my professional brethren. I never heard one of them complain about the modern methods of educating in health. They find no fault with our teaching the public a manner of living which, if practiced by everybody, will surely reduce the income of every doctor in North America.

The greatest progress in medicine is to be found in the field of youth. Building boys is the most attractive of all human jobs. If they can be taught how to eat and sleep and walk and stand, they will grow into vigorous manhood. They will become men who won't need mending.

We must have doctors and always will need doctors. Until human nature is radically changed there will be plenty of folk who will utterly disregard the needs of their bodies. There will be millions of persons to be mended and millions of dollars to be spent for the mending.

If there were no higher reason for good health than wiping out the cost and economic losses of sickness, it would be worth while to build well in youth. To have health in early life and to give such heed to the body that defects are removed as soon as found, will do away with the need of extensive mending. Building in childhood and youth is the real secret of vigorous middle life, prolonged usefulness, and preservation of vigor into ripe old age.

Years should mean nothing and would mean nothing if proper attention were given to every boy and girl all through the period of growth and development. That is what is meant by building boys instead of mending men.

You can't live to be a hundred by living in a rickety, broken, diseased body. Just as certainly as a neglected building will break down and fall into ruin, so will a neglected body. should be as careful of your body as you are with the house you are building. When attention to the rules of life is your practice from earliest youth there will be need for few repairs.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

A HAPPY LITTLE FERN MOTHER.

Down on the bank, by the little brook, grew a lovely fern. She spread out her pretty green leaves in order to cast a shade over the busy ants and bugs that worked day in and day out in the dirt under her. She was never too busy to wave a greeting to the birds, bees and butterflies. Everyone loved her because she was so pleasant and happy.

One day Missy Ant who lived under her cooling shade spied the little brown things on the underside of the fern's leaves.

"What are they for?" she asked. "I never saw them before."

"Those are just my seeds," answered Mrs. Fern. "You see I don't lay eggs as ants do. Those little brown things on the underside of my leaves are filled with pollen dust. When they burst in the Fall the brown pollen dust will fall on the ground and then maybe they will grow into lovely fern children next Spring."

The warm Summer days soon passed and the little fern lady began to droop. Even though she was merry with everyone who stopped, she looked sad to Missy Ant so one day the ant asked her the reason.

"I'm thinking about my children," said the fern. "I don't know how I can keep them warm all through the long Winter months. If the snows touch them they will chill and die.'

"Well, I'll fix that," laughed Missy Ant. "You've been good and kind to me. I'll ask Mrs. Maple tree to lend us some of her leaves for a covering," and away she went to ask their neighbor, Mrs. Maple Tree.

"What Are They For?"

"You are welcome to all of them," declared Mrs. Maple Tree. Then she called East Wind who clipped the pretty red and yellow leaves from Mrs. Maple Tree and spread them over the ground where the soft brown pollen had fallen.

"Now," cried East Wind, "I'll send some rain, so it will beat them down snugly." Then East Wind brought a shower and the little brown pollen was covered with wet leaves.

Later on North Wind sent down a lovely blanket of pure white snow. He spread it carefully over the maple leaves and the little brown pollen babies slept soundly in their warm bed all Winter-long.

When the bright Spring days came once more, little prongs of pale green, shot up over Missy Ant's hill. So the children of Mrs. Fern made a cooling shade for the little bugs and ants that worked on the ground around her.

The Fern Children were so happy and contented that the Spring Beauties and the Violet children came to live in their cooling shade. Sometimes old Mrs. Hoppy Toad stops for a chat and she always ends up by telling the Fern Family that everyone helped their mother fern, because she was such a happy little fern.

"Always be contented and happy and you'll have many friends," she croaked.

WELL BABIES CLINIC EXECUTIVE MEETS

Reports Given by Officers Showing Good Work Done

The biennial meeting of the Board of Management of the Well Babies' Clinic was held recently in the board room of the Chamber of Commerce, the president, Mrs. A. Mowat, in the chair. Various reports were given by the officers, the treasurer, Mrs. F. C. Neal, showing a small balance on hand; the nurse, Miss Mamie Foote, giving her report, which follows in detail, and the supervisor, Dr. Jessie Birnie, outlining portions of the work done by the Clinic.

Donations were acknowledged from Mrs. Walsh and the Misses Dickson, the Female Voice Choir, the Queen Alexandra Home and School Association, the Major Bennett Chapter I.O.D.E., the 57th Regimental Chapter I.O.D.E., Mrs. W. E. Conway, and Mrs. G. Helson.

The supervisor, Dr. Birnie, spoke of the gratifying attendance at the Clinic meetings. In the first six months of the year, the total in attendance has been 435, and there has been a fifty per cent. increase in the number of new babies brought in. Lectures were given during the season by Drs. Morgan, Scott and O'Reilley, and Dr. MacPherson conducted a Question Drawer.

A number of interesting cases are brought to the Clinic for advice and examination. Many of the infants are suffering from malnutrition, and appear to be greatly benefitted by the treatment received there. Dr. Birnie said that the general public was not aware of the major importance of feeding small infants. Proper food during the first two years of life has much to do with determining the condition of health during the remainder of life, and the formation of teeth, bones and muscles. Improper feeding results in deformities and such things as bow legs and pigeon breasts.

Much of the work at the Clinic has to do with advice as to diet and the changing of improper feeding habits. The reputation of the Clinic has evidently extended afar, as is evidenced by the bringing in of babies from the district and one mother here from Fort William, absolutely at a loss as to how to regulate her child's diet, was greatly benefitted by advice received at the Clinic.

Dr. Birnie said that she had started a course of lectures to expectant mothers, advising them as to the proper methods to pursue to gain health for themselves and their children. These lectures were aimed to ameliorate conditions which caused rather a high rate of infant mortality in the city, in connection with stillborn infants and deaths of children after a few hours or days of life.

It was reported that a gratifying decrease was manifested in the number of preventable deaths of infants under one year of age. Dr. Birnie said that such cases as those reported from Dummer recently would be impossible of duplication in the city, owing to the good work done by the Well Babies' Clinic in this regard, and if more funds were available, still further expansion might be undertaken.

A resolution was then passed that each member of the board of management invite ladies to accompany them to the weekly meetings, to take notice of the good work which is being done by the Well Babies' Clinic.

The following is the report of the Clinic nurse:

Madam President and Ladies—One again it gives me pleasure to submit the semi-annual report of the Well Babies' Clinic. We have had an attendance during the past six months of 435, with a doubled increase in the number of new babies over the preceding six months, which means an invaluable preventative service for the care and feeding of children. Number of calls made were 193. The follow-up work was largely of diet. The preparation and teaching of the different foods as prescribed by the doctors. This covers a great deal of our work and with the follow-up work we have had excellent results. One case I mention—a much emaciated, poorly nourished child was brought into the clinic weighting only seven pounds at the age of seven months—the weight of a new-born infant. It was put on a suitable diet and today is healthy, rosy and a normal weight. We are proud of this babe and the mother who had the perseverance and patience so necessary to get the good results. This is only one case of many. There have been a number of calls for charitable purposes which we were able and pleased to relieve owing to some small donations, given us for the purpose, by a few charitable friends—calls for layettes were much greater this year, owing to straitened circumstances in some homes and we are very grateful to the Thursday Club, who keep us so well supplied

I am happy to say that on every occasion I have been given a cheerful welcome to the homes I have visited, and the keen interest taken by the young mother is very encouragiing Our work, though going on in a modest way, is surely and certainly extending far from home, as we have had a number from outside points come in for advice A series of short talks on pre-natal work is being given every Tuesday by Dr. Birnie, which we hope to prove very valuable and aid in the reduction of infant death rate.

In conclusion, I wish to thank all who have given help in whatsoever way, in our work, and to call attention to our Tuesday clinics, held in the GW.V.A. from 3 to 5 o'clock, where the foundation work, carried on there, means Health to these future citizens.—Mamie Foote, Well Baby Clinic Nurse.

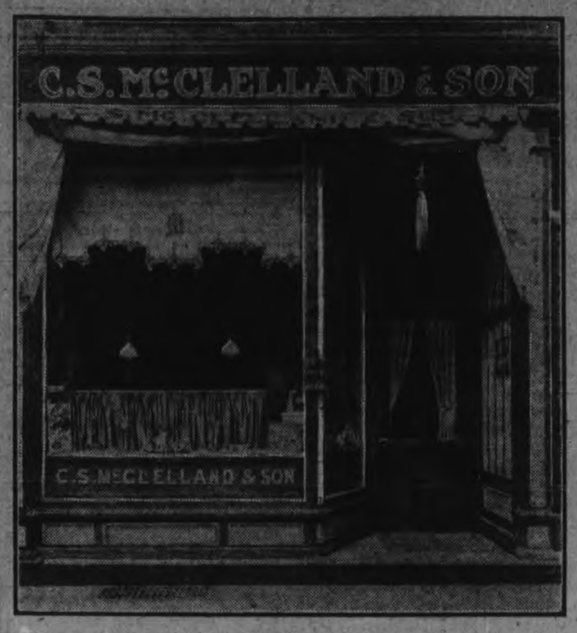
McClelland and Sons in Business 62 Years

The early location of the business of John McClelland, corner George and Hunter streets, 1869.

The "McClelland Corner," corner of George and Hunter streets.



The present store of C. S. McClland & Son, "The Little Store Around the Corner", 391 Water street.

Charles S. McClelland of C. S. McClelland & Son.

Gerald D. McClelland of C. S. McClelland & Son.

1864-1926.

It may seem a long time to look back, but 62 years ago John McClelland then a young man of 24 years of age, and four hundred dollars, came to Peterborough from the old land with his wife and one child, to seek some settled home in a new country. Although the town was not large it promised well, and Mr. McClelland was induced to open a business.

The late James Stevenson who in after years became mayor of the town and also member of the Federal House of Parliament at Ottawa was then in business on George street, where the present store of the Grafton Company is now situated. He was he first man to extend his best wishes to Mr. McClelland and urged him to open a business in part of his store. He then set up his bench as a watchmaker in the south window of the Stevenson store, and it was here that he made the acquaintance of many of the older men who were the life and backing of the town, toward enlarged schools and other civic enterprise.

In the fall of 1871 Mr. McClelland moved his business to the corner of George and Hunter streets. This corner known as the "McKellar and Cameron" corner was burned in the fall of 1869 and the new corner was for many years known as the "McClelland" corner. As years went on the business grew and in the year 1879, the son Charles McClelland, was taken into the store as a young man to learn the business, and for eighteen years worked with his father. Upon the retirement of John McClelland in 1897, Charles McClelland moved the business to 391 Water street which is the present location of "The Little Store Around the Corner."

The past twenty-nine years has seen many changes and stirring experiences. The trail of '98 was blazed and remains but an old story of "Gold Adventure"; the "South African War"; the sad passing of the late Queen Victoria, and the crowning of two English Kings came and vanished. The year 1914 found the elder son of the second family of McClellands in service in France, where for four years he carried on while in 1919 the younger son, Gerald, took up the work of his father and is carrying on the business as C. S. McClelland & Son", thus making the third generation and possibly the only business in Peterborough to be carried on continuously by one family with the exception of "Wm. Lech and Sons."

KEEPING OUT RUTS IS ADDRESS SUBJECT

Mrs. Towiss Addresses Warsaw Women's Institute at June Meeting.

WARSAW, June 23.—The June meeting of the Women's Institute was held on Tuesday afternoon. An appeal for clothing for a family in destitute circumstances was read, but it was not stated whether these four children, aged from four to twelve, were boys or girls it was decided to find out before doing anything.

The special feature of the gathering was the address by Mrs. Towriss of Athens, who spoke on "Keeping out of Ruts." Mrs. Towriss began by reminding those present that it was thirty-one years since the first Institute was formed at Stoney Creek. Now the movement covers many of the European countries, as well as Canada. England was not ashamed to copy what she saw good in the little Province of Ontario.

The small branches are just as necessary as the larger one. In most beautiful pieces of finished work there are small pieces as well as large, she said. If we work alone we want our own way. Working all together tends to bring out the harmony in our lives and in the communities. In Institute work all creeds, all nationalities are joined."

The speaker enunciated several ruts into which people may fall and backed them with pointed and humorous illustrations. She spoke for about eight minutes and, but for the fact that there were evening chores to be done, the women could have listened longer. The points, with some of the comments were:

1. Kitchen ruts. One should not allow herself to be too closely tied to her kitchen. There is no need for too much fancy cooking. No man would do the same thing over and over. There is not much more dust in two days, than in one. There is no need for too much fussing. The Master did not reprove Martha for preparing a meal that was necessary, but for fussing too much over it. Have conveniences in the kitchen and have it cheerful.

Rut 2. Excuses. Make the best of what you have. If you have not been able to do your dusting do not draw attention by excusing it. Most people would not notice it, and those who are looking for it might find it anyway. Do something if you are asked. Even if you fail it will help you, and others may be greatly helped by your failure, as they will realize that others are weak too. No one was always able to do well. It is only by trying that one can develop. Every person has some talent.

Rut 3. Egotism. Sometimes people get an idea into their heads that if a thing is not as they think it should be it is wrong. Sometimes mother thinks her daughters cannot do a baking or some other house work so well as she. Perhaps they cannot, but the mother who does everything, is not fair to herself for she wears herself out, and she is not fair to her daughters for she gives them no chance to learn or to develop. If the mother be taken ill things are in a bad state.

Rut 4. Pessimism. The pessimist sheds gloom, dispels all cheer. A woman should be a dispenser of good cheer, otherwise all is dark. A gloomy woman is apt to cause her husband to be bad-tempered, and to chase husband and children away from the home.

Rut 5. Obstinacy. It is not wise to be determined to hold an idea, when one has found it wrong. It is not humiliating to change one's mind when one found it should be done. Conditions often alter cases.

Rut 6. Unkindness. Women are sometimes more cruel, especially to other women, than are men. It is not kind to repeat a rumour. Anything we hear should be sifted three times, first to find if it be true, second to know if the repetition be necessary, and third to know if it be kind. If it goes through all three it is safe. It is very cruel to frighten children. Untold injury may be done.

Rut 7. Temper. Perhaps we have allowed ourselves to become too tired and nervous; bad temper results, so we should avoid the condition. Too much fancy work tires, just as much as too much hard work. A bit of out doors and fresh air will do wonders towards keeping our tempers sweet. A little more trust in the Higher Power helps so much.

Rut 8. Old age. Do not allow yourself to feel old, to say you cannot do things because you are getting old. Wrinkles and grey hair do not make one old. Old age is beautiful, but keep the heart young. The youthful heart with the experience of years is such a wonderful help to ourselves and others.

Rut 9. Flattery. Some people delight to say wise things to us, and so soon as our back is turned, tear us to pieces; the failing soon becomes known and no one believes them. Flattery is not praise; just praise is good. It is right to tell a person how you appreciate what he has done, or a mihister for his good sermon, but it is not right to say one thing and mean another. Life is much easier for a little appreciation.

Rut 10. Reading. All right and good to read, but let us see that our reading is good, not just fiction, or the same thing over and over. Read what the boys and girls read. It might be a revelation. Read good books, papers, and magazines, and above all read the "Bible".

Rut 11. Uppishness. Women are sometimes a little snobbish. The human body, as such is not worth $2.00. A dummy could be dressed up in the grandest clothes and look just as well. It is the character that counts, be the person of highest or lowest estate. A person may be poor but royal. Of what has one to be proud, who has inherited wealth? He has done nothing for it. Dishonestly gotten wealth is a disgrace. If you have earned it, you are accountable for it. We are all stewards of what we have and we should all be one.

Rut 12. Theorizing. Did you ever see or hear any one theorize on how some one else should do some certain thing? It may be easy to stay at home and do so, but not so easy to get out and do it.

Rut 13. Secularity. Do not fall into the rut of secularity. "Keeping up with the Jones'es" has ruined many a one. If you have the joys of life you have the essentials. Above all keep in touch with the Infinite.

Keeping out of ruts is different from getting out of ruts, and much easier.

No lecturer has ever been more inspiring than Mrs. Touriss.

In the fall of 1871 Mr. McClelland moved his business to the corner of George and Hunter streets. This corner known as the "McKellar and Cameron" corner was burned in the fall of 1869 and the new corner was for many years known as the "McClelland" corner. As years went on the business grew and in the year 1879, the son Charles McClelland, was taken into the store as a young man to learn the business, and for eighteen years worked with his father. Upon the retirement of John McClelland in 1897, Charles McClelland moved the business to 391 Water street which is the present location of "The Little Store Around the Corner."

The past twenty-nine years has seen many changes and stirring experiences. The trail of '98 was blazed and remains but an old story of "Gold Adventure"; the "South African War"; the sad passing of the late Queen Victoria, and the crowning of two English Kings came and vanished. The year 1914 found the elder son of the second family of McClellands in service in France, where for four years he carried on while in 1919 the younger son, Gerald, took up the work of his father and is carrying on the business as C. S. McClelland & Son", thus making the third generation and possibly the only business in Peterborough to be carried on continuously by one family with the exception of "Wm. Lech and Sons."

KEEPING OUT RUTS IS ADDRESS SUBJECT

Mrs. Towiss Addresses Warsaw Women's Institute at June Meeting.

WARSAW, June 23.—The June meeting of the Women's Institute was held on Tuesday afternoon. An appeal for clothing for a family in destitute circumstances was read, but it was not stated whether these four children, aged from four to twelve, were boys or girls it was decided to find out before doing anything.

The special feature of the gathering was the address by Mrs. Towriss of Athens, who spoke on "Keeping out of Ruts." Mrs. Towriss began by reminding those present that it was thirty-one years since the first Institute was formed at Stoney Creek. Now the movement covers many of the European countries, as well as Canada. England was not ashamed to copy what she saw good in the little Province of Ontario.

The small branches are just as necessary as the larger one. In most beautiful pieces of finished work there are small pieces as well as large, she said. If we work alone we want our own way. Working all together tends to bring out the harmony in our lives and in the communities. In Institute work all creeds, all nationalities are joined."

The speaker enunciated several ruts into which people may fall and backed them with pointed and humorous illustrations. She spoke for about eight minutes and, but for the fact that there were evening chores to be done, the women could have listened longer. The points, with some of the comments were:

1. Kitchen ruts. One should not allow herself to be too closely tied to her kitchen. There is no need for too much fancy cooking. No man would do the same thing over and over. There is not much more dust in two days, than in one. There is no need for too much fussing. The Master did not reprove Martha for preparing a meal that was necessary, but for fussing too much over it. Have conveniences in the kitchen and have it cheerful.

Rut 2. Excuses. Make the best of what you have. If you have not been able to do your dusting do not draw attention by excusing it. Most people would not notice it, and those who are looking for it might find it anyway. Do something if you are asked. Even if you fail it will help you, and others may be greatly helped by your failure; as they will realize that others are weak too. No one was always able to do well. It is only by trying that one can develop. Every person has some talent.

Rut 3. Egotism. Sometimes people get an idea into their heads that if a thing is not as they think it should be it is wrong. Sometimes mother thinks her daughters cannot do a baking or some other house work so well as she. Perhaps they cannot, but the mother who does everything, is not fair to herself for she wears herself out, and she is not fair to her daughters for she gives them no chance to learn or to develop. If the mother be taken ill things are in a bad state.

Rut 4. Pessimism. The pessimist sheds gloom, dispels all cheer. A woman should be a dispenser of good cheer, otherwise all is dark. A gloomy woman is apt to cause her husband to be bad-tempered, and to chase husband and children away from the home.

Rut 5. Obstinacy. It is not wise to be determined to hold an idea, when one has found it wrong. It is not humiliating to change one's mind when one found it should be done. Conditions often alter cases.

Rut 6. Unkindness. Women are sometimes more cruel, especially to other women, than are men. It is not kind to repeat a rumour. Anything we hear should be sifted three times, first to find if it be true, second to know if the repetition be necessary, and third to know if it be kind. If it goes through all three it is safe. It is very cruel to frighten children. Untold injury may be done.

Rut 7. Temper. Perhaps we have allowed ourselves to become too tired and nervous; bad temper results, so we should avoid the condition. Too much fancy work tires, just as much as too much hard work. A bit of out doors and fresh air will do wonders towards keeping our tempers sweet. A little more trust in the Higher Power helps so much.

Rut 8. Old age. Do not allow yourself to feel old, to say you cannot do things because you are getting old. Wrinkles and grey hair do not make one old. Old age is beautiful, but keep the heart young. The youthful heart with the experience of years is such a wonderful help to ourselves and others.

Rut 9. Flattery. Some people delight to say wise things to us, and so soon as our back is turned, tear us to pieces; the failing soon becomes known and no one believes them. Flattery is not praise; just praise is good. It is right to tell a person how you appreciate what he has done, or a minister for his good sermon, but it is not right to say one thing and mean another. Life is much easier for a little appreciation.

Rut 10. Reading. All right and good to read, but let us see that our reading is good, not just fiction, or the same thing over and over. Read what the boys and girls read. It might be a revelation. Read good books, papers, and magazines, and above all read the "Bible".

Rut 11. Uppishness. Women are sometimes a little snobbish. The human body, as such is not worth $2.00. A dummy could be dressed up in the grandest clothes and look just as well. It is the character that counts, be the person of highest or lowest estate. A person may be poor but royal. Of what has one to be proud, who has inherited wealth? He has done nothing for it. Dishonestly gotten wealth is a disgrace. If you have earned it, you are accountable for it. We are all stewards of what we have and we should all be one.

Rut 12. Theorizing. Did you ever see or hear any one theorize on how some one else should do some certain thing? It may be easy to stay at home and do so, but not so easy to get out and do it.

Rut 13. Secularity. Do not fall into the rut of secularity. "Keeping up with the Jones'es" has ruined many a one. If you have the joys of life you have the essentials. Above all keep in touch with the Infinite.

Keeping out of ruts is different from getting out of ruts, and much easier.

No lecturer has ever been more inspiring than Mrs. Touriss.

Keeghan Mauradian gave three mouth-organ selection: The Armenian National Anthem, an Armenian March, and our own Home, Sweet Home.

Sandwiches, cake and lemonade were served and a few minutes spent socially.

On account of the heavy rain on Monday evening the United church congregational meeting was postponed.

Mr. Herrington came home on Tuesday afternoon and brought her niece, Mrs. Carman Knatt and little daughter Muriel, from Merrickville with her.

By perseverance the mouse ate the cable in two.

ABOUT SUMMER HOLIDAYS.

Every year at this time Dr. Hastings, Medical Health Officer of Toronto, issues a bulletin full of capital advice to people about to go on their summer vacation.

There is need of just such a warning.

A summer holiday, if wisely planned and carried out, should earn rich dividends in better health and renewed strength and vigour.

It should re-charge the human batteries, as it were, and send the holiday-maker home fit and well for the fifty weeks of work that lie ahead.

The trouble is that many people misuse their vacation time.

They go on a motor trip, for example, and then spoil the whole effect by seeing how many miles a day they can cover, eventually reaching home in a condition worse than when they left.

Or they go to a lake resort, spend half of every night dancing, and come back worn out, instead of built up.

Dr. Hastings warns against these things and many other holiday indiscretions, and his advice could be profitably followed by Canadians generally, not excepting, of course, many Peterboro people who have been making the mistake of throwing away the golden vacation hours.

MISUSING FLAGS.

A new angle in regard to flag etiquette is furnished by Col. R. F. Boyce, the United States Consul at Hamilton, who has issued a protest against the habit of restaurant keepers and others of conspicuously displaying the Stars and Stripes for mercenary purposes.

This practice is not unknown in Peterboro—in fact, instances of it are to be found in many parts of Ontario—and the protest of the United States Consul is one with which thinking Canadians will have every sympathy.

We on this side are resentful of the flaunting of the American flag on visiting motor cars; it is equally as serious an offence from the United States viewpoint to have the Stars and Stripes used for advertising purposes.

As Canadians we should object strenuously to the use of the Union Jack as an advertising device, and as courteous, hospitable people we should be equally zealous in seeing that the national flag of another country is not misused in this objectionable manner.

To use the Stars and Stripes merely to lure American dollars is an insult to our United States visitors, and we should pay heed to the complaint voiced by Col. Boyce.

A NEW ERA FOR THE EAST.

Mayor Holloway has been honoured in being elected as the first President of the Eastern Ontario Chamber of Commerce, which came into existence at Belleville yesterday, and the selection of Peterboro's chief magistrate to head the organization during the first year is a tribute likewise to this city's standing and prestige among Eastern Ontario centres.

A useful and fruitful career lies before the new alliance of Chambers of Commerce in this part of Ontario, if the experience of Western Ontario can be taken as a guide.

Co-operative efforts on the part of the whole district acting as one should do much to advance the interests of the people of Eastern Ontario and to solve problems that would effectually defeat the lone efforts of any one community.

The extension of the Provincial highway from Foxboro to Peterboro, one of the matters discussed yesterday, is, for example, much more likely to receive sympathetic consideration from the Provincial Government when backed by an organization representing the whole district from Oshawa to Ottawa, than if the request for this work came merely from Peterbofo.

In all such matters the newly formed Eastern Ontario Chamber of Commerce should prove itself of invaluable assistance to this end of the Province, and yesterday's gathering at Belleville may well be hailed as the dawn of a new era.

GLARING LIGHTS.

The menace of glaring headlights, like the poor, seems to be always with us. Within the last few weeks, a tragedy and a near-fatality and dozens of minor accidents have been attributed to blinding headlights, and if there is legislation on the statute books it isn't working at the present time. On the form that applicants for motor licenses are called upon to fill out, the question of the legal lighting of the vehicle for which a permit is desired is raised. The responses of motorists to this question, on file in the Department of the Minister of Highways, show that there is not a vehicle licensed in Ontario that has glaring headlights. And yet, night after night, toll of life and limb and property continues to be taken. Local authorities declare that tourists from the United States are the worst offenders. We invite our American cousins to visit us and we must not persecute them for petty infractions of our bylaws, with which they cannot be expected to be familiar, but this flaunting of blinding lights is not a trivial offense and the great majority of our visitors doubtless would gladly co-operate if requested to make use of their dimmers when nearing approaching traffic. The tourists, however, are not the only offenders. Unless a motorist has subjected his lights to a focussing test, it is impossible for him to know whether or not his headlights are offensive to others, and not one motorist in a hundred takes the trouble to have this test made. On Friday night, a small car, the driver of which was blinded by oncoming lights, crashed into the guard rail of the old bridge near the Beach road crossing and it was more by good luck than good management that tragedy was not the outcome. There is no more important campaign awaiting the attention of the motor vehicles branch of the police service than the war against illegal lenses and the time to make the start is now—tonight!—Hamilton Spectator.

THE MOTORISTS' RESPONSIBILITY.

Like the Department of Public Highways of the Province of Ontario, the corresponding department in the sister Province of Quebec issues periodical bulletins for circulation amongst motorists regarding the works under its control. But in these bulletins it does not confine itself merely to a recital of highway conditions, telling where construction or oiling is taking place or is about to take place, and furnishing similar information respecting the physical condition of the roads. It makes the highway bulletin a vehicle for the dissemination of other data with relationship to travel by motor and in this way it adds to the service which it is rendering.

The Minister of Roads of the Province of Quebec, Hon. J. L. Perron, recently declared that if motor accidents continued to take place they were not due to any laxity on the part of the Government which had done all that it could to prevent their occurrence. It is this thought which is carried into the most recent issue of the bulletin, in which there appears a serious appeal addressed to motorists in the interests of public safety. It is entitled "Don't Trifle with Human Life," and it is prefaced with this reference to the situation:

"Motor accidents have already occurred. The black list already contains many victims and it is lengthening out every day. If motorists do nothing to prevent accidents, the list of dead and injured will no doubt be longer this year than in 1924 and 1925. Road accidents occur with a regularity in defiance of all warnings and preventive measures. Security of traffic is assuredly one of the most serious problems of the hour. Legislation alone cannot solve it. The co-operation of the travelling public is indispensable.

"In 1924, for the United States and Canada, the statistics of motor accidents were as follows: 19,000 killed and 450,000 injured. In 1925, the progression was about 25 per cent. for the former and 33 per cent. for the latter, that is, 23,000 killed and 600,000 injured. True, Canada enters only for a small proportion in the above figures, but considering its population and the number of its motor vehicles, the situation is alarming. As regards the Province of Quebec in particular, not a day passes but the papers report one or more accidents. Throughout North America, the population of a whole city is wiped out every year. Will 1926 reveal an increase prportionate to that of 1925 over 1924? Will the black list contain 30,000 dead and 800,000 injured a few months hence?"

The Minister of Roads then proceeds to point out that the responsibility rests with the motorists themselves:

"The lives of the public are in the hands of motorists. The security of travellers is the main pre-occupation of road organizations. Now, as a rule, it is the most interested party—motorists themselves—that shows most indifference in this matter. The Quebec Roads Department cannot be blamed for not doing its utmost to safeguard the travelling public. It has installed a complete system of danger signs; it is eliminating dangerous spots as rapidly as possible, and it endeavors to enforce speed laws. Motorists must do their share which is very easy. It is for them to reduce the number of accidents.

"The above-mentioned progressive increase in accidents must not be looked upon as a necessary evil to be accepted without protest. It is admitted that nine-tenths of the accidents are due to [illegible]. Therefore, suppress the cause: conform to speed limits proscribed in towns and villages, don't exceed 30 miles an hour in open country, slow down to eight miles an hour at curves, steep grades, road intersections, bridges, or when approaching a railway crossing. All this is not particularly difficult to do. Yet it is the first and principal means of avoiding accidents.

"These words cannot be too often repeated. Road regulations merely embody the most elementary rules of prudence. The law ordering motorists to slow down at curves and intersections is not intended to annoy them: speeding is dangerous at such places. The law ordering motorists to slow down at railway crossings was not enacted for the purpose of levying fines, but to avoid collisions between autos and locomotives. The law is the safeguard of the public. Why consider it a nuisance instead of a help? If every motorist is prudent and conforms with traffic regulations, progressively increasing accidents will soon be a thing of the past."—Brockville Recorder and Times.

FATHER'S DAY.

Editor, The Examiner,

Dear Sir.—Three years ago Father's Day was born, and I have noticed on each anniversary we say, "Give father a tie," I wonder is there nothing else we could give father, say a pair of gloves or a pipe, or even a pair of socks: surely we are more original and could think of something different each year. We never make a practice of giving mother the same thing every year. No doubt father appreciates a tie, but for goodness sake, let us change it once in a while.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I remain,
Yours, for originality.

THE MODERN GIRL.

To the Editor of The Examiner

Dear Sir.—I was glad to see "one of the boys" letter in The Examiner on Thursday evening, yet sorry to realize the disappointment which "one of the boys" felt as he viewed the modern girl.

I feel that way myself often, but then, I'm a woman, and one of the old school, that I find it hard to adjust myself to present sights of bobbed hair, bare legs and arms and no underclothes. Perhaps, it is healthy except in extreme cold weather—but I often wonder—"is it moral:" do the girls and women respect themselves and do they receive the respect of men. I think in many instances they do not, and if they do not, neither do they receive their love, for true love is founded on respect.

Woman is, or should be, the finer part of man, and should supply to him that true beauty that his better nature calls for, I believe there are some men who honestly deplore the sight of women trying to excite the base in man, and who would like to see exhibited once more the true maidenly blush, the tender heart, the intelligent mind in place of mere flesh parade, which can never satisfy the soul of men who may still have left some old-fashioned refinement.

In conclusion, may I quote some lines I read in a little book by Ruskin, and he remarked—"I would they were learned by all youthful ladies of England."—

Ah, wasteful woman—she who may
On her own self set her own price,
Knowing he cannot choose but pay.
How has she cheapened Paradise?
How given for nought her priceless gift,
How spoiled the bread and spilled the wine,
Which spent with due respective thrift,
Had made brutes men, and men divine!

Thanking you, dear sir
I am, yours very truly,
A MOTHER.

BLACK AND WHITE.

To the Editor of The Examiner,

Sir.—The Bible before the days of the modernists, when it was written with a capital "B," says somewhere that the waiting assailant just wants his enemy to write a book. That's all he wants. He wants him to commit himself in black and white, so that he can't lie out of it and then—.

So it is in the case of all things not founded on the Truth. When once they cease to be talked about and are put into printed form, then down they come with a crash. Senator Borah is the successor of Bryan. He is the new and greater head of the Prohibitionist movement in the U.S.A. He is not only that. He is the dean of the American Senate. He didn't write a book but he made a speech. He was so boosted by the prohibitionists of the U.S. that he went mad with insolence and water, and made a great speech to the nation, in New York. He spoke passionately in favor of Prohibition. The newspapers gave him the full benefit of its columns. They encouraged him to speak and he certainly did. He said in that same speech that it was "a mistake at the time to free the slaves, slaves ought not to be freed until their masters thought they were fit for it." That man is a true prohibitionist, but he has, thank God, killed Prohibition. They gave him the rope and fate or God hanged him, whichever you like. The excruciating egotism and, of course, stupidity of these people has now shown itself and even the devil must laugh with a sneer at his own failure to rivet bonds upon "the free moral nature" of man.

The slaves should not have been freed! Of course not. Nobody should except the masters! Selah!

Yours, etc.,
Dear! Oh, Dear!

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, June 23 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in grain in the Montreal market yesterday was again quiet owing to the fact that cables were weaker and the prices bid for all lines were generally 3d per quarter lower, with the result that only sales of odd lots of wheat and oats were made for nearby shipment. There was some demand for cash grain, and sales of No. 2 Northern wheat were made at 12 1-2 cents per bushel over the Winnipeg July option, c.i.f. Montreal.

There was no important change in the local flour market, prices for spring wheat grades being about steady. The demand for winter wheat flour showed a slight improvement.

The undertone to the potato market was steady with a continued demand from the United States. A fairly active business trade in standard grades of rolled oats continues quiet at $3.10 per bag of 90 lbs., delivered to the trade.

There were no developments in the baled hay market, but the undertone was very firm at the recent advance in prices owing to the continued small supplies available and the fact that the prospects for the coming crop are none too encouraging on account of the unfavorable weather prevailing.

The trade in car lots of eggs was reported quiet, with offerings of extras from Ontario shippers at 32c, firsts at 30, and seconds at 24c per dozen, with buyers bidding 1c per dozen less, f.o.b. shiping points, and sales of Western seconds were made on spot at 28 1-2c per dozen. The condition of the jobbing market was unchanged, prices being steady with a fair volume of business passing in extras at 38c, firsts at 34c and seconds at 32c per dozen. Receipts, 2,589 cases against 5,240 for the same day last week and 3,238 for the corresponding day a year ago.

The undetone to the potato market continues easy with prospects of lower prices in the near future.

There was no change in beans with choice white hand-picked (car lots) quoted at $2.15 per bushel and smaller quantities at $2.25 to $2.35 per bushel.

Butter receipts 2,686 packages. There was a slight improvement in the demand and a moderate amount of business was done.

Cheese receipts 20,374 boxes. Prices showed no further change with an improved demand.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 22.—(Canadian Press).—All grains were limp on the Chicago Board of Trade today. Wheat held within a range of 1 1-8c a bushel, with prices averaging lower on better weather in the southeast and a forecast for generally fair and somewhat warmer conditions, which will permit cutting and threshing to proceed rapidly. Wheat closed at the same as yesterday to 1-4c lower; corn was 1-8 to 1-2c down; oats unchanged to 1-4c off and provisions 2 1-2 to 25c higher.

The bulk of wheat trading was of a local character and the market easily influenced. Toward the close the market gave evidence of being oversold with shorts overdoing the selling to some extent. Commission houses took some of the slack out of the pits on the breaks. World's stocks of wheat were said to have decreased 5,740,000 bushels.

Corn rallied slightly with wheat after touching new lows for July and September deliveries, as a result of scattered selling which found support lacking.

Oats were lower with corn, some stop-loss orders being uncovered on the decline. All deliveries sold within a fraction of the lowest figures on the crop.

EGG MARKETS

OTTAWA, June 23 (Canadian Press).—An easy tendency continues on the Montreal and Toronto markets. A further rise at Vancouver is the only price change reported yesterday.

OUTDOOR SERVICES ATTRACTED BIGGEST ARMIES OF WORSHIPPERS RECORDED IN WORLDS HISTORY

More Than 170,000 Women Assembled Yesterday in Soldiers' Field

MEN'S GATHERING

Candle Light Benediction Held at Night—Addressed by Cardinal O'Donnell

CHICAGO, June 23 (Canadian Press). — Two huge services in Chicago's front yard brought together yesterday in the third day's ceremonies of the Eucharistic Congress more worshippers by far than ever before assembled in one day within a single enclosure.

In the morning, more than 170,000 women were in the soldiers' field for solemn pontifical mass celebrated by the Most Rev. Joseph Palica, Archbishop and Vice Gerent of Rome, and at night the stands were filled for a second time—with men only—for candle light benediction services. At each service tens of thousands unable to gain admission to the half-mile field were thronged in the lake front park to hear the ceremonies over loud speakers and to witness the mile-long ecclesiastical procession to and from the great outdoor sanctuary.

Never before in history have so many women gathered in one spot as crowded the stadium area for the morning mass.

Great Honor to Womanhood.

Archbishop Hanna of San Francisco, in his sermon, described the assemblage as the greatest honor to womanhood in history. Thousands of women were in their places at 6 o'clock yesterday morning, and the last of the multitude did not pass out of the field until after two o'clock in the afternoon. A women's choir of 15,000, including 5,000 nuns, sang the propers of the mass.

Besides the sermon of Archbishop Hanna, the women heard addresses by Cardinals Piffl, of Austria, and Charost, of France, in German and French, respectively; and by Justice Pierce Butler of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Cardinal O'Connell, of Boston, as presiding prelate of the session, prepared an address which, though not delivered at the field, was released for publication.

Men's Meeting.

The men's meeting last night, under the direction of the Society of the Holy Name, was addressed by Cardinal O'Donnel of Ireland. Cardinal Mundelein was the pontificating prelate.

Three messages from the Vatican were read at congress gatherings yesterday. Two reached the morning services, and a third was presented by Cardinal Mundelein at an afternoon meeting of the English speaking section. In each, Pope Pius XI., through Cardinal Gasparri, the papal secretary of state, expressed joyous gratification at the success of the congress.

ONE MILLION MILES OF SAUSAGES IMPORTED INTO UNITED STATES FROM 70 DIFFERENT COUNTRIES

Former U. S. Secretary of Commerce Talks About "Dependent America"

NEEDS OUTSIDE WORLD

Advises Efforts to Discover Tin Mines in Canada

QUEBEC, Que., June 23 —(Canadian Press). — How the United States, notwithstanding its wealth, power and population was yet far from being a self-supporting nation was detailed before the New York State Bankers' Association convention held here to-day by Hon. Wm. C. Redfield, former Secretary of Commerce in the Wilson administration who addressed the delegates on "Dependent America."

Mr. Redfield first instanced wool, of which he said, the United States did not produce nearly sufficient for its own needs. The wool produced in the United States, he declared was almost entirely of a medium quality. For both the cheaper and finer grades it was necessary to import from Australia or the Argentine.

The opinion was generally held he said, that sausages at least was purely a domestic product, but, one million miles of small sausage casings were imported into the United States yearly from seventy different countries.

It was curious, the speaker pointed out that the United States did produce large ones. Thus it was practically impossible to purchase a hundred per cent. American small sausage in the States while in Germany larger species of sausage were all manufactured with American casing.

Tinware from Malay.

For Tinware, Mr. Redfield said Americans were grateful to the Malay peninsula while a great part of their aluminum came from British Guiana. In this connection he recalled that during the war he had received a request from Sir George Foster on behalf of the Canadian Government for one hundred and fifty million tins of pork and beans.

"Before I could give Sir George an answer," the speaker stated, "I had to cable Singapore to see whether or not we could get tin."

Mr. Redfield told his hearers to advise their prospectors to find tin mines if they wished to be prosperous." Even if you get the tin, though,' he added, "you would not be able to use it without the aid of another importation — African palm oil."

The United States took two-thirds of India's annual crop of jute fibre. Last year, said the speaker, nine hundred million yards of jute were imported and formed the basis of practically all the oil cloth, linoleum, sacking and twine used in the country. Besides, before the jute could be manufactured cork had to be imported from Algeria and Spain and linseed oil from the Argentine.

Shellac Production.

Mr. Redfield described the peculiar process by which shellac was produced and mentioned the many articles ,such as gramaphone records, telephone mouthpieces into the manufacture of which shellac entered. All the shellac used in the United States had to be imported.

"I hope," concluded Mr. Redfield "that I make it possible for you to see that there is an outside world almost unknown to Americans and that you enjoy the products of thousands of your fellow creatures without whose efforts your lives would be shrivelled up."

THREE CAR MISHAPS ALL LAST SATURDAY

Tourists in Ditch—Two Local Lads Upset — Leg Bone Cracked

OMEMEE, June 23.—For many years the vacant house at the top of Dancy's Hill has been a source of worry, and in fact has caused several mishaps to automobiles as the motorist's view is obstructed when turning the corner. The latest accident occurred on Saturday, when a party of Americans missed the turn and landed in the ditch, breaking the front wheels completely off the car. Fortunately, no one was hurt, but the party were greatly upset by shock, and considerable delay was caused before repairs could be secured.

A second mishap occurred just east of the village on the same day, when a couple of Omemee boys were en route to Peterborough, the steering gear broke, causing the car to take to the ditch. Fortunately, no further damage was done, but had the car travelled a few inches farther, either a telephone post or the car was bound to suffer.

Mr. Allan Adams had the misfortune to have a bone in his leg cracked on Saturday. While in the employ of Corneil and Clemett's garage, he was underneath the car, engaged in repairing same, which was jacked up, when another car came into the one undergoing repairs, causing it to fall and strike the unfortunate young man on the leg. Allan will be indisposed for some time, his leg having had to be placed in a plaster of paris caste.

3 INDIAN CHIEFS WISH INTERVIEW WITH SOVEREIGN

Arrive in London to Lay Grievances at Foot of Throne

LAND ANNEXED

Plead Dominion Government Failed to Consult Original Owners

LONDON, June 23 (Canadian Press).—Wearing conventional European dress but looking deeply worried, three Red Indian chiefs from British Columbia have arrived in order to make a second attempt to lay their grievances before His Majesty. The three are representatives of the Interior Tribes of British Columbia, and are Chief Basil David, Chief William Pierish, who lost an arm during the war at Cambrai, and who wore an American war badge in his buttonhole, and Chief Johnny Chillichitsa. The latter is accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Charles Williams, who is possessed of a modern education and, being fluent in the English language, is interpreter for the three chiefs, whose knowledge of English is limited.

Mrs. Williams, with a broad-brimmed hat, a red scarf and a red bow in her hair, looked much more like the traditional Red Indian than her compatriots.

The grievance concerns a tract of land near Kamloops, B.C. The chiefs, on behalf of their tribal followers, contend that the Canadian Government annexed some of their land without consulting the Indians. The tribes interested have declined to accept adverse judgments. Last year the chiefs made a similar journey but were unable to see the King, and so they have returned for the express purpose of pleading their case at the foot of the throne.

BURIED GRASPING SOLDIER'S LETTER

Llady Garvagh Leaves Unusual Funeral Instructions in Will

LONDON, June 23 (Canadian Press).—In her will made public yesterday, Florence, Lady Garvagh, widow of the third Baron Garvagh, left directions to prevent her premature burial, and expressed the wish that there be no mourners at her funeral. Lady Garvagh, who died recently, insttucted that "particular care is taken that my jugular vein is well severed, and nobody need follow me to the grave except a clerk to see that I am decently buried."

Lady Garvagh bequeathed a helmet, guns and a water-bottle "which I picked with my own hands out of the British line at Ypres," to her grandson, who is the five-year-old son of the present Lord Garvagh.

The estate is probated at an even four thousand pounds.

Lady Garvagh, who was a prominent worker among the soldiers during the war, was buried with her hands grasping a letter written to her by a soldier. Lady Garvagh expressly desired that the announcement of her death should not be made public until after the funeral, as all her life she had had a particular horror of funerals.

Lady Garvagh, the daughter of Baron Joseph de Bretton of Copenhagen, married the third Baron Garvagh in 1877. He died in 1915. The present Lord Garvagh was their only son.

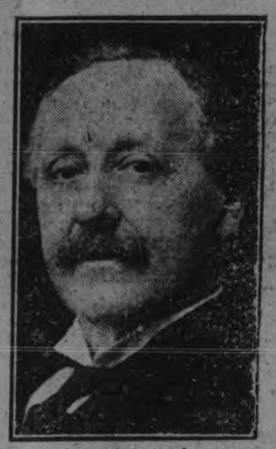
MAKES ACCUSATION



Lord Gladstone, who accuses David Lloyd George of frustrating the Liberals' return to power in Britain in the 1924 elections by withholding the campaign fund which is under his personal control.

BATTLE OVER

the illegal disposition of liquor at Regina. It was then too late to prepare the matter for the committee. He had consulted with the Acting Deputy and a Mounted Police Officer had been sent out to investigate. He unearthed a fraud and caught some people with the goods. The operative retained J. F. Bryant, K.C. to prosecute. Then the Liberal local committee got busy. Bryant was called off, and Mr. Anderson, a Liberal lawyer, had been engaged in his place. Meanwhile the police operative had been brought back to give evidence in a case in Montreal. Mr. Stevens read a letter he had addressed the Prime Minister on Saturday reciting these facts and suggesting that this was an unwarrantable interference.

Montreal Frame-up.

Mention was also made of a "frame-up" for the release of one Cohen, a notorious silk smuggler at Montreal. The Prime Minister had replied with a memorandum from the mounted police to the effect that the case against Cohen was still pending. Regarding the Regina case the commissioner said that the secret agent had not been removed nor had his work been interfered with. He had been summoned to Montreal to give evidence, and knew before he went west that he would be brought back. He had engaged a lawyer without any authority or instructions.

"Is not Mr. Bryant, K. C., president of the Regina Conservative Association?" asked the Premier.

Subterranean Influence.

"I do not know, but since when has it been an offence to be a member of the Conservative Association?" retorted Mr. Stevens. He proceeded to say that all through the investigation incidents of the character had cropped up. Officers would be doing their duty when suddenly some "subterranean influence" would appear.

The present Minister of Customs he charged, had arranged with the Minister of Justice to step in and call off the proceedings.

"Absolutely untrue," declared Mr. Lapointe.

Knew All About It.

"My only answer is that when I first made my charges the Minister of Justice rose in his place and three times denied that he knew anything of the questions," said Mr. Stevens. "There is ample evidence on the records of the committee to show that he knew all about it. I attach to his present denial the evident worth."

Mr. Stevens explained that the member for Peace River, Mr. Kennedy, had the deciding vote in the committee and motions respecting the Minister were rejected. He then moved his amendment. He explained that it was a composite of the two claused rejected in the committee.

Send down proof—Take Three .....

The following amendment to the motion of concurrence was moved by Mr. Stevens and seconded by Mr. Doucet: "That the report be not now adopted, but that it be referred back to the special committee with instruction to add thereto the following clauses as subclauses to paragraph 6:

"The evidence further discloses that ministerial action has been influenced by the improper pressure of political associates and friends of the minister or acting minister administering the department, resulting in the suspension and in some instances the abandonment of prosecutions against those charged with violation of the statutes, and in the loss of revenue to the country. Moreover, successful appeals have been made to the minister and acting minister administering the department to improperly interfere with the course of justice between the conviction of the offenders and the execution of judgment thereon. The premier and government had knowledge for some considerable time of the rapid degeneration of the department of customs and excise, and their failure to take prompt and effective remedial action is wholly indefensible. The conduct of the present premier and of the Hon. George S. Boivin in the case of Moses Aziz is utterly unjustifiable.

"Your committee deplores the practice, as revealed by the evidence of certain men influential in public life, to direct appeals to the minister to relax and depart from the proper administration of his department for reasons of political expediency.

"Your committee is of the opinion that this practice is detrimental to the best interest of the country and prejudicial to the administration of the department.

"And that the committee for such purposes be revived."

Hon. G. H. Boivin

Hon. G. H. Boivin, minister of customs and excise, took up his defence following the speech of Hon. Mr. Stevens, in the House of Commons this afternoon. Mr. Boivin referred to the case of the barge Tremblay, and the charge that alcohol from the barge had been sold denatured at an excessively low rate to the Dominion Distilleries. Mr. Boivin charged Conservatives with "petty, picayune, political tactics." He produced a letter from the Quebec Liquor Commission refusing to have anything to do with this alcohol on the ground that it was "not fit for human consumption." He had only just received this letter from Three Rivers, where Senator Jacques Bureau had found it among his private correspondence.

Minister Flares Up

There was considerable laughter on the Opposition benches. The minister flared out: "My friends sneer. They are the same friends who allowed Jacques Bureau to pass his estimates year after year without complaint. They are the same honorable gentlemen who were willing then to receive his favors." The minister added that he would have found some way of insisting that the letter be placed in evidence of the customs committee, even though that phase of its work was finished, if he had dreamed that the Opposition was going to stoop to petty, picayune political methods like this."

Mr. Boivin proceeded to read the letter from the Quebec Liquor Commission which was dated January 29, 1925. It stated that the Commission after having caused the alcohol to be analyzed and examined had come to the conclusion that it could not purchase it. The alcohol could not be compared to that produced from Canadian Distilleries. It would be necessary that the price be very low before the Commission would be willing to purchase it.

No Favors

This letter, said Mr. Boivin, disposed of one acusation against him—that of trying to favor a political friend in the disposition of this alcohol. He declared that when he found employees on the border not living up to the rules of the department in regard to liquor, such employees would be dismissed. He added that there was an officer in the neighborhood of Windsor at the present time under suspension because he was found acting as a distiller's agent.

"There is a man sitting on the opposite side of the House who will vote for this amendment but who has been up to my office on two occasions to try and secure the reinstatement of this officer," declared the minister.

Liquor to U. S.

Mr. Boivin stated that whiskey and beer were going over to the United States every day. This was known to the Government, to the Opposition and to the United States Government. But since he had taken office, the customs department was living up to the terms of the treaty with the United States. Every boatload of liquor which left Canada was known to United States customs officers. Camouflage bills of lading were done away with. The strictest adherence to the terms of the treaty was being enforced. With regard to the charge that he was a friend of M. Bissonnette, of the Peerless Overall Company, Mr. Boivin admitted that this was true. It was not until after the inquiry opened, however, that he knew the connection of Mr. Bissonnette with the Peerless Overall Company.

And now, said Mr. Boivin, he came to the charge which, it was claimed, would cause the Government to totter. This was that he had consented to listen to the representations of a member of Parliament before issuing the warrant of commitment against a man who had smuggled liquor in his possession. Moses Aziz, Mr. Boivin said, had been found guilty three weeks before he had any idea of being minister of customs. The second day after he had taken office, his secretary placed before him a request from J. G. Robichaud, member for Gloucester, asking him to withhold the warrant of commitment in the Aziz case. He was in a great hurry, said Mr. Boivin, but he called in the deputy minister and asked if it was within his power to take action in the matter. The deputy minister had informed him that it was. He had before him a letter from Officer Stewart, who had arrested Aziz, stating that Aziz had turned King's evidence and thus paved the way for other convictions.

Furthermore, Mr. Boivin said, the smuggling of this liquor had taken place before the passage of legislation making it a penalty by imprisonment. He had not interfered with any judge. He had merely carried out his duties by advising the customs officer in the locality not to incarcerate this man until the member, Mr. Robichaud, had been given an opportunity to be heard.

Mr. Boivin said he would have done the same thing if a Conservative member had made the same request. He read a letter from the deputy minister of justice stating that he had been within his authority in the matter.

Mr. Boivin declared that some of the members on the opposite side would vote against the Minister of Customs "with a great deal of regret." More than one would rise in his place and vote through party allegiance.

Vote With Regret

"So far as the first statement is concerned, all who vote against the minister will vote with regret," interjected Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Conservative leader.

"I thank my honorable friend for that statement and I believe it. I believe that the right honorable gentleman would crucify his own brother in order to save the Conservative party," retorted Mr. Boivin.

Mr. Boivin stated that he had not seen the letter from Mr. Robichaud in the first instance. Had he seen the request and the letter his conduct, he believed, would have been the same. "If that request had come from a Conservative member of Parliament my conduct and my reply would have been the same," said Mr. Boivin. "I had no intention of keeping this man out of jail if he was guilty. I had, on the other hand, no intention of letting him go to jail, if I could help it, if on the merits of the case he did not deserve to go."

Mr. Boivin stated that a delay had only been granted until he had had an opportunity of hearing representations and deciding on their merits. This was borne out by the fact that on November 18 last, he had written to Mr. Robichaud to the effect that after examining into the facts, he could see no reason why sentence "should not be executed."

Aziz in Jail

After it had been intimated that affairs of the customs department would be under investigation, Mr. Boivin pointed out that he could have had action taken to send Aziz to jail. He desired, however, for one thing to place a complete record before the customs inquiry committee in the matter. Aziz, in the meantime, had not been entirely unpunished. He had paid a fine of $150, $38 additional for costs, and his liquor had been confiscated. Mr. Boivin stated again that his action had been merely to await representations from Mr. Robichaud in order that full consideration could be given to the merits of the case. The proof of that laid in the fact that Aziz was now in jail.

If there was any responsibility, stated Mr. Boivin, that responsibility was not on the shoulders of his colleagues but on his own shoulders, due to inexperience when he entered the department.

He wished to point out that his position in delaying action was supported by a letter written by the remission branch of the department of customs to the effect that the department of justice could not deal with such a case, but that the department of customs and the minister of the department had a perfect right to dispose of it as he saw fit. Mr. Boivin said that his position was further confirmed by an opinion from the deputy minister of justice in an interpretation of Section 26 of the Customs Act. The opinion was, in part, to the effect that adjournments and abandonments in customs prosecutions was under the directions of the customs department.

No Bribes

Mr. Boivin asked the House to reflect that although the probe had lasted so long and worked so diligently "to find something with which to blacken this Government, there is one thing which shines out above all others. There is not one important official of the department, there is not one minister, past or present, who can be accused of having accepted any bribe."

"You can accuse Jacques Bureau of being too good to his political friends—or foes—" went on the minister. "You can accuse him of having put a little too much confidence in officers in Montreal or elsewhere, but you cannot point the finger at Bureau and say that he ever accepted a dollar as a bribe."

Much of the "Thunder of the past four and a half months," said the minister, had been directed at things done and said long before the facts were known. For instance, he had once said in public that he did not believe the great cost of the probe would be justified. He was willing to say now that the committee had gone to greater lengths than was then expected, that the probe had been very valuable. It would strengthen his hands or the hands of any minister that came after him in effecting certain reforms. He had once condemned R. P. Sparks for having got information from officials of the customs department and carried it to the Opposition instead of giving it to the Government, but he was none the less ready to give credit now to the Commercial Protective Association (of which Mr. Sparks is the executive head) for having contributed to the report now before the House, the most valuable recommendations of all. It was his intention, said Mr. Boivin, to carry out those recommendations as soon as he possibly could.

Duncan Report

It should be borne in mind that the Duncan Report, from which so much of the most significant evidence in the probe was adduced was prepared by an employee of this Government appointed to make an investigation more than a week before Mr. Stevens' charges were first published in the press.

When Mr. Boivin proceeded to refer to an unpublished complaint about a firm in Regina, Mr. Stevens protested that his part in that incident was not being correctly described.

The minister retorted, that Mr. Stevens had gone to the department of customs and given certain facts to the chief of preventive service at the same time imposing such absolute confidence upon that official that not even the minister of customs was allowed to know anything about it.

Only Regarding Names

Mr. Stevens protested that it was only as regards names that he had enjoined silence on Mr. Wilson, the preventive chief.

Mr. Boivin said that the confidence had been "so mighty well kept" that he knew nothing about it until yesterday. Mr. Wilson had been "at the beck and call" of Mr. Stevens for the last few months. He had been given files to take home at night so that he might prepare from them a precis on which Conservative members of the committee could prepare more damaging evidence against the Government.

No Reports Asked

Mr. Stevens interrupted to deny that he had ever asked customs officers to prepare any reports except that ordered by the committee in the ordinary procedure of that tribunal.

R. S. White (Conservative, Mount Royal) asked Mr. Boivin if he suggested that the chief of the preventive service had conspired with Conservative members of the committee.

Instructions Not Carried Out

Mr. Boivin replied that he could hardly be satisfied with a man who obeyed orders of the committee and disobeyed orders of his minister. In a great many cases instructions had been given to Mr. Wilson which were not carried out. Confidences had been made to Mr. Wilson which had not been respected. The chief of the preventive service had given information to the committee before he gave it to his own minister.

Mr. Boivin reiterated his statement that as long as he remained in charge of the department there would be the most careful supervision and the most rigid adherence to the customs law.

Mr. Boivin was followed by C. W. Bell, of Hamilton West, Conservative, of the customs committee. Mr. Bell declared that any doubts he had of Mr. Boivin's responsibility in the Aziz case had been disolved by Mr. Boivin's own statement. He charged that corruption had got so far into the cabinet that anti-smuggling legislation was valueless. As to the Aziz case, said Mr. Bell, nothing could alter the fact that the government had protected a smuggler, a bootlegger, the "peddler of a vile and poisonous brand of whiskey."

Dugald Donaghy, of North Vancouver, a Liberal member of the commission, spoke briefly before adjourning the debate. This afternoon, the fight will be resumed with the critical division, in all probability to-night.

THE GRESSMAN COMPANY LIMITED

"The Store of Smiling Service"

"THESE WOMEN"

By MALCOLM DUART

COPYRIGHT 1926

The Characters and Situations in this Story are entirely fictional.

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

The story is approaching its climax. NONA, Toronto dancer, has come to Peterborough to ask HARRY MORTON if she shall accept an offered engagement to star in London. She loves Morton and wants to say in America with him.

AUDREY, Morton's adopted daughter, also loves him and has asked him to marry her. She also is fond of JOHN PARRISH, Morton's secretary, who loves her.

Morton, rich, middle-aged, unmarried, always has been attractive to women.

With Nona has come ABE SUNSHINE, theatrical manager, who wants Nona to accept the London proposition. As this chapter opens, Parrish tells Morton and Nona that Sunshine has put up to him an insulting proposition.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER LIX.

Parrish slammed the door behind him and then turned to face Morton.

"Do you know what that man proposed to me?" he demanded, pounding on the table with his fists.

"Naturally, I don't," Morton said calmly. He seated himself in his revolving chair.

Parrish swallowed hard. "I hate to tell you," he said. "It sounds as if I were discussing your private affairs."

Morton rubbed his chin reflectively. "To the best of my recollection, you have discussed them before," he said.

Parrish digested this for a moment. "But this is from somebody else, outside the family, so to speak," he defended.

Morton surveyed him with a crinkle at the corners of his eyes. "So you have already adopted us as your family?" he went on.

The flush that always came to Parrish's face so easily reddened it now. "You're just joshing me, Mr. Morton," he said. "But this is serious. I want to tell you what this man Sunshine proposed."

"Well go on—go on!"

Parrish considered. Then he said: "He wanted me to interfere between you and Nona so you couldn't get married. He said I was likely to be son-in-law here and I would have a great deal of influence. He wanted me to tell you that you and she could never be happy together!"

He stood looking at Morton expectantly. The other, after a moment's survey of his young secretary, leaned back and roared with laughter.

"Is that all?" he gasped, the laugh subsiding.

"Isn't that enough?" Parrish asked.

Morton got up and took the young man by the arm. "You're a good young man, John, but—" he patted the other on the shoulder—"what you need, worse than anything else, is a sense of humor."

He turned and went out the door. "Come here, Abe!" he called.

Mr. Sunshine, still on the porch, now entered alertly. He glanced from side to side, as if in search of Parrish.

"Is he in there?" he asked, jerking his thumb toward the study.

"Yes, but he won't bite—I pulled his teeth," Morton assured him.

Mr. Sunshine breathed a sigh of relief. "I felt positively he was going to punch my head," he said. "All I was making to him was a little business proposition."

He looked at Morton. "Did he tell you what it was?"

"He did," said Morton. He turned to Nona, who still sat on the couch in the drawing-room. "Abe here, tried to make a bargain with Parrish to break up the affair between you and me."

She did not laugh. "You did that?" she cried, rising.

Mr. Sunshine retreated, extending his hands defensively. "Now don't be a tiger, Nona!" he urged. "Don't make mugs like that at me! All I wanted was to make sure you went to London and made a big success! Wasn't that kind, Nona? Should you be angry at me about that?"

The girl looked from Sunshine to the laughing Morton, and collapsed on the couch.

"Abe," she said, finally, "you're all right, I guess, but you do the biggest fool things!"

The theatrical man now advanced, and seated himself beside her, turning toward her a pleasant smile. "Now, Nona, this is just business. Mr. Morton is a business man, and he understands. Why should you throw this wonderful chance away, and leave me out in the cold?"

Laying his hands on his knees, he bent toward her, his black eyes wide as he waited for a response.

She waved him away. "Oh, go on outside and take a walk, Abe! Actually, I feel like slapping you!"

He arose. "All right, Nona, I'll go. But you get her in a good humor again, won't you, Mr. Morton?"

Morton nodded, and took the place that Mr. Sunshine had vacated as the latter went out the door. A cheerful whistle could be heard from him, as he passed through the great iron gate, and looked up and down the quiet street.

"He's a kind little man," Morton said. "It isn't only the money that he wants, Nona. He really and sincerely wants you to be a great success, because he's fond of you."

"I know," Nona said, nodding. "He's proud of me—he looks on me as a sort of big diamond, that he found himself, and wears in his shirt front."

She laughed. Then, turning to him seriously, she said:

"Harry, I want to talk to you alone."

He pointed toward the study. "Shall I rout Parrish out of there?"

They arose, and went to the door. Opening it, Morton called to Parrish. "Take your papers, John, and work in the drawing-room. I want to talk to Nona."

Obediently, Parrish drew together the little heap of reports he was preparing, and carried them past Nona and Morton, into the long room beyond.

The man and girl entered the study, and Morton shut the door. "Take my chair, Nona," Morton said. He sat on the edge of the desk.

"Now, what is it, my dear?" he said.

She leaned back, surveying him with her wide, dark eyes. Her glossy hair was smoothed back from her forehead, down alongside her ears, and her cleanly modeled face and slender form reminded him again of one of the beautiful black panthers he had spoken of before. He told her of the resemblance.

"I'm a long way from a panther, Harry," she said, sadly. "Dearest—" she tilted the chair forward and laid her arms on the desk, reaching toward him—"My future is in your hands. What are you going to do with it?"

He did not pretend to misunderstand. He leaned back, one knee held in his clasped hand, and looked at her, a long time.

"Dear," he said, his tone musing, "you and Audrey and—and another, have been in my thoughts more than all the rest of the women in the world put together."

Her hand moved. "Who is the other one, Harry?"

He waited a short while before he answered. "I was a very young man then, when I knew her. I was an artist, and had hope of being one of the great ones in the world. I had known her since I was a boy, and she a little girl. I grew up, painting my pictures, living my life, for her."

His head descended until his chin rested on his breast. "But Nona, I lost her."

The girl watched him, with sympathy in her deep eyes. She did not disturb his thoughts, but waited until he spoke again. When he looked up, he dropped his knee, and took both her hands in one of his.

"She looked like Audrey, Nona. The same eyes, the same hair, the same slender figure, and in many ways, the same soul." He bit his lip. "Dear, I'll tell you. She was Audrey's mother."

He dropped her hands, and suddenly leaping to the floor, he went to a corner of the room, and stood with his hand against the wall, his head bent, so she could not see his face. She rose, and with a rustle was by his side, one arm encircling his, the other over his shoulder.

"And—what became of Audrey's father, dear?" she pressed him closer to her.

"But don't answer that, dearest—I know it hurts you, and God knows I don't want to hurt you."

She turned him around, so he faced her. Then she reached up and smoothed back the hair on each of his temples.

"I know that Audrey is your adopted daughter," she went on. "I shouldn't have asked anything to pain you. It must be a terrible agony in your heart!"

Her hands dropped to his shoulders, and she rested her cheek against his breast. He put his arms around her for a moment, patted her on the back and then led her back to her chair. When she had seated herself, he resumed his place on the desk.

"Nona," he continued, resting his weight on one hand as he looked into the glowing eyes of the girl before him. "Maybe you have guessed why I played around, in Toronto and other places, the way I did."

She slowly nodded, without removing her eyes from his. "I was broken-hearted, dear. Always I was running away from the things that haunted me, from the past. After Audrey was in bed, I would go to the restaurants, and the cabarets; behind the scenes in the theater, in search of people who were gay, and full of life and laughter."

He threw up his arms, with a gesture of despair.

"I was seeking forgetfulness; drinking the intoxicants of life, to numb the pain, here!" He put his hand over his heart. Reaching forward, she placed her own hand there, and pressed it against him, love and tenderness in the gaze she bent upon him.

"It IS a pain," he went on. "An actual, physical pain. It was while I was searching for the comfort I could not find, that I met you."

She pressed her hand harder against him. She could feel his heart beating.

"Did I help you?" she breathed.

"You helped me, Nona." He laid his fingers lightly on her arm. "You are sweet, and human and companionable, and you did much for me."

She rose, and spread her arms.

"Then, Harry, I want to comfort you always!"

She stood, her arms reaching to him, her lips apart, her eyes imploring him to come.

When she spoke, her voice trembled. "You want to be loyal to the memory of the sweetheart of your youth," she said, her arms motionless before her. "That is all right. I do not ask you to marry me. I am humble, and beneath you.

"But oh, Harry, I love you! You mean all of life to me! Harry, shall I go to London, or shall I stay?"

LECTURER TELLS ABOUT ARMENIANS

Rev. Ira Pierce, of Toronto, Speaks in Hastings Hall.

HASTINGS, June 23.—A lantern lecture was given in the Town Hall on Thursday evening by Rev. Ira Pierce of Toronto, who was a missionary in Armenia.

After an introduction by the chairman, Rev. D. A. Thomson; Mr. Pierce commenced his address. Being a missionary in Armenia, he said, he had an advantage over many others who have no doubt read of the terrible things done by the Turks to the Armenians during war time. Some of the things read about were exaggerated and impossible, but Mr. Pierce said were all too true. He was there when the World War was raging at the first in 1914.

Being a Christian nation and Armenia being the first race on earth to accept Christianity as no other race took over Christianity before the Armenian people, they suffered such terrible things from the hands of the Turk.

In 1914 war was declared by Germany and England. A few weeks after the Turks entered the war, joining the Central Powers, throwing this strength against the British Empire. There the barrier broke and down came the flood upon the land and row over Eastern Europe. The Turk stopped at nothing and had never quite forgiven the Armenian race because it opposed their objective, not as a racial clash, but as one of two great faiths.

For about one and a half years after this the missionary work was carried on with safety, but 1,500,000 Armenians were out down and the people were brought face to face with the blood-thirsty curses of the Turks.

The Armenian people are not a people as many people of the new world suppose when they think of them as pack peddlars, but have lovely homes in their own way of living, and are a people eager to learn and some are graduates from the finest colleges and universities of the world.

After the Turks attacked the missionaries they forced them to retreat 300 miles, passing over land which was strewn with the dead bodies of the murdered Armenians. Now that their country is no longer a nation, those who are left have what is termed refugee camps, which are on the eastern end of the Mediterranean Sea. Many orphan children whose parents have been massacred at the hands of the Turks are in these camps. Some of these orphans are now being cared for in Canada.

Mr. Pierce and some other missionary workers made an appointment to see the Government to see if they could not be a little more lenient about the present immigration laws by which so much restriction is being placed.

The speaker said that they have succeeded in bringing out some of the orphans to this country.

The Government consented to have a quota of refugees brought out on one ground, providing they are made into an agricultural citizenship. These terms were accepted, and a farm of two hundred acres was purchased at Georgetown, about thirty miles from Toronto. There were 90 orphans brought here who are learning Canadian farming. There is thirty-five acres of orchard land at the farm, and a small herd of Holstein cattle is kept where milking is taught. For one month the bread bill at the farm is $200, and a bushel of potatoes is consumed at a time. Public school work is taught by teachers, and sports are indulged in at intervals. The boys are very fond of music, and are nearly all musical in some way. Mr. Pierce had a little boy accompany him to Hastings. This little boy of about eight years of age played a mouth organ, the first piece being "Home, Sweet Home," which touched the hearts of all present. The second piece displayed a loyal Canadian spirit, "The Maple Leaf Forever."

A little story, entitled "The Rewarded Faith," was given of one little fellow at Georgetown. The following is a beautiful story in the records of the Armenian Relief Association of Canada. This organization has brought two groups of little Armenian boys, orphans of the massacres, to our country, where on a farm at Georgetown it is giving them new hope and a chance for a new life in contrast to their tragic past. They are to become Christian farmers, and the experiment is unique.

"At Christmas, 1923, one of our little boys refused to eat his Christmas pudding. His teacher saw him push his plate aside and said to him, 'John, what is the matter?' The little fellow replied with deep emotion, 'I have a little brother over there some place among the refugees. I know he is having no pudding, and I simply cannot eat mine.'

"Since Christmas friends have sent in nuts, raisins and candies to these little Armenian lads. John has had his fair share of all these good things, but has eaten none of them. Last July the superintendent of the home found him with all these sweets carefully laid away in a box. He asked him the meaning of it, and John simply replied, 'These are for my little brother.'"

Last summer each boy, to stimulate his interest in the soil, was given an individual garden plot. One day it was discovered that John had two beautifully kept lots. 'John, what are you doing with two gardens?' The boy smiled through his tears and said, 'One of them is for my little brother.'

"For many months the boy wrote very frequently in his quaint rather beautiful English, asking if we could bring to Canada his little brother. The case got on our souls. We wrote through the Lord Mayor's Fund and other organizations to see if we could locate John's brother in the refugee camps, but all in vain, and we received no encouragement.

"In August our association decided to transport forty more of these little orphans to Canada. Once more John wrote pleading for us to bring his brother, but none of us had any hope that the little lad would be forthcoming. When the ship that brought these boys to our Dominion arrived at Halifax, to the amazement of us all, John's brother was among them.

"The secretary of our association declares that he would have gone across the Continent to have witnessed the meeting of these two little brothers at Georgetown farm.

"Here is what he tells. When I arrived at Georgetown I was immediately motored to the farm. The new boys, some on foot, had arrived about ten minutes later. The fifty old boys were drawn up in a line to greet the new arrivals. John asked no questions. He was apparently a little afraid to make enquiries lest disappointment might add to his sorrow. We gave him no information. John stood at the end of the line, and as the new boys came down the hill and formed a line directly in front of the old boys, John suddenly exclaimed, 'There is my little brother.' He ran out and they threw their arms around each other's necks, and sobbed and sobbed, without saying a word.

"The rest of us sobbed with them. There were no dry eyes among the adults who witnessed the meeting of these two little fellows: all that remain of a large family slain by the Turk. John, faith rewarded, placed his little brother at his side and then prayer was offered, thanking God for the restoration to each other of these two little lads. Then John was asked to make a speech, and this in substance is what he said, 'Boys, we welcome you to Canada; Canada is a great country, and this is a great place. Learn English as fast as you can and become good Christian citizens.'"

A short time was taken up after the lecture discussing ways and means of raising funds to help the work. It takes practically one hundred and fifty dollars to bring a boy from Armenia here, and it costs about one hundred dollars to educate a boy and fit him for the Canadian farm and home work. This matter will be taken up again in the future to see what can be done regarding same.

SETH'S JOURNEY TO PARADISE.

Nine hundred years had passed away,
Since that most dire, disastrous day,
When Adam, from fair Eden passed,
Because of sin, a sad outcast.
Oft he had prayed to God on high,
To set him free, to let him die,
For he beheld more monstrous grown,
Daily, the sin, which he had sown.
Yet, ere life's tide, it's course had run,
He called to him, Seth, his dear son,
To whom he said, thee would I send
Back, to where Cherubins defend,
With flaming swords, loved Eden's gate,
Whence we were driven forth of late,
Lest we again might entrance win,
Of Life's tree eat, and live in sin,
Forever from Gods presence driven.
Bereft of peace, and hope of Heaven.
Seth said, how shall I know the way
Unguided, nor far devious stray.
Nay son, although nine hundred years
Have passed, since, blind with bitter tears
I with thy mother, left these bowers,
Nine hundred Springs, clad earth with flowers,
The path, here, and that spot, between,
Nor flowers, has known, nor verdure green;
For where our sinful footsteps pressed,
Is scorched, as if by flame unblest,
So devastating is sin's brand,
It blights, and blasts, the smiling land;
Thy father's sin, not harshly blame,
God knows how I have mourned the same,
My son make no undue delay
But eastward now, pursue thy way,
And when thou seest, the Angel stand,
The flaming sword, drawn in his hand,
Say to him, wretched Adam, fain,
By death release, from sin, would gain,
Yet would not die till he has seen,
The Oil of Mercy, promised been,
And heard more of the seed, which He
So dimly spake, the day when we,
Tempted by the sly serpent fell,
And banished were from that loved dell.
So Seth pursued the pathway, sered,
By sin, until, at length appeared
The Seventh day, at evening late,
The Guardian Angel, at the gate,
Who to him spake, I prithee say,
Wherefore thou comest, and whence today
Thus Seth replied, lo I am come
From Hebron, Adam's foster home,
Weary, he is and sad of heart
And from this world would fain depart,
But the Oil of Mercy, any wise
He longs to see before he dies.
And hear, how yet the Serpent's head,
The woman's seed should bruising tread,
Then turn thy steps, fear not, but go
Enter the gate, watch, learn, and know,
Seth entered then the gate and saw
With strange amaze, and silent awe
Such marvellous bloom, and beauty rare
Flowers, foliage, fruit, beyond compare.
Fanned was his cheek, by odorous breeze
Sweet songs of birds, in leafy trees,
There rose the Spring, which brought to birth
Four streams that water all the earth,
And there that bubbling spring hard by,
A tree stood, myriad branched, and high,
But bare, and blasted, by the blight
Of his own parents sin, and light
The withered, knarled tree trunk around
Its clammy folds a serpent wound
And hissed, but as Seth on it gazed
The branches seemed, to Heaven upraised
And mid the branches sin defiled
Sore, weeping sat, a little child,
Downward it's roots sank deep as Hell
And stooping down, Seth saw full well
The soul, of righteous Abel slain
Long years before by jealous Cain
Then to the Angel, Seth returned,
And told him, all that he had learned,
The Angel said in very deed
That little child, is woman's seed,
The Oil of Mercy, sent to heal
All sin and suffering, mortals feel,
Thus tears of sorrow mar His face,
For the sin and shame of all his race,
And he in future years shall tread
With bleeding feet, the pathway dread
By Adam's footsteps scorched, and burned,
When he was out of Eden turned,
And from his wounds, shall blood drops fall,
Destroying sin, nor is this all
For whereso ere His blest feet press,
The desert blooms in loveliness,
He from the firey pangs, and pain
Of Hell shall draw, Abel's soul again,
As well of souls, a countless host,
Who, but for him, were ever lost.
Then shall the tree, in glorious sheen
Put forth fresh leaves, of living green,
And man to Paradise go back,
By the same flowery, verdant track
Made, by the passing of his feet,
Bright, with immortal, blossoms sweet
The Angel then bade Seth farewell,
Bidding him all to Adam tell,
Which he had seen, and heard of late
Inside of Eden's guarded gate,
So Seth to Adam, frail, and old,
The wonderous story, did unfold
All he had seen and heard the while,
And saw again his father smile,
He had not smiled, since that sad hour,
When he was driven from Eden's bower,
Lowly he bowed his aged head,
Now Lord, let me depart, he said,
For I have wept and suffered long
O'er my great sin, and lasting wrong,
Since Thou to show us now has deigned
How Paradise may be regained.
Oh God receive my soul he sighed
And his last prayer was not denied
For Adam laid him down and died.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncliffe

SHE DESCRIBES A MODISH DANCE FROCK.

I have made so many black dance frocks this Spring that I am fairly dizzy," Madame commented this morning.

And I've modeled so many that I feel as if I were in mourning," one o the girls commented.

Then come along and model another," Madame invited her, probably feeling that she deserved the work for her sauciness.

I'd really like to model it," the girl, who was Gaby, returned. To tell the truth I am glad this great rage for black dinner and dance frocks is upon us. I adore them, and so many people look better in black than in anything else."

Well, I'm encouraging every client to have at least one black frock in her Summer wardrobe," Madame answered. They are so effective, and they are practically indispensable for anyone who is going abroad, or who plans to travel or visit. Then for the people who stay in town, there's nothing like a black frock for dinner wear."

Gaby marched off to model the black dress, putting on her black satin slippers with black and silver checked backs to them before she went.

Madame simply won't fit a frock, on any of the manikins unless she is wearing the proper accessories to match. She says she can't really get the full effect of a dress unless the slippers and stockings are right, and the coiffure is arranged becomingly. We usually rush into the manikins' room for an extra dash of powder and a bit of lipstick before we model for Madame.

Gaby was gone quite a long while, and later she came back to show us the dress. It was finished, as Madame had wanted her to put it on so she could arrange the black chiffon drapery that was to fall from one armhole.

The material was chiffon, with shaped inset strips of wide black lace, and it fell becomingly over an underslip edged with the lace.

Very flattering," I pronounced it.

Madame likes it so well that she may make the same model up over a flesh slip," Gaby told us.

Then a client came in, and she declared that black frock was exactly what she had been hunting all over the city for.

HER OWN WAY by a Girl of Today

NEW ENTANGLEMENTS.

"You have everybody in the world, Joan Meredith," I asserted as I gently put her back into the chair. "Why you are the girl who has everything. Your stepfather loves you. He gives you everything that your heart may wish for. You have friends, position, your brother."

As I mentioned her brother Joan's sobs broke out afresh.

As soon as she could calm herself enough to speak she said "You will not tell Buddy. Buddy must not know."

"Know what?" I asked. "You haven't told me anything. I don't know yet what I mustn't tell Buddy."

"You mustn't tell him that I have fallen in love with a man that is married."

"What do you mean, married?" I asked stupidly, all the while thinking to myself that I seemed to have fallen in with a regular crowd of girls who had gone crazy over some other woman's husband.

Here I had just been told by Mamie that everything had been settled between her and Buddy Tremaine. She had consented to borrow 25,000 and Buddy was going back to his wife while still vowing undying love for Mamie, and then I come upon another case of a similar kind, although I suspected in this case it was the girl who had the money.

I seated myself beside Joan.

"Tell me all about it," I said, taking hold of both of her hands and pulling them away from her face.

"Judy," she said, as she turned her head away from me. "I wonder if you know what it is to be in heaven and in an hour to fall to the lowest depths of hell?"

She did not stop for me to tell her whether I did know or not, but went on quickly.

"When I came in to buy that second dozen of handkerchiefs I think, perhaps, I was the happiest girl on earth. I had just come from Barry. He had told me that it was his birthday and he had asked me to marry him. It was to be a secret marriage, for I didn't want my step-father to know it until I was of age, which will be next week. Barry did not seem to want anyone to know of it even then."

"When I saw you, however, I came to an unexpected decision. I asked you to come out to dinner with me, and I intended that afterwards you and I would meet Barry and you could witness our marriage. You see, I wanted another girl there," she explained wistfully.

I half arose out of my chair. It seemed to me that I was becoming decidedly mixed up in the affairs of the Robinson-Meredith family without any real inclination on my part to do so.

MAKING ANTIQUES.

The very best way of making wormholes in manufactured antique furniture perplexes that noble profession. One faction insists that a good firing squad with buckshot makes wormholes that defy the worms themselves. Another faction argues for a block of wood with heads of small nails imbedded therein which is whanged against "prehistoric" chairs and "sofys." A nice heavy chain beaten again and again about the sacred manufactured "antiques" is supposed to give a realistic scarred-by-time effect.

ZEBRA SWEATHER.

The zebra effect sweater, with black and white, beige and brown, beige and white, and scarlet and black stripes predominating, gleams along Fashion's walk of sports this spring. Cashmere slip-over styles seem especially favored.

SUMMER NIGHT DRINK.

Fill a glass one-third full of cracked ice. Add one teaspoon of sugar, juice of half a lemon, more cracked ice, another teaspoon of sugar, juice of one orange, and fill glass with grape juice.

THE WEDDING TABLE.

Only the bridal party, according to strictest etiquet, sits at the bride's table. The parents and families of the bride and groom sit together at another. The bride's cake is placed before the bride at the table and a silver knife handed her. She cuts the first piece, and the brides-maids and ushers cut their own. The actual wedding cake, a rich fruit cake, is generally cut into small pieces and packed in small white boxes monogrammed in gold with the initials of the bridal couple, and given to the guests as they depart.

YOUR HOME.

New India prints for wall hangings completely change the tone of an entire room. Hung behind a sofa, over a fireplace, or on an awkward stairway, the loveliest ones are of tan background with rust and dull green pattern.

TWO STYLES.

Two styles of dinner service are used in the best homes. One is the Russian, the other, the English. In the former way, all dishes are served by waitresses from the side. When the English service is used, serving is done from the table. Russian service is used for all formal meals, and English is favored by simpler homes for informal entertaining. A larger dinner plate is used for Russian service. The waitress begins serving at the right or left of the host.

ADVENTURES of the TWINS

by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

Number Twenty.—
On THE MOON BOAT.

Nancy blinked and Nick blinked and the Dream-Maker Man blinked and Snore blinked. Because it was all dark and their airplane had smashed to pieces when they fell. But neither of the Twins felt hurt a bit. Nothing seemed to hurt on the moon.

But there! They were not even sure they had fallen on the moon, for the moon had disappeared mysteriously after they started up on their airplane ride, and it was still very dark.

"I wonder where we are," said the Dream-Maker Man. "It can't be the moon."

"And it can't be Mars, or Jupiter or Venus, for they shine," said Snore.

"And it can't be the Milky Way or the Dipper or the North Star," said Nancy, "for they shine, too."

"We must be somewhere," said Nick.

"You're a wise little boy," said the Dream-Maker Man. "Yes, we must be somewhere."

Suddenly a small light appeared in the distance. It looked, at first, like a lightning bug, then it looked like a candle and then it looked like a lantern.

And that's what it was. It kept getting nearer and nearer, and they could see that it was a lantern and that somebody was carrying it.

"Did I hear something?" asked the voice of the person who was carrying the lantern.

"You certainly did," said Snore. "My airplane fell out of the sky. We were traveling from the east side of the moon to the west side of the moon to call on the Man-in-the-Moon, when suddenly the moon got lost. Then I ran out of gasoline and my airplane fell and here we are."

"Well, I declare!" said the person with the lantern again. "You could not have hit it better if you had tried."

And with that he raised his lantern so they could see his face, and who should it be but the Man-in-the-Moon himself!

"I suppose you are wondering how it comes that the moon is so dark and everything. You are on the moon now—yes, sir! You're standing right on it. In fact you are standing right in my onion patch, but that doesn't matter. I put the last of my onions in my cold peas porridge last night. But to go back to the moon. I'll tell you why it is dark. Just after you left, there was an eclipse."

"An eclipse!" cried the Dream-Maker Man and Snore and the Twins. "You don't say so."

"Yes, I do say so," said the Man-in-the-Moon. "A total eclipse, and the moon got as dark as Ali Baba's cave. I forgot about it myself and I was shaving, when—poof! out she went like that. And me all lathered up!"

"Well, well, well!" laughed the Dream-Maker Man. "I certainly was fooled that time. I forgot all about eclipses."

"Say," said the Man-in-the-Moon. "If you wait a few minutes, the moon will turn into a boat. We can all go for a ride in it, if you like."

A MOUSE IN FEATHERS

We may imagine how the wild folks would laugh at a picture like this.

Here is a man digging a big hole in the back lot. He has the hole just about finished and ready to receive the half dead tree which he is going to stick into it, when something like a little brown mouse skips among the roots of the tree.

Mr. Digwell stops digging and leans upon his shovel for a second, then lifts it quietly and slowly above his shoulder to get ready to crash down upon something or other. The something or other seems to be the little brown mouse that he caught a glimpse of, as it slipped among the roots. He thinks he sees it, so he gets ready, and whack! down comes the shovel on the poor little tree roots. He stiffens up in pride to stick out his chest, but gets a kink in the back. He gives the roots a kick in order to find the supposed dead mouse, but nothing is there.

Just about that exact moment, a little House Wren sings a warble from the fence, and this sounds more like a jeering laugh to the ears of Mr. Didwell, who, by the way, had put up a dandy little Wren House on a pole beside this very same fence, but no wrens would go into it.

This fence is a wire affair with iron pipe posts. The pipe is two inches in diameter inside, and all rusty, both inside and out.

Well, there stood Mr. Digwell, on the edge of the big hole and looking at the wren on t he fence. He scratches his head, and turns and looks at the hole in the ground, and in that brief second the wren pops down the narrow pipe post, out of sight. When Mr. Digwell looks up he is astonished to find no wren. He begins to step stealthily from the edge of the hole to the pipe, in order to look down it and see where the wren went, for surely it could not have gone down there.

Just as Mr. Digwell gets his nose over the pipe, up pops Mr. Wren, seeming to run up the inside of the pipe just as would a mouse. It startled Mr. Digwell so much that he retreated backwards into the hole he had made, landing on his back. And a whole Wren family came up out of that pipe like a string of mice, to sit on the fence and scold him as he stood rubbing his back and complaining about the mice-like tricks of some birds.

TEETH AND DIGESTION.

There is an old saying, 'that a man digs his grave with his teeth,' and it does contain in its gruesome way a grain of truth.

In the digestion of foods, the first step is the act of mastication, which is performed in the mouth. Here not only is the food prepared for swallowing, but the digestion of starches and sugars (which comprise a large proportion of the food bulk), is begun through the action of the salivary content known as ptyalin.

Hence, mastication should necessarily be so thorough so that ptyalin will have fully performed its function before the food is swallowed, and by reason of the fact that without proper chewing, the flow of saliva is not sufficiently stimulated and the normal digestion of the sugars and starches become impossible.

Another reason for thorough mastication of food is, that in the further steps of digestion, the gastric and intestinal juices must needs come into contact with the individual cells of the food tissues; so that by chewing food into small particles, the surface area for digestive action is increased manyfold, which, conversely is not he case when food is 'bolted.'

But the dangers from improper mastication are not negative, merely, but are also positive, since where food is swallowed in too large particles, the digestive organs in their effort to break down these portions are severely overtaxed, leading to the creation of digestive disorders. And without a doubt, these disorders mark the beginning of the large proportion of the serious ills, to which human flesh is heir.

While it is true that much overloading of digestive organs results from a hasty chewing and bolting of food; yet these harmful effects are equally the result of an inefficient masticatory organ due to impairment through dental disease.

How important it is, then, not only that the teeth be kept sound and fit, but also that proper masticatory habits be instituted for the maintainance of the body in a state of vigor and health.

FOR THE PORCH MEAL.

Eating in the open is always attractive, and if we have a nice porch, meals may be a continuous picnic.

Different ways of serving cold meats are often interesting to the housewife for outdoor dinners. Cold boiled chicken, for instance, instead of being thinly sliced in the old way, may be taken from the bones in large pieces. The wings and small pieces may be chopped fine with the liver, gizzard and heart: then squeeze over the juice of an onion, pepper, salt, a teaspoonful of minced celery leaves, the same of minced pepper and enough mayonnaise to bind the mixture. Spread the inside of each piece of meat with the mixture and lay neatly on a lettuce-covered dish. Spread each piece of chicken with a little mayonnaise and dust with a little paprika. Garnish with parsley and deviled eggs.

Again, the chicken may be boiled, chopped, well seasoned, enough mayonnaise added to bind and then cover with aspic. When cold and set garnish as elaborately as desired.

Cold ham may be chopped and fixed in the same way as the chicken, but it must be well seasoned, the mayonnaise stiff enough to bind it firmly before the aspic is poured over the loaf.

A Veal and Cucumber Salad.

Take enough cold roast veal and chop it fine, after freeing fat and fiber. There should be two cupfuls. Then chop and add the fleshy part of two cucumbers, not the seeds, pepper, salt, a teaspoonful each of minced red pepper and mint leaves. Add enough good, sharp tartar sauce to bind the ingredients. Heap in lettuce leaves and garnish with stuffed olives and hard-boiled egg.

Broiled Sardines.

Select large sardines, remove skin and bone and lay on a greased broiler. When broiled lay on slices of delicately made toast spread with tartar sauce. Dust with paprika and garnish with small quartered cucumbers dusted with pepper and salt and dipped in lemon juice.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

THURSDAY JUNE 24.

Lifely conditions are prophesied from the prevailing sidereal operations of this day. Mercury, the swift-footed and keen-witted among the planetary gods, rules the day, being parallel Sol and sextile Neptune. This is a favorable augury for barter, trade and commerce, for all that relates to writings and publicity, to contracts and general business understandings. The Neptune aspect encourages transactions with trusts, mergers, secret agreements, intrigues and with secret orders and societies. A friendly Saturn gives stability to these and all negotiations and to industry.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a lively year in all mercantile as well as professional connections. Negotiations with large corporations, trusts, secret societies and in matters of intrigue or diplomacy should thrive. Industry and patience also carry their rewards. A child born on this day may be versatile, clever and keen of mind, as well as patient, persevering and industrious. He should succeed in either business or a profession.

Careless Shampooing Spoils the Hair

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Do not use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

PATSY RUTH MILLER

The best thing for steady use is Mulsified Cocoanut oil shampoo, which is pure and greaseless, and is better than anything else you can use.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified is sufficient to cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified. Beware of imitations. Look for the name Watkins on the package.

Y.W.C.A. HOLDS GARDEN PARTY

Annual Function Proves Great Success—Held at "Beechfield"

MANY ATTEND

The annual garden party held by the Young Women's Christian Association took place yesterday afternoon and evening under the auspices of the Swimming Pool Committee of the "Y", assisted by various other committees, at "Beechfield," the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Waddell, on the Monaghan Road. The weather was all that could be desired, considering the threatening down pour of the previous day, and the setting afforded by the handsome house and the green terraces surrounding it, was ideal for the occasion. It was one of the prettiest events of the sort held in the history of the Association.

Miss E. Morrow acted as general convenor for the occasion Mrs J. H. Seels and Mrs. V. Eastwood had charge of the decorations, which were carried out very effectively with an abundance of Japanese lanterns, small flags and pennants, and electric lights, strung above the lawns, giving a very festive note to the evening programme. During the afternoon and evening, a number of interpretive dances were staged on the greensward, the electric illumination and the lovely setting of trees and flowering shrubs providing a beautiful background for the prettily-gowned dances. These included the "Diana" dance, done in soft green costumes, by Irene Chambers, Viola Harvey, Victoria Goodson, Mary Dunlop (who took the part of "Diana)" Lily Farthing, Connie Downes and Thelma Darling; the "Rose Ballet," in pale pink gowns, danced by Rose Puttick, M. Bradley, L. Slaughter, G. Welbourne, L. Gregory, V. Perryer and I. Chambers; the "Vintage" dance, done in misty purple draperies and gold shoes, and danced by M. Roger, Grace Caddy, Muriel Wilson, Edna Forster, Mabel Nixon, Mary Menzies, Jeanette Allen, Arleigh Comstock, Sidney Mervin, Isabel Archibald, Bertha Loban and Margaret Eastwood; and the "Butterfly" dance, in yellow and mauve, danced by Grace Comstock, Jean Harvey, Mary Macdonald, Margaret Scott, Helen Hatcher and Annie Williams.

During the afternoon, tea was served at small flower-centred tables arranged on the terraces, in charge of Mrs. N. D. Seaton and Mrs. M. McWilliams. High tea, for which conveners were Mrs. H. Beal and Mrs. R. A. Carman, was an affair of many nice things to eat, and was served at tables placed on the verandah and screened porches. These were centred with vases of flowers, and tea and coffee were poured by Mrs. E. E. Harvey and Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner at a table arranged very artistically with Honiton lace, and garlands of bridal wreath and orchid sweet peas around a large central silver basket of the two flowers, which also filled tiny specimen vases. The committee in charge of provisions for the high tea included Mrs. R. W. Cormack, (convenor), Mrs. D .N. Carmichael, Mrs. N .D. Buchanan, Mrs. T. Barrie, Mrs. F. H. Foote, Mrs. J. E. Middleton and Mrs. H. M. Yelland. Ladies in charge of the individual tables, who were assisted by a bevy of young girls, were Mesdames R. Foster, G. Gilman, J. W. Fraser, H. Morphet, M. Comstock, W. Oke, P. L. Allison, G. S. Parlour, J. Patterson, H. Stenson, G. H. Roper, M. McWilliams, R. Hicks, J. J. Doris, G. S. Loudon and C. L. Brewer.

Various booths added to the attraction of the spacious grounds. Fortunes were told by mysterious-looking ladies in gypsey outfits at nooks arranged with coloured hangings, balloons, black cats and bat cutouts. In charge of this portion of the entertainment were Mrs. F. C. Neal, Mrs. C. F. Sowden, Mrs. B. Gardiner, Miss L. Hall, Miss E. McKay, Miss F. Mitchell and Miss E. Scott Mrs. R. Turner and Mrs. J. J. Harkness were convenors of these booths.

The Peter Robinson Chapter I. O. D. E. had a very pretty corner booth in an arched affair of pale pink and green paper, decorated with grey and green balloons, the tiny frilled paper baskets in the same colors holding home-made candy, the table centred by a huge bowl of bridal wreath and pink honeysuckle. Mrs. J. A. MacNabb, regent of the Chapter, was in charge, assisted by Miss Mayme Montgomery (convenor), Mrs. F. C. Webber, Miss Hazel Buller, Miss Ruby Clegg, and Miss Helen Anderson.

A "Treasure Trove," where numerous novelties were hidden in piles of sand, was in charge of Mrs. L. J. Leclair, Mrs. J. A. Robinson and Mrs. D. Drummond, with small Adolph Leclair and Donald Carr, dressed as pirates, acting as assistants. It was done in a striking effect of orange and blue, with red and green balloons on the standards.

Ice cream, buttermilk and home-made lemonade was sold at a little orange and white table, which was in charge of Mrs. W. R. Widdess and Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner, assisted by Mrs. C. S. Stapleton and Miss Margaret Widdess.

Arrangements were well looked after by the various committees in charge, and a good 'bus service was maintained throughout the afternoon and evening. The car committee was in charge of Mrs. D. Drummond assisted by Miss M. Harvey and Miss M. Jory. Tickets for entrance were in charge of Mrs. J. A. MacNab, Mrs. J. Wearing and Miss Daisy Davidson, while tickets for high tea were sold by Mrs. H. Wightman.

Accompaniments for the dances on the green were played by Mrs. J. Foster, in violin music, while Miss Madeline Willis played the piano during the supper hour.

Proceeds of the garden party this year amounted to over $150.

TWO MINE BILLS ARE ANNOUNCED

First Gives Powers to Commission to Regulate the Industry

BEING DEBATED

LONDON, June 23 (Canadian Press).—The Government yesterday issued the text of its bills dealing with the re-organization of the mining industry. The first bill, entitled "Miners Industry Bill," will be debated in the House of Commons to-day.

It makes the necessary provisions for voluntary amalgamations of mining concerns under the auspices of a governmental body, namely, the Railway and Coal Commission, for more economical operations. It gives the same commission power to confer the right to work the mineral free from the restrictions contained in mining leases and authorizes the levying of a shilling in the pound on mineral royalties to provide baths and facilities for drying clothes at the pits. It empowers the Ministry of Labor to regulate and restrict recruiting to the ranks of miners and makes profit-sharing schemes lawful.

The second bill, which will come before the House of Commons on June 28, is a permissive measure, allowing the miners to work eight instead of seven hours during the next five months.

Every regular rule of the game was stretched and a fast game resulted in a draw of 5-all, one of the runs being disputed to make it 6 to 5.

Miss McCannan generously provided music at the piano for an impromptu dance, which wound up the event, so very enjoyable all through, about ten oclock.

Mr. Pitchford and Mr. Gerrard moved a vote of thanks to those officers who had charge of the arrangements, which were carried amid hearty applause.

Several members of the Session and Board of Managers were present and took an active part in hc picnic.

STRONG BUT LIGHT

One Man Can Pull Craft Ashore — Meets with Great Favor

Peterborough-made boats have been brought to the forefront in Canada and the United States lately by a new type of boat which is being built by the Peterborough Canoe Company.

This new boat is 16 feet long, concave in shape and has a V-shaped bottom. It will carry six people, and is so built that a Johnson motor may be attached to the back. A speed of 15 miles an hour may be obtained when this motor is used in this special type of boat, and averages from 12 to 15 miles, according to the load. The total combined weight of the boat and motor does not exceed 350 pounds, which allows a person to pull his boat up on the bank at night as he does with a skiff and take the engine out and carry it to his cottage.

Several other types of boats have been tried with this engine, but it remained to the Peterborough Canoe Company to build a type that was strong enough for this motor and yet not too heavy for one man to handle. The boat was shown at the New York Motor Boat Show, and since then many orders have come in from the United States.

This boat along with the Peterborough canoe is in great demand up in Northern Ontario on the road into Red Lake Gold Fields. One boat route is by Quibell, and there are 14 portages on the way in, six being between Quibell and the English River; one of these is two and a half miles long, and is equipped with a team of horses and wagon to transport canoes and supplies. The boat route this way is about 25 miles shorter than by Hudson. On the Quibell route many Peterborough boats and canoes are being used.

NOT BARNARDO BOY

MUCH TIME TO ACCOMPLISH TRICK

Four years spent in hard work mastering one difficult trick!

That was the triumphant achievement of May Wirth, somersaulting equestrienne of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey circus, who accomplishes the phenomenal feat of leaping from the ground to the bare back of her flying steed, with her feet encased in 18-inch baskets. And then, standing erect, the little rider maintained her poise, still basket-bound, while her horse gallops as fast as he can go.

It was a matter of professional conscience, as well as personal pride, that impelled Miss Wirth to accomplish this feat. She simply made up her mind to do it and she stuck stubbornly until she succeeded. In the same spirit, a virtuoso like Paderewski or an inventor like Edison attains the seemingly impossible.

It is but natural that May Wirth should have risen to fame as the supreme equestrienne of the day. By descent she belongs to the royal race of the sawdust arena. He father was a famous rider, her maternal grandfather was one of the first bareback riders, and her great-uncle lived to hold the monopoly of the circus in Australia for half a century. Kinsfolks and connections of the Wirth family are still flourishing in the Antipodes.

There are more than seventy expert equestrians with "the greatest show on earth" this season. Native-born and European riders who have perfected their art to the highest degree will be found enrolled on the circus roster. The Rieffenach Sisters, the Ernestos, the Wirth Family, Madame Ella Bradna, the Clarks, Mitzis, Mardos and Christiansens are among the international celebrities that will be seen here next Friday, June 25th.

RAYBESTOS WIN BY CLOSE SCORE

Take Opener of Series for City Intermediate Title by Score of 4 to 2.

WON IN FIRST

Three soft runs in the first frame gave Raybestos a lead that Crescents failed to overcome in the opening game of the city Intermediate series at Exhibition Park last evening, the brakeliners finishing in front by a score of four to two. Leftfielder Hargrove's lack of proper footgear handicapped him in fielding two flies to left and the clouts going as doubles, sent three tallies across. Crescents made it a hot battle by scoring a brace of counters in the third, a double play, with a close decision at third which went against the Crescents stopping the rally. Lew LeBarr's drooping hit into right, Marchen's error and Rogers' drive into left which bounded away from Hargrove, gave Raybestos another run in the fifth, and the game.

Both Casey Masterson and Carl Wood were unsteady, but their support helped them through. The infielding was fast, particularly from third base and short. Altogether, the contest had many features to commend it to the large crowd of fans and the series will be followed with interest.

Joe Jones leading off for Crescents drew a pass and stole his way to third while the side was being retired on strikeouts, the only break being another pass to Ranger.

Cameron, for Raybestos, lined out to Ranger. LeBarr walked and Rogers' poke to left went for a double. Moore skied to Hall and Oscar Nicholls waited and walked. Delahaye poled a long fly between left and centre, Hargrove coming in under the ball and all three runners scored. McIntyre fanned.

With one gone in the second Masterson singled over short and watched Rishea and Hargrove strikeout. A double play following an attempted bunt by Wood stopped Raybestos.

Jones flew out to Rogers in the third. Hall walked and stole. Scully singled into right and Ranger planted another in the same place to score Hall and Scully. Marchen rolled to the pitcher who threw to first and LeBarr pegged to third to get Ranger for a double killing.

LeBarr and Rogers fanned in the Fays' half and Moore got on with the help of Marchen's error was caught on the runway, following Nicholls' grounder.

With one gone in the fourth Wood started trouble for himself by allowing Masterson's fly above the box fall to the ground. Rishea sacrificed, and a wide peg by Le LeBarr allowed Masterson to reach third. Hargrove walked. A nice fielding play by Cameron retired the side.

Delahaye grounded out, McIntyre popped to Scully, Nicholls walked and stole, and Wood fanned for Raybestos.

The fifth saw Crescents retired in order. Hall missed three, Scully flew out to O. Nicholls and Ranger grounded out via Moore.

LeBarr's single to right, Hall's error, and Rogers' double gave Raybestos a run with one gone. Hall threw neatly to third to get Rogers' off Moore's grounder and with O. Nicholls batting, Rishea's throw copped Moore at third.

Jack McDonough after a pass in the sixth stole his way to third but nobody could bring him home, Masterson popping and Rishea fanning.

Raybestos were disposed of in the sixth, McIntyre managing to punch a sharp single through the box that was wasted.

Hargrove started the final frame for Crescents by fanning. Jones singled to left and made his way to third where he watched Hall take the count of three and Scully pop out to Cameron.

POST OFFICE WIN FROM BRINTONS

Many Errors Caused by Lack of Judgment and Inexperience.

Last night in one of the most open games of the season the Post Office team beat the Brintons 14-7. The first part of the game was very close but the playing was lifeless and many errors were caused by lack of judgement and inexperience in base running. Both pitchers twirled a wonderful game and deserved better support than they received, especially the losing pitcher.

The line up:

Post Office— Dobson, Fallin, White, Ross, Graham, Baker, Le-Gros Cooke and Nicholls.

Brintons—Corbett, Murray, Anderson, Cripps, Hatton, Lackey, Piercey Borrell and Bishop.

JUBILEE TENNIS TOURNAMENT AMERICAN CHAMPIONS BEATEN

Vincent Richards and Mary Browne Both Fall Before the French Opponents—Brilliant Playing in the Men's Games.

HUNGARIAN BA RON DEFEATED

WIMBLEDON, England, June 23.—(Canadian Press).—The jubilee tennis tournament has virtually a fortnight more to run, but the short two days it has already gone have seen the trans-Atlantic chances of winning either singles events whittled down to a rather slim basis.

The worst blow came late yesterday when Vincent Richards, the leading entrant from the United States for men's honors, again fall a victim to the French champion, Henri Cochet, although making a much harder fight of it than in the recent Paris hard court matches.

Another reverse which had been taken for granted came with the defeat of Miss Mary K. Browne at the hands of Suzanne Lenglen, thus putting the leading United States woman out of the running in the very first round.

The match between Richards and Cochet was highly exciting and replete with brilliant tennis. The United States star went into the game the favorite, despite his recent defeat on the French courts by Cochet, but his powerful backhand strokes, which time and again snatched him from deefat, were not strong enough to carry him over his obviously weak service. Cochet won after a terrific battle, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-2.

Seldom did Richards get over his first ball, and often he netted Cochet's return of his second. The Frenchman's game was much more perfect. His service was steady and his deep court volleying accurate and effetive. Wimbledon enthusiasts last night declared that there would not be another singles match this year in which beter tennis will be exhibited.

Of all the sets, the third was the most bitterly fought out, one game going to deuce eight times.

Alhough the Richards-Cochet match was much more crucial so far as the ultimate effect in the tourney was concerned, the Lenglen-Browne affair was decidedly more picturesque. It found the dashing Suzanne much on the offensive at certain points, and forced her to exert herself to such an extent that she peeled off her jumper and danced about on tiptoe, obviously concerned, especially after she had failed to intercept some of Miss Brown's drives.

Several of these were as hard as were ever seen on the Wimbledon courts from a woman's racquet.

So determined was Miss Browne's attack that she succeeded in winning not less than five games in two sets, which is just the number Suzanne had scored against her in the entire Wimbledon tournament last year. The match ended 6-2, 6-3. All told, Miss Browne scored 41 points against the champion.

Howard Kinsey, the sole remaining United States contestant in the men's singles, played exceedingly fast against the British internationalist, J. B. Gilbert, whom he defeated in straight sets, 6-1, 6-1, 6-4.

One of the upsets of the day's play was the victory of the British Davis Cup contender, O. G. N. Turnbull, over the brilliant but erratic Hungarian, Baron Von Kehrling, whom some had looked for to cut a considerable figure in the late stages of the tournament. The score was 6-2, 7-5, 6-3.

COMMISSION SAYS HARRY WILLS FIRST

Rejected Tex Rickard's Proposed Dempsey-Tunney Fight in September.

NEW YORK, June 23.—(Canadian Press).—Tex Rickard deposited his boxing orphan, the proposed Dempsey Tunney heavyweight match of the doorstep of the State Athletic Commission yesterday, but it was promptly turned out.

By a vote of two to one, the fistic fathers formally rejected Rickard's application to stage a title bout between Dempesy and Tunney at the Yankee Stadium on September 16, after the promoter had offered to post on the spot a $50,000 forfeit guaranteeing that the winner would box Harry Wills.

Chairman James A. Farley was joined by Commisioner George A. Brower in vetoing Rickard's proposal and making it clear that Dempsey must fight Wills, the negro challenger, before meeting any other opponent in this state.

Thus the expected showdown in the heavyweight situation produced another stalemate, for Rickard, equally as unyielding as the comission, declared flatly that he would not stage a Wills-Dempsey contest this year, that he was bound by iron-clad agreements to go through with a Dempsey-Tunney match first and was prepared to stage it elsewhere, presumably Boyle's Thirty Acres in Jersey City, if denied the right to put it on in New York City.

SPORTS DAY HELD

FRASERVILLE, June 23.—A very enjoyable time was spent on Saturday afternoon on the grounds of S.S. No. 5, South Monaghan. The pupils of Cedar Calley, S.S. No. 12, Cavan, engaged in a friendly game of softball with those of S.S. No. 5, with a resulting score of 31-7 in favor of the visiting team.

Score:

Cedar Valley	1	1	2	4	3	3	0	2	2	4—31
S. S. No. 5	1	0	0	2	2	0	1	0	1	—7

JOHN DUNCAN DUNN—BAD LIE BUNKER SHOT.

In the bunker shot, particularly where you play a real one from a bad lie and with a bank to be played over, where the ball must rise rapidly, see to it that the stance is absolutely secure, with both feet planted firmly, having been worked into the sand, if necessary.

To play the real bunker shot, stand behind the ball, which should be in line with the left toe: the right foot may even be forward a little, giving an open stance. Any insecurity may not be detected until the swing is in progress, and then will be fatal.

In the bunker shot grip the club firmly, in fact this shot and that of playing out of high grass are the only ones where you hold tightly onto the club. But do not let it be in an unyielding manner in the bunker shot, as you must allow for play in the wrist, to raise the ball at the moment of impact.

That the heel of the club may get well under the ball, keep the hands low and lay the face of the club back more, particularly if you are close to the bank.

If you are too close to the bank, do not try to play out straight toward the hole Play obliquely,remembering that the main idea when you are in a bunker is to get out.

Diamond Disputes Decided

By BILLY EVANS

Is it possible to make a double play when two runners pull up on the same base there being no force play?

A double play is possible, only through dumb baserunning.

When two players are on the same bag, and there is no force, the bag always belongs to the original occupant. By touching the player who advanced to the bag, with the ball, it is possible to retire him. If the player entitled to the bag holds his base, as he should, it is impossible to get more than one man on the play.

Often the original occupant, believing he is forced, walks off the base after the other player has been properly retired. It is then possible to complete a double play by touching said player with the ball while off the base.

This play is unusual, yet only a few weeks ago it happened in a major league game.

Half a million fishing licenses are issued to California fishermen every year.

SECRETS of STARS on INSIDE BASEBALL

as told to BILLY EVANS

BY "STUFFY" McINNIS.

To me the most difficult play for a right-handed first baseman to make is handling a ball that is thrown directly into a fast approaching runner. This is particularly true on all such plays made by a third baseman.

A right-handed first baseman can make this play properly in only one way, handling the ball in the gloved hand.

It is the most dangerous play in baseball for a right-handed first baseman, since he usually must so stretch the left arm that it is the first part of his body that is hit by the speeding batsman. A broken arm is always a grave danger.

There is also a danger of serious injury to other parts of the body, since the first baseman is a perfect target for the runner. The fielder has no opportunity to try to protect himself. His sole thought is to execute the play. The base-runner, on the other hand, can adjust his stride to suit conditions. He is like a football player making an open-field run.

This play makes it necessary for a right-handed first baseman to become very proficient in the handling of thrown balls in the gloved hand.

On all balls hit to the infield, the first baseman should first run to the bag, forgetting entirely the course of the ball. If you try to follow the ball as you run in the direction of the bag there is always a chance that you will stumble over it, make yourself ridiculous and invariably lose the play.

TRIPLE LINK CLUB DEFEATS DE LAVAL

Well Played Game Is Decided by Odd Run—Many Errors

Last night the De Laval suffered their third loss of the season by one run. They were defeated by the Triple Link, 11-10. Frick knocked a home run, and the game as a whole was well played. The De Laval made more errors, which accounts for them losing the game, as they got more hits than the Triple Link.

The line-up:

Triple Link — Pacey, Miller, Monroe, Barrie, Grant, Butcher, Constable, Fair and Crowe.

De Laval — Galbraith, Miller, Frick, Williamson, Kennedy, Ham, Sturgeon, Cooper and Simmons.

Moviegraphs

HOLLYWOOD, June 23.—Richard Talmadge, 28, performer of dangerous film stunts and reckoned an ace among daredevils, is probably the most cautious man in movies. Courageous he is, but never reckless. And the risks taken by the average man who faces even minor perils with bravado make him squirm.

Dare-deviling" for pictures is purely a business matter with Talmadge, a profession of physical mechanics almost as precise in its technique as the engineer's.

As a boy he would occasionally take a dare, something that called for impromptu action with fate as the umpire. But when he took up life-risking as a livelihood, mere nerve was not to be trusted.

The breath-catching stunt at which the beholder marvels or shudders—the leap he may finish in a second—may have taken Talmadge a week of most careful and minute calculation.

Talmadge knows the sickening crack of bones, the pain of torn muscles, even the usually fatal smash of a broken neck. The stunt star has suffered 23 fractures.

He has broken both wrists, an ankle, the collarbone four times, six ribs, fingers on both hands, toes, elbow, and the neck vertebrae which threatened to paralyze him for life.

His most spectacular stunt was a leap, five stories high, from a Los Angeles hotel to a mattress on an adjoining building, landing on his shoulders and rolling to his feet in the fashion known as the dry dive.

This leap was made to test and restore his dubious courage after the dive into a speeding auto which broke his neck. Talmadge says he had to regain his nerve by doing something he feared to do, or give up his profession.

Another spectacular feat was a leap of 72 feet from a cliff into a sand bank. Jumps of 30 to 40 feet are a commonplace to him. Since snapping his neck a year and a half ago, every stunt has been the more hazardous because of the possibility that the once fractured vertebrae may give way.

But once he has mapped out his action, calculating every known factor, he feels that chances of serious accidents are very slight. And unless he is thus assured, he will not undertake it. That would be plain foolhardiness, with which Talmadge has no patience.

Men with wooden legs have made fine records as athletes. A man with two wooden legs walked a mile in 13 1-2 minutes. Another, with an artificial limb, broke a record with a high jump of 5 feet 7 inches.

Southend Boys Blow in the Last Two Innings to Lose Game

FINAL SCORE 6-5

KEENE, June 23.—Keene again defeated Cognawagas last night to the score of six to five after a rally in the sixth and seventh innings. Up until the sixth inning Weese, pitching for Cogs, had held Keene to one run, while they had collected five, four of these coming in the third inning, after the side should have been retired. Keene's win was costly, as they lost the services of their good third baseman, H. Renwick. He got badly spiked on the hand in the second inning while making a play at third, but pluckily continued. In the third inning he was sliding into third and turned his ankle and had to be carried off the field. M. Robertson pitched well for Keene, while his battery mate, Clarence Robertson, handled him in great style. The Keene infield played good ball in all but the third innings, while Cogs blew up in the seventh inning and Keene scored three runs, the tying and winning runs on wild pitches.

The line-up:

Cognawages—J. Wilson, ss; H. Smith, rf; A. Rooke, 1b; J. Billingsley, lf; Graham, 3b; Mahood, c; Cripps, cf; Weese, p; Crary, 2b.

MAYOR W. T. HOLLOWAY PRESIDES OVER NEW CHAMBER OF COMMERCE TO DEVELOP EASTERN ONTARIO

Lately Constituted Body Considers Local and National Problems

PETERBORO 1927

Good Representation from Cities and Towns of the District

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

BELLEVILLE, June 23. — The ambitions and aspirations of Eastern Ontario were enunciated and quickened, if not regenerated, yesterday, with the organization in this city of the Eastern Ontario Chamber of Commerce, of which Mayor W. T. Holloway was elected as the charter president and Mr. J. O. Herity, of Belleville, secretary-treasurer.

A score of the cities and towns banded themselves together in a spirit of solid,cautious enthusiasm for the promotion of their common welfare, and with a spontaneity born of their apparent and pressing needs, and focussed more clearly than ever upon their broadening opportunities, some of them too long dormant or neglected.

A pervasive and palpable spirit of unity—all for one and one for all—of fellowship and goodwill, guided this inaugural convention through a long and active, and fruitful, day to a felicitous adjournment. It was a most encouraging launching forth upon a common but belated enterprise, auspicious in its beginning and full of promise and potential achievement in its scope and programme.

Yesterday's chief accomplishment was the organization of the Eastern Ontario Chamber of Commerce. The machinery, so to speak, was assembled, adjusted, lubricated and started. And it was given a very definite and important work to do. If Mayor Holloway and his executive were highly honored, and most assuredly they were, in the same gesture they were highly obligated. They are charged with the responsibility of planning and carrying out the details of the problems and trusts that were of necessity, only sketched during Tuesday's meeting. And upon the outcome of this first year's efforts will no doubt depend, at least to some extent, the permanence of the association, its energy and its self-confidence.

The concluding felicitations at the close of the afternoon were for Belleville and its Chamber of Commerce, of which the modest, genial and obliging "Charlie" Hanna, ex-M.P., is president. Belleville yesterday deserved well of Eastern Ontario and richly merited the individual compliments of the visitors and the Board's first official vote of thanks. Their Chamber of Commerce sponsored the convention, and must have sensed its need and timeliness, judging by the surprisingly large attendance and the other evidences of responsiveness. The arrangements were simple and efficient, with a cordiality in the reception and entertainment that was at once an augury and an invocation.

To Mr. Hanna, Mr. Herity, to Mayor R. J. E. Graham and others of the local Chamber of Commerce, the thansk and congratulations of the new sectional Board of Trade were tendered with an unexpressed hope that this association will flourish in numbers, service and achievement.

The Municipalities.

The municipalities represented were Lindsay, Peterboro, Havelock, Tweed, Smith's Falls, Renfrew, Hastings, Campbellford, Stirling, Belleville, Frankford, Lakefield, Oshawa, Bowmanville, Otttawa, Deseronto, Brockville, Kingston, Napanee.

The delegates exceeded one hundred, some of them being as follows: Peterboro: Mayor Holloway, C. H. Ackerman, W. J. Hancock, S. R. Armstrong, G. A. Gillespie, James Dutton, F. G. Stinson.

Stirling—G. H. Luery, town clerk, Jetty Thompson.

Lindsay—W. G. Graham, president Board of Trade; W. J. Carlisle.

Hastings—A. Wilson, town clerk; Walter Fowlds, ex-Warden.

Tweed—S. B. Rollins, reeve; F. H. Cotton, S. G. Way.

Lakefield—J. F. Lillicrap, president of Board of Trade; A. B. Burrows, secretary of Board of Trade.

Oshawa—Mayor R. B. Preston; F. L. Mason, ex-mayor; Fred Hare, city clerk; A. F. Hind, police magistrate, E. A. Lavelle, President Board of Trade; A. G. Stone, Clifford Harman, A. D. Branscombe.

Campbellford — G. A. Kingston, mayor; C. H. Palliser, deputy-reeve; Councillors W. S. Wiggins, J. N. Stone, J. O'Sullivan, W. J. Abernethy.

Ottawa — Mayor J. Balharrie; Controller Chas. Tulley, Aldermen W. R. Low, A. Belanger.

Renfrew—J. L. Murray, C. McD. Logan, D. B. McLaren, Hugh Macdonald, C. O. Thacker, J. H. Roberts, Wm. Dean, W. P. Derham.

Frankford—H. J. Madill, councillor; J. B. Ford, G. W. Spencer.

Executive Committee

The following executive committee was appointed: E. C. Metcalf, Deseronto; W. T. Holloway, Peterboro; W. G. Graham, Lindsay; J. W. Robinson, Napanee; T. G. Bishop, Kingston; F. L. Mason, Oshawa; Dr. W. B. Reynolds, Brockville; Walter Fowlds, Hastings; Dr. J. A. Anderson, Smith's Falls; J. L. Murray, Renfrew; A. H. Acres of Carleton county.

The officers elected were: President, Mayor Holloway; Secretary-treasurer, J. O. Herrity, Belleville; Vice Presidents, E. C. Metcalfe, T. G. Bishop, J. L. Murray and one other to be appointed.

Mayor Holloway thanked the delegates for honoring him. "We are coming together to promote goodwill in Eastern Ontario and to assist each other in forwarding anything in the interest of Eastern Ontario. Peterboro Council is behind such movements as this. All our members would have been here had it not been for the demands of business. We feel the municipalities should co-operate as they have been doing in western Ontario."

To Peterboro Next

Peterboro was chosen for next year's convention. Other invitations were from Ottawa, Smith's Falls and Oshawa, and the final choice narrowed down to Ottawa and Peterboro.

Resolution Withdrawn

A resolution from Stirling asking the Government to build a provincial highway from Foxboro in Hastings county to Peterboro, linking Stirling, Campbellford, Hastings, Norwood and other municipalities in the district was withdrawn under pressure that it was a local question and not broad enough for a convention subject. Substituted for it was a motion by Mayor Graham of Belleville that the Government of Ontario be urged to construct further provincial highways as are needed to serve eastern and north eastern sections of the province and to carry out such other action as is needed to improve the highways in eastern Ontario.

Mr. McGuire of Stirling said that this section of the province is behind the western section not only in power but also in its highway development.

Mayor Graham of Belleville suggested that a highway was needed across the province through Peterboro toward Smith's Falls.

"I think we should oppose any more highways,' Warden Curtis of Havelock remarked. " A good country road will suit our purpose and the taxes will be from 50 to 75 per cent. less.

James, Dutton of Peterborough suggested that more roads should be kept open during the winter.

Hydro Resolution.

The main resolution on electric power was moved by G. H. Harper of Deseronto that a committee be appointed to take up with the Hydro-Electric Power Commission the question of having sufficient power retained for Eastern Ontario to meet present and prospective requirements until the St. Lawrence is harnessed, and that power rates conform with those in Western Ontario.

The committee will be the Council of the Board supported by a large deputation from the various municipalities in the East.

F. L. Mason Oshawa, said the Government should write off the $2,000,000 difference between the purchase price and the appraised value of the Central Ontario power system at the time it was bought.

S. R. Armstrong, Peterborough, reminded the delegates of the essention difference between the Eastern and Wstern Ontario power systems In the West, the municipalities directly own the power development and transmission system; in the East the Province of Ontario owns both. Mr. Armstrong said that in a few years the West will have its transmission system paid for, and their rates will drop,and later they will complete paying for their development systems.

Delegates discussed the Hydro purchase of power from the Gatineau stating that it was intended for Toronto and Western Ontario, although there had been a recent assurance that the East would be supplied from the Quebec block.

Advertising the East.

Plans for advertising Eastern Ontario will be authorized by the executive, especially the appeal for a special fund. The $5 membership fee authorized by the constitution will barely cover the ordinary expenses of the Board.

Chicago Diversion.

Mayor Graham and Chas. Hanna, Belleville, moved that this convention express its hearty appreciation of the efforts that have been made by the Dominion Government, Provincial Government of Ontario and the Hydro-Electric Commission to make effective protest against the unwarranted diversion of water from the Great Lakes by the City of Chicago. Carried.

Mail Order Houses.

"We would be asking the Government for legislation for a particular class," said Walter Fowlds of Hastings in criticism of a Stirling resolution proposing that mail order houses be required to pay a tax or license in every municipality in which they secured business. "I am a merchant myself, and from a personal standpoint, I am in favour of this idea, but the farmers would be opposed to it, and it would be said that such a law would only be for the benefit of merchants."

G. H. Leury of Stirling, who moved the resolution seconded by Jetty Thompson also of Stirling, said there were nearly 150,000 merchants in this country whose business aggregatied four billions annually. The merchants maintained the small towns, and the small towns were rural community centres. The mail order houses paid no local taxes, nor made any contribution to the local municipalities.

The resolution was referred to the executive for further consideration.

A Campbellford resolution by Mayor Kingston, seconded by Deputy-Reeve Palliser, sought a better C. N. R. service between Belleville and Peterborough, preferably by using gasoline-electric cars.

Jamieson Borie of Belleville, remarked that this was purely a local problem and not of concern to the general body of the convention.

Mayor Kingston admitted that the resolution might be a little too local, but he contended that the district of about 50,000 should have better train connections than those now provided.

S. G. Way of Tweed said this resolution should be taken up by the immediate municipalities and district effected.

John Elliott of Belleville advised that Peterborough, Campbellford, Belleville consult together, draft a petition to the C. N. R. and submit it to the Eastern Ontario Board of Trade's Executive for the Association's endorsation. His motion seconded by WalterFowlds was adopted.

Reforestation.

J. FC. Lillicrap of Lakefield advocated a broad extension of reforestation as faciltated by the Ontario Government. This was the tenor of his resolution although it was amended. Not only should Eastern Ontario approve of the Government policy, but should also endeavour to stimulate the interest of all the county councils in this part of the Province in reforestation available land.

Walter Fowlds told of the success of the experiment in Northumberland County, which he said, could be emulated by the others.

Mayor Graham of Belleville, moved seconded by A. S. McLeese of Oshawa, that the Counties be urged to adopt the Provincial Government's scheme of reforestation. The motion carried unanimously.

The vote of thanks to Belleville Chamber of Commerce was moved by A. E. Lovell, Oshawa, seconded by Mr. Lillicrap of Lakefield.

THEATRE AT THE CAPITOL

"MIKE", COMING.

Famous Director Writes His Third Original for Screen.. Players Include Sally O'Neill, Charlie Murray, W. Haines and Ford Sterling.

"Mike," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture directed by Marshall Neilan, which will be shown at the Capitol Theatre tomorrow for three days, is described as one of the best and most amusing pictures that director has yet turned out in a long career of notable successes. This seems reasonable to assume as the story itself is Neilan's own.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has given this talented director another outstanding cast. Sally O'Neill, a wonderful newcomer; Charlie Murray, Ford Sterling, Muriel Francis Dana, Frankie Darro, Junior Coghlan, William Haines, Sam De Grasse, Ned Sparks and other well known players appear in the picture. Miss O'Neill, who plays the title role, makes her screen debut in "Mike.' She is Neilan's latest discovery and he states that she will develop into a star in a surprisingly short time.

"Mike" is pure entertainment. It abounds in comedy—of the sort that Neilan is noted for. It has a charming love story and there are many moments of intense excitement culminating in breath-taking thrills. But its chief quality is its humor, which runs from subtle wit to broad comedy.

The story deals with the life of the family of a section boss whose division is that part of a transcontinental railroad that crosses the desert. The home of the group is an ingeniously appointed box car.

AT THE REGENT

"FIGHTING EDGE" IS WARNER BROS. LATEST THRILLER.

Kenneth Harlan and Patsy Ruth Miller in Mystery Melodrama.

"The Fighting Edge," the Warner Bros. Classics of the Screen, which is opening to-morrow at the Regent Theatre, is the first of a series of pictures in which Kenneth Harlan and Patsy Ruth Miller are to be co-featured. It is believed that this combination is destined to become as popular as that of the Marie Prevost - Monte Blue and Irene Rich-Huntly Gordon teams.

The story of 'The Fighting Edge' concerns the smuggling of aliens into the United States and its desperate gang of smugglers who are outwitted by one Juan de Dios O'Rourke (Kenneth Harlan). He has been employed by the government to capture the gang and falls in love with pretty Phoebe Joyce (Patsy Ruth Miller). She is ignorant of his mission in the mysterious ranch house where she comes to find her father (W. A. Carroll). They learn that their aim is a common one, to bring the outlaws to justice.

Eric Hagenlacher, the new world's 18.2 balkline billiard champion, trains for an important cue match in much the same manner that a pugilist prepares for a fight. A feature of his training program is daily work to build up his legs and improve his breathing.

WILL LIVE UP TO CENTRAL SCHEDULE

Ponies Will Visit Peterboro On Morning of July 1st

The Kingston Ponies are going to live up to their schedule obligations and will play in Peterboro on July 1st, announces the Kingston Standard in an article in which it abuses the writer of the Examiner's article on the subject in typical village journal language. The Standard intimates that the Examiner's remarks in regard to the July 1st game shows how little we know of the official business of the C.O.B.L.

As a matter of fact, on the day before the Examiner called attention to Kingston's actions in regard to the schedule, the Standard announced that the Ponies had arranged exhibition games with an amateur team from over the border for July 2 and 3, and that on that account the Dominion Day game in Peterboro would have to be postponed.

The complaint that the Ponies having objected to the original schedule and necessitated a change that should have brought them here on Saturday last, scrapped that arrangement for an exhibition game, and would have left Peterboro without a home game for nearly four weeks if Belleville had not stepped into the breach and played here on Saturday has not yet been answered.

However, the Kingston club has apparently come to a belated realization of their duty to the Central Ontario League, and will be here on Dominion Day. So the Examiner's review of the situation has accomplished the desired results.

THE STOCK MARKET

Trading in Mines Active But Market Is Featureless

TORONTO, June 23. —(Canadian Press). — Trading was moderately active on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day after a rather dull opening. The market was featureless.

Dome showed strength and closed up ten points at 14.40 after opening unchanged. It touched a high of 14.50. Hollinger opened off five cents but recovered and closed unchanged at 19.75. McIntyre closed 15 cents up at 25.20. Laval Quebec gained one point to 26 1-2. Buckingham was active, closing up 1-4 at 2 1-4. Noranda and Amulet were active in the unlisted, the former being up 15 points at 15.25 and the latter up two at 1.29. Keeley was up three points at 1.43.

Wheat Market Is Easier Due to Favorable Weather

CHICAGO, June 23. —(Canadian Press). — Lack of outside interest, more favorable weather, with a fairly liberal movement of new crop in the south-west, together with weakness in Liverpool, gave the wheat market on this side of the Atlantic an easier undertone during the early trading. Starting 1-4c to 5-8c lower, the market suffered a further decline all round. Trade in corn and oats was limited, corn starting unchanged to 1-2c higher and later scoring a moderate general upturn. Provisions were quiet.

General Selling Occurs On New York Market

NEW YORK, June 23. —(Canadian Press). — Reactionary tendencies became more pronounced in today's stock market due to extensive profit taking in recent strong spots and sporadic bear selling, particularly in the motor group. United States Steel common ruled slightly higher, while Gulf States and Youngstown Sheet and Tube were selling a point or so above yesterday's final quotations by early afternoon. Oils lost ground after an early period of firmness. Motors were sold freely on the theory that price cuts would reduce earnings.

NEW YORK SUMMARY
There are well defined indications that B .and O. is acquiring the Baldwins Phi. plant. This plant is appraised by insiders at figure equal to $175 a share for Baldwin locomotive. Liquidation of Texas Co. stock by the Gate's estate is understood to have been completed. This company is earning as much as Marland and there is no reason why it should not sell as high.

Demand sterling, $4.86 1-8; francs, $2.84; lire, $3.60 1-2.

Barcelona and B.C. Fishing Lead Toronto Trading Today

TORONTO, June 23 (Canadian Press). — Barcelona and British Columbia Fishing were active leaders on the Toronto Stock Exchange toda. Barcelona touched a new high for the present movement and closed at 36 for a net gain of two points.

British Columbia Fishing was active in the trading, but after opening up 3-8 underwent a slump to close at 73 1-2 for a net loss of one point. Bell Telephone was also down one point in very limited trading. C.P.R. was off 5-8, Arnold Common was up 1 1-2, Consumers' Gas Rights was up 8 cents, Noranda was up two cents, while Dome registered an advance of 20 to 14.50, and Hollinger an advance of 10 to 19.70.

1926 IS MOMENTOUS PERIOD IN NORTH-WESTERN QUEBEC'S COPPER-GOLD MINING AREA.
The break-up on the lakes in North-Western Quebec was late this season, but, now that water transportation has opened up, active development is under way at the mines throughout the Quebec area.

In addition to the intense activity at and around the Noranda property active work is also going on at Amulet, where a high-grade discovery has just been reported on their No. 4 area. In the new shaft just put down on this property the most important discovery since May, 1925, has just been made. The new discovery contains values of copper, zinc, silver and gold.

Very little information is yet available on the Waite-Montgomery situation, although known ore reserves are reported to have doubled in value during the past few months.

Aggressive work is being carried on on the Laval-Quebec, and the dip needle survey is reported to have met with considerable success.

On the Area property developments are also said to be of major importance, and details should be forthcoming shortly.

Altogether, the feeling is that 1926 is going to be Quebec's year.

MASONS ATTEND DIVINE SERVICE

Rev. Riddell Preaches Sermon on Value of Masonry.

MILLBROOK, June 23. — J. B. Hall Lodge A. F. and A. M. No. 145 attended Divine worship in Grace Presbyterian Church on Sunday evening, about fifty members parading from the Lodge rooms at 7.15 p.m.

The church was well filled for the service, a number from the Centreville appointment and from other denominations worshipping with the Grace Church congregation for the special occasion. The choir rendered the anthem, "Praise ye the Lord," and Mr. C. Thorndyke sang a solo, "Remember Thy Creator," at the conclusion of the sermon.

The pastor, Rev. J. Riddell, who is himself a member of the Masonic Order, warmly welcomed the visiting brethren in the remarks preliminary to his sermon, choosing no special text for his discourse.

"I wonder what it is comes into a Mason's mind when he visits his mother Lodge?" was an opening question that challenged attention, the speaker specifying three things always allied in his own mind at such a time—his mother country, his mother church and his mother Lodge.

Speaking of our own land, "the melting-pot of the human race," and of the decided influence the foreign population is exerting, led to the query, "Will the pot be consumed in the melting process?" "Oriental competition and customs are crowding us both east and west; what shall the end of these things be? Remember at the present time we are laying foundations for posterity; are we passing on as goodly a heritage as we received from our forefathers?"

Because of its universal character, extending as it does through practically all the nations of the world, Masonry occupies a unique position and the extent to which its members live up to the great principles upon which it is established will have a decided influence upon the progress of Canada. It surely has now, and will continue to have, something to do with the unifying of our country.

"Masonry does not pretend to rob a man of his church relationship, or in any way to take the place of the church for either the man, or his family. What then is the great principle which will overcome the difficulties confronting not only European peoples, but those of all the world to-day? John 13, 34, sets the standard: 'A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another as I have loved you, that ye also love one another.' The peculiar thing is it desn't say to love God but that we love one another,' for our love to man will affect our love toward God, and our love toward God will affect our love to man."

"Faith and love will create a moral power in the one whom we desire to influence. On every side there are powers seeping into our lives and seeking to turn us from the path of rectitude; yet if we do not value freedom, loyalty and love we are only worthy that they shall be taken from us. As an Order we have a serious problem to face in connection with the whole of mankind; it will require our best, and we cannot give to those outside the blessings Masonry was intended to inculcate until we begin their practice in our individual hearts, and in our mother Lodge."

The usual votes of thanks were given after the return to the Lodge room, and lunch served before the members from outside points left for home.

COOK IS SHOT IN COLD BLOOD

Former Canadian Officer Believed Dying of His Wound

BANDITS VICTIM

DETROIT, June 23 (Canadian Press).—Earl B. Saunders, said to have been a major in the Canadian Army during the world war, was shot, probably fatally, early to-day during a hold-up of the restaurant where he was employed as a cook. Saunders, in a statement from his hospital cot, said the shooting was without provocation. When three bandits entered the restaurant and ordered him to throw up his hands, he obeyed, he said. One of the bandits placed the muzzle of a revolver at his side, Saunders said, and pulled the trigger.

GLASS WITHSTANDS REVOLVER SHOTS

Three Shots Fired at Range of Twenty Feet Fail to Penetrate

If any of Peterborough's citizens heard the noise of revolver firing from the lower regions of the Police Station, they may again compose themselves, as no tragedy was being enacted.

It was simply Sergeant Wigg of the local police department trying in vain to break with the air of a .38 revolver, what appeared to be an ordinary piece of glass measuring a foot square and seven-eighths of an inch thick.

The sergeant stood about twenty feet from the target and although he registered three times on the piece of glass, the only effect was to crack the class into hairlike lines as a hammer would crack a sheet of ice.

E. H. White, agent for the Perfection Glass Company of Montreal, who manufacture the glass, stated that this particular piece had already been tested with a .32 rifle, a .45 army Colt revolver, in addition to a .22 and a .32 revolver at ranges varying from 8 feet to 18 feet.

Another piece of 10 ounce glass was placed on the floor. Inspector Reid, wielding an automobile crank, came down on it with a force that threatened to penetrate the floor, but the glass survived, a slight blur on its surface being the only evidence of the blow it received.

Another piece, three-eighths of an inch thick, was subjected to the flame of an acetylene torch for a period of twenty-five minutes and it, too, failed to break, the flame merely discoloring the glass and leaving the opposite side in as good shape as ever.

The glass is the invention of James A. Watt, a graduate of the University of Toronto, and a Canadian by birth.

OBITUARY.

JOHN LANCASTER.
The death occurred on Thursday, June 17, at Nicholls Hospital, of John Lancaster, aged 62 years. The deceased, who had been ill for some time, bore all his sufferings with great patience and Christian fortitude. There are left to mourn his loss his sorrowing wife and one son, Harold, also three sisters: Mrs. T. Cardwell of Westwood, Mrs. G. Gummer of Colborne and Mrs. Joseph Humphries of Edmonton; two brothers, George of Asphodel and Thomas of Armstrong, B.C.

The funeral was held on Saturday, leaving his residence at 1 o'clock, and proceeding to Westwood Anglican Church, where service was held, conducted by the Rev. G. J. Bousfield, of St. Luke's Church, and the remains were laid to rest in Westwood cemetery. The flowers were many and beautiful, testifying to the high esteem in which he was held. The pall-bearers were Messrs. John Faux, William Borland, Stephen Elmhurst, Fred Faux, William Elmhurst and Charles Elmhurst.

LONDON, June 23 (Canadian Press).—"I desire to say quite firmly that I will not allow myself to be driven out of the Liberal party," said the Rt. Hon. David Lloyd George, Parliamentary leader of the Liberal party, in an address at a National Liberal Club luncheon in his honor to-day. Mr. Lloyd George, who had a recent controversy with the Earl of Oxford and Asquith, the party's chieftain, said: "There are twelve people who can't work with me, and there are three millions of Liberals who can. I don't seek leadership but I do want service."

Vote Raised By Customs Report Delayed

Sub-Amendment Halts Customs Debate Until Speaker Lemieux Decides Issue Between Labor and Conservative Leaders

Woodsworth Amendment Removes Censure of Government and of Hon. G. H. Boivin — Adds Farrow To List Whose Services Should Be Disposed Of.

MEIGHEN SAYS IT IS ONLY A DEVICE TO PREVENT HOUSE GIVING OPINION

Judicial Commission Suggested To Investigate Administration of Department—Decision on Admissibility of Sub-Amendment To Be Given This Afternoon.

Speaker Lemieux in the House this afternoon ruled that the Woodsworth sub-amendment to the customs report was in order.

This means that the vote will come first on the sub-amendment.

The Speaker's ruling was received with Liberal cheers.

Premier King immediately rose to continue the debate.

The vote is expected late this evening.

OTTAWA, June 24 (Canadian Press)—Nine more hours of debate on the Customs report brought a sub-amendment to the Conservative amendment. The sub-amendment came from J. S. Woodsworth, Labor member from Winnipeg, at the end of a speech which was marked by more stormy scenes than should be witnessed during two days of debate. The effect of Mr. Woodsworth's sub amendment, if adopted, would be to strike out from the Conservative amendment all words following the preamble and to make other amendments to the terms of the Customs report.

Chief among the recommendations of the sub amendment are:

That a judicial commission be appointed to investigate the administration of the Customs department.

That the name of R. R. Farrow, Deputy Minister of Customs, be added to the list of those whose services should be disposed of.

The sub amendment also cuts out censure of Hon. G. H. Boivin, Minister of Customs and of the government.

When the sub-amendment was moved, Mr. Meighen, Conservative leader, raised a point of order. He held that it was not an amendment to the amendment within the meaning of the rules of the House, that it was a new amendment.

"It is only a device to get rid of the amendment," exclaimed Mr. Meighen. "If adopted, it will prevent the house from deciding on the amendment."

Government's View

Hon. Ernest Lapointe, minister of Justice, argued that the sub-amendment was in order. He urged that it presented an alternative to meet the views of those who did not feel able to vote either for the original report or for the Conservative amendment.

Arguments went back and forth between the two sides of the house. Eventually, Speaker Lemieux announced that he would defer his decision until the house meets again at two o'clock this afternoon. A few minutes later the house adjourned.

No time was lost in the House yesterday afternoon in getting into the discussion of the Custom Committee's report. There were no preliminaries at all.

Dougald Donaghy (Liberal), of Vancouver, continued the speech he began Tuesday night. At the outset, he explained lengthily the process whereby ships laden with liquor clear from Atlantic or Pacific ports ostensibly for Mexico or other outside countries, but whose cargoes, it is suspected, either land in the States or get back to Canada.

The provisions of the treaty with the States regarding liquor shipments was also elaborated. The committee, he said, had concluded that the present system whereby liquor-laden ships can clear from Canada to the United States—though the officials of the latter country are supposed to be notified—is not satisfactory. It is proposed to refuse clearances of such cargoes in future with an exception in the case of shipments for medicinal or sacramental purposes.

Strangely "Legal."

Mr. Donaghy went on to discuss the doings of James Cooper for fifteen years selling agent for Hiram Walker's distillery in Walkerville. Cooper lived in Michigan and feared lest he be indicted for conspiracy to violate the United States laws. Therefore, it was arranged that the liquor be shipped from Walkerville to the Dominion Distilleries in Montreal, then returned to the place it came from, and under different auspices sent to the States.

This, it was argued, was not against the law. The sales tax was paid. The law gave full authority for all these transactions. Mr. Donaghy said Government officials and records had been carefully examined to find out if Dominion distilleries dealt with denatured alcohol in accordance with law. It was found that they did. Therefore denatured alcohol was not liable to excise duty. It was quite lawful to export this alcohol to the United States.

Bisaillon Barred.

Concerning the dispute between distilleries generally and the Government, the latter had started test suits to establish whether or not distilleries were liable for sales tax on denatured alcohol which was exported to the States.

At the present time, owing to the possibility of the action by the Attorney-General, Mr. Donaghy said it would be quite improper to express an opinion as to the guilt or other wise of J. E. A. Bisaillon.

Mr. Donaghy next summarized the Lortie-St. George case regarding the theft of two trunks of narcotics valued at $35,000, from the custody of the courts in Montreal, and the adventure of the liquor-laden barge Tremblay. He discussed the charge of Mr. Stevens that Bisaillon, erstwhile chief preventive officer at Montreal, had $69,000 of public funds in his own bank account, stating that this had been wholly disproven.

Met His Waterloo.

Mr. Stevens said that he had charged that either Bisaillon had done this or else, as now appeared, he had perjured himself.

Mr. Donaghy went on to say that whatever the crookedness of the chief preventive officer, he "was careful enough not to steal the moneys of the Dominion of Canada." He next dealt with how Bisaillon had "met his Waterloo." It had been due to the inquiry ordered by Mr. Boivin immediately after taking over the Department. As soon as Inspector Duncan made an interim report to him, Bisaillon was dismissed in December last.

The manipulations of the John W. Gaunt Company, with Customs duty in relation to foreign exchange were next dealt with. Lawyers on the committee, he thought, would agree that no civil action against him could succeed.

The evidence, he held, refuted Mr. Stevens' charge that the country had lost $58,000 in duty through Gaunt's manipulations.

Admits Favoritism.

Mr. Donaghy next started on a review of the Customs Department and the Customs Act from Confederation up to the present day. It had always been the policy not to prosecute smugglers in the courts. The procedure provided by the statute had been to bring these cases before the Minister and Deputy. He considered it unwise and unfair to the Minister to increase importunities upon the head of the Department. Out of that old time statute had grown the abuse of which so much had been heard in the last five months. One Minister of Customs after another had granted favors to members of Parliament. The statute, he argued, should be repealed and offenders under the Customs Act should be sent to the courts of justice rather than to the Minister of Customs.

"Spare No One."

Mr. Donaghy declared that Mr. Boivin had from the moment of taking over his Department, taken every possible step to investigate the activities of Bisaillon. He had borrowed Inspector Walter Duncan from the finance department. In two weeks Bisaillon was fired and Duncan was told to continue his investigations and to "spare no one, no matter how high his rank." It was on the evidence secured by Duncan that the inquiry committee were uncovered by Duncan before the committee was thought of.

Mr. Donaghy said Mr. Stevens had secured information that Duncan had secured for the Minister. Mr. Stevens halted the "charges" long enough to admit that he got lots of it, but not from Duncan himself. Asked why he had not given credit to Mr. Boivin for what he was doing at that time, Mr. Stevens said that the fact was that the Minister was not doing what Mr. Donaghy alleged he had been doing.

The dismissal of Bisaillon was a stage play in answer to his resolutions, said Mr. Stevens.

Was Duncan a Traitor

Mr. Donaghy declared that Duncan's interim report contained "charges." No one should have seen that, yet Mr. Stevens had made the same "charges" in the House. He either got that report or was the best guesser in Canada. If Mr. Stevens knew Mr. Boivin had got that report he was not frank with the House — not giving Boivin credit for what he had done.

There was the chance that Duncan was a traitor. The report, or the contents, had leaked, and had reached Mr. Stevens. His use of it was not fair to the new Minister of Customs, who had been responsible for unearthing the information. Mr. Stevens was actuated more by his desire to unhorse the Government than by the improvement of the Customs Department.

Stevens Howled Down.

Mr. Stevens rose to a point of order in regard to the charge that he had "suppressed truth" and "lacked candor." He was howled down when he tried to state his side.

On Speaker Lemieux ruling Mr. Donaghy withdrew both statements but said that Mr. Stevens' memory was at fault. Mr. Stevens objected again and the Speaker appealed to Mr. Donaghy to maintain the high standard that other speakers had set in this debate.

Mr. Donaghy then asked Mr. Stevens why he had not given to the House all the details on which he based his charges on February 2

Mr. Donaghy thought the "conduct of Mr. Stevens was deserving of some very caustic comment" in respect to his charges that documents had been destroyed. Mr. Stevens suggested that Mr. Donaghy had had over five months to disprove this matter.

Tussle With Stevens.

Hon. Jacques Bureau could have been invited to appear before the committee, said Mr. Donaghy. The editor of the Citizen, of Ottawa, had when he testified, suggested this. It rested with the men who made the charges to do that.

Mr Donaghy declined to allow Mr. Stevens to make answer to that suggestion. He added that a motion in the House could force the Senator to appear before the committee. Mr. Stevens insisted on answering. The answer was very simple and very plain. For a long time the Duncan report was suppressed. It was finally produced in answer to requests of members of the committee and the press.

Report Suppressed.

"A certain portion of it was deliberately suppressed and not read," said Mr. Stevens with vehemence. "It was of an intimate and most unfortunate personal character. It was of a character that would only cast the most serious reflections on the personal character of the former Minister.

"It was the unanimous opinion of the committee that they should not drag out matters of this low type; that we should confine ourselves to matters affecting the public. Hon. Jacques Bureau was not invited to appear because his appearance would have entailed this whole business coming before the public.

"I challenge him now to produce

Tom Moore Tells Congress of Exploitation of Canada By Europeans.

ASKS RESTRICTIONS.

LONDON, June 24 (Canadian Press).—Tom Moore, President of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, was one of the principal speakers at to-day's session of the World Labor Migration Congress. He declared that Europeans had come to Canada in the past, had worked long hours, and had then returned to their homes to spend their earnings. For this reason the Canadian trades unions were opposed to this kind of exploitation.

Mr. Moore urged restriction on the present unregulated influx of immigration.

Reichstag President Plans To Curb Lengthy Speeches

BERLIN, June 24 (United Press).—President Loebe of the Reichstag believes he has found a remedy for the epidemic of yawns among the German Deputies. There is now no limit on the length of speeches, and Loebe suggests that the several hours which some Deputies require to state their views is too long. He would limit speeches to half an hour. He would also permit question and answer conversation between speakers and seated Deputies during the debate.

Many Tourists

The influx of tourists from the United States has been noticeably increased since the opening of the fishing season. Not only are the resorts up the river showing almost capacity registrations, but there are also many campers along the Trent above and below the town. Ohio visitors seem to have been the most numerous thus far, with many week-end motor parties of late. The local hotels are getting a big share of their patronage, and some of the merchants report substantial sales directly due to the summer visitors.

AGRICULTURAL DAY.

Observed By Toronto Kiwanis Club—Professor H. H. Dean Speaks.

TORONTO, June 24 (Canadian Press). — "Agriculture Day" was observed by the Kiwanis Club of Toronto at their regular weekly luncheon yesterday. Professor H. H. Dean of the Ontario Agriculture College, Guelph, was the chief speaker.

"How will we get city men and farmers better acquainted?" the speaker asked. The solution is, more city men should marry farmers' daughters to keep up vigor of the race. The right kind of country girl will help to right city life. There should also be more direct trading between citizens and farmers.

WAHABIS' ATTACK MECCA PILGRIMS

More Than 25 Killed in Skirmish—King Ibn Saude Intervenes.

LONDON, June 24 (United Press).—Reports from Cairo say that 25 to 33 persons were killed and a score were wounded when Wahabi tribesmen attacked the pilgrims carrying the holy carpet to Mecca in the annual Moslem ceremony.

The caravan was returning from Mount Ararat, where the usual sacrifices of the Feast of Bairam had been made, when the trouble broke out with the Wahabis who apparently objected to the playing of the caravan's band. The Egyptian escort of the caravan opened fire. Some women were among the dead. King Ibn Saude of the Wahabis personally intervened to prevent further trouble.

Singing Tailor Let Go Warned To Hire a Hall

NEW YORK, June 24.—(United News).—Max Berman, who has attracted considerable notoriety through his attempts to break into grand opera, received a suspended sentence after being found guilty of disorderly conduct when he promised the Harlem court that he would sing no more in the streets.

Max is known as the "singing tailor." Monday he sang in front of his shop and drew a crowd so large that traffic was blocked.

The unfeeling magistrate ordered him to hire a hall next time.

UNABLE TO FIND KIDNAPPERS OR TRACE OF HOUSE

Troops and Sheriff's Parties Scour Land South of Border.

WOMAN IN HOSPITAL.

Sheriff Says Mrs. McPherson's Clothing Shows No Traces of Desert Travel.

DOUGLAS, Ariz, June 24 (Canadian Press)—The search for the two men and a woman who, Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, the Los Angeles evangelist, says, kidnapped her at Ocean Park, California, on May 18, and held her captive in Mexico until she escaped on Tuesday, was continued through the desolate country south of the international boundary to-day.

Mrs. McPherson, who was born in Ingersoll, Ontario, is in hospital here, where she was brought yesterday morning.

Yesterday Mexican federal troops and Cochise Country parties searched the country from where Mrs. McPherson said she came, but were unable to find a trace of a house.

Sheriff James F. Macdonald of Cochise Country announced after his return that he had possession of Mrs. McPherson's clothing and shoes, and that they were not damaged when she was taken to the hospital. The country to which she said she wandered all night is rugged and covered with mesquite, cactus and cat's claw. No evidence of having come through the desert wastes appeared on the clothing or shoes of the evangelist, the sheriff said.

At the same time, Chief of Police Percy Bowden and Mayor A. E. Hinton of Douglas expressed their belief that the story told by Mrs. McPherson was correct.

WARFARE FROM AIR IS THORNY PROBLEM

Experts at Geneva Try To Fix Standards For Air Forces.

GENEVA, June 24 (Canadian Press). — The newest kind of warfare, that in and from the air, is proving a thorny problem to the disarmament experts. A special subcommittee on aviation is trying to fix standards whereby the air forces of the different countries may be measured, but the debate indicated there was little chance of reaching unanimity with regard to any one predominant feature. Eventually an agreement was reached by a vote of 11 to 4, with four absentions, to mention the organized personnel of air establishments as one of the standards and also pilots. With Great Britain, United States and Germany voting against it, military experts decided yesterday to exclude the men undergoing instruction, namely, partially trained men from consideration in determining peace time effectives.

ROME, June 24 (United Press).—There was no confirmation from any responsible source to-day of the report that Premier Mussolini was planning to bring about the marriage of his daughter, Edda, to Crown Prince Humbert of Italy.

Edda is a 15-year-old school girl, now being educated in Florence.

The Prince is the third child of the Royal couple, and is 22 years old. His elder sisters, Mafalda and Yolanda, are already married. Reports of the Premier's plans were telegraphed yesterday from Chiazzo.

ROAD BUILDERS CAUSE DAMAGE

Blow Windows Out of House and Knock Down Wires.

KINGSTON, June 24 (Special to The Examiner). — All the windows were blown out of the home of Mr. James Sutherland, Jr., who lives two miles east of Brewer's Mills, yesterday afternoon by a dynamite explosion set by the road contractors, who are constructing the road from Joyceville to Seeley's Bay. Mr. and Mrs. Sutherland were in the stable milking at the time of the explosion and had their six months' old baby with them. They all suffered a severe shock when the blast, which shattered sixteen panes of glass in their home, occurred. Another explosion from a charge set to blow out a tree near Leo Lake Schoolhouse on the same stretch of roadway knocked down all the local and rural telephone lines.

Deacons of Honor to Cardinal Bonzano were Rt. Rev. Mgr. Peter Quealy and Rt. Rev. Mgr. Joseph Schauerman, Belleville, Illinois.

The sermon was by Cardinal Patrick Hayes of New York.

OBITUARY.

J. DAWSON FAIR.

MILLBROOK, June 24. — News of the death of J. Dawson Fair, which sad event took place in Toronto on Wednesday, June 16th, came as a distinct shock not only to his friends, but to the community at large, though it was known that he had been in ill health for some months.

Deceased was born in Millbrook 61 years ago, and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Fair, who were among the early settlers of this locality. His father built and operated the first foundry in Cavan township, erecting the building on his farm east of the village, just beyond what was then a swamp one mile in length; the farm is now owned and occupied by Mr. W. E. Belch.

After moving to Millbrook, Mr. Fair located his foundry above the station, opposite the Hunter homestead, and at that time he employed more men than the original Massey plant at Newcastle.

Losing his mother at his birth deceased was adopted by his aunt, the late Mrs. John Doak, living with her until his marriage, over 30 years ago, to Mrs. Amy VanHomreigh, a niece of the late Mr. Robert Fallis, with whom she made her home.

From young manhood, Mr. Fair was in the hardware business, clerking for some years for his cousin, the late Mr. J. R. Doak, and later being in partnership with Mr. H. W. Johnston.

He was twice married and is survived by his widow, formerly Mrs. Ellen McCrea, Kirkfield. Some few years after their marriage they moved to Toronto where Mr. Fair followed an active business career as continuously as rather frequently recurring illnesses permitted.

Deceased had a life long connection with the Presbyterian church, was a charter member of Millbrook Lodge, I.O.O.F. No. 308, and was also member of J. B. Hall Lodge, A.F. and A. M., No. 145. In politics he was a Conservative.

He was predeceased by his only son, George, who died in early boyhood; and besides his bereaved widow, the immediate surviving relatives include, one daughter, Mrs. (Dr.) Richardson, (Marguerite), of Trenton; a half-sister, Mrs. Margaret Hollister, of Los Angeles, California, who was the daughter of his father's first wife, deceased being the son of the second Mrs. Fair; the late Mr. George Fair's third wife, whose maiden name was Charlotte Windrem, a sister of Mrs. I. E. Needham, died last November at Blaine, Michigan, in her 85th year; of her family of seven children, one son, Milton D., predeceased his mother, those still living being George, of Port Huron; Henry, of Des Moines, Iowa; Alfred, of Blaine, Mich., Mrs. A. D. Spaulding, (Minnie), of Jeddo, Mich.; Mrs. Eva Campbell, of Buffalo, N.Y., and Mrs. Emma Norman of Port Huron.

The late Mr. Fair had a wide circle of friends in this community and was always warmly welcomed on the occasion of a return visit to his native town. Considerable improvement in his health led to the resumption of business relations in recent months, but a sudden attack of heart trouble with attendant complications, ended fatally last week.

The funeral took place on Saturday from the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Eakins, Millbrook, the latter being a first cousin of the deceased, Rev. John Riddle, pastor of Grace Presbyterian Church, having charge of the services at the house and the graveside. The pall-bearers were Messrs. H. Fair, Toronto, H. B. Allen, Dr. A. Jemison, H. R. Armstrong, G. E. Burnham, and H. W. Johnston.

Among the beautiful floral tributes laid in loving memory upon the casket was a wreath from the Oddfellows' Lodge, and also one from the Masonic Order. The large gathering at the house bore testimony to the esteem in which deceased was held, as did also the number who followed the funeral cortege to the Presbyterian cemetery, where interment took place.

Among those from outside points who attended the funeral were Dr. and Mrs. Richardson of Trenton; Mr. Herbert Fair, of Toronto; Mr. Robert Fair and Mr. James Fair of Peterboro; Warden and Mrs. Hawkins of Woodville; Mr. and Mrs. Percy Hill of Lorneville; Mr. and Mrs. John Nesbitt, and Mr. Peter Nesbitt of Campbellford; Mrs. Kerby Weeden, New York City (a sister of Mrs. Fair's) Mr. S. J. Hunter of Toronto, and Mr. Johnston Fair, of Peterborough.

BOBBIE MARTIN

A very sad event occurred near Keene on Thursday, June 17, when Bobbie Martin, adopted son of Mr. and Mrs. Herb Kylie met death through an accident with a gun which he was carrying.

The young man went out in the evening as was his custom to shoot ground hogs; when he did not return at his usual time, Mr. and Mrs. Kylie, becoming anxious, telephoned the neighbours regarding him. As they had seen nothing of him, a party of men set out and Mr. Ralph Adamson discovered the body of the unfortunate young man near the fence not far from his home. It was evident from the position of the gun that it had discharged as he was taking it through the fence.

He was a person of cheery disposition and sterling qualities and will be sincerely missed by both young and old in the community.

The funeral which was held on Sunday afternoon, June 20th, from his home, to the Sacred Heart church, Peterboro, was conducted by Rev. Father McGuire for whom he was altar boy up to the time of his death.

Assisting Father McGuire in the sanctuary were the Reverend Fathers J. J. O'Brien, P. Costello, J. Finn and J. M. Moloney, while singing was rendered by the First Communion class of the Sacred Heart parish. The large cortege filled the spacious edifice and followed the remains to the cemetery where the prayers were said by Rev. Father McGuire assisted by Rev. Fathers J. J. O'Brien, P. Costello and J. Finn.

The bearers were members of the Young People's Club of Keene of which he was a member, namely Messrs. Peter Mather, Earl Dorris, Clarence Robertson, Will Taylor, Charlie Crowley and Eugene McCarthy.

MRS. HUGH McDOUGALL.

The death occurred at 225 Euclid avenue, of Mrs. Phoebe Rebecca McDougall, in her 58th year. Mrs. McDougall was born in Hastings and was a member of St. Luke's church in this city.

She leaves to mourn her loss her sorrowing husband, Hugh McDougall, two daughters, Mrs. Luther of Toronto and Miss Eva at home, three sons, Clarence of Toronto, and William and Frederick at home, three sisters, Mrs. Dingman of Methune township, Mrs. Maybee, of Rochester, and Mrs. Masters of this city, and one brother, Nathaniel Hawley of this city.

The funeral will take place on Friday at 2.00 o'clock to Little Lake cemetery from the family residence, 225 Euclid avenue, with the Rev. G. J. Bousfield officiating.

ANNUAL MEETING WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

Omemee Branch Holds Annual Meeting — Organization Explained

OMEMEE, June 23.—The annual meeting of the Omemee branch of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. J. Widdis on Friday afternoon. This occasion has always taken the form of a picnic, but owing to the chilly atmosphere, the gathering was obliged to remain indoors. After the opening exercises had been conducted by the president, Mrs. A. Sloan, and the secretary's report had been received, the speaker, Mrs. Towriss, of Athens, addressed the meeting.

Before commencing her subject, the speaker explained the organization of the Women's Institute which took place thirty years ago, also told of the help from the Government in sending instructors in sawing, millinery, domestic science, nursing etc. to the various institutes for the asking of same. There is no organization that mixes people together as does Institute work. They, as a body, are composed of several denominations. It is only by working with people that we appreciate the sterling qualities of others, whom we do not really know, each person has a work to do in her own church. The institute stands for the town or country which we are in and as each denomination has its work to do in the church there is room for all the women to assist in the work of the community. Then, too institute work develops women. Oftentimes we don't develop our talents as we might, and by taking part in the meetings we gain confidence in ourselves if we only remember that those around us are sympathetic, and are not criticizing us as we sometimes are led to think. Mrs. Towriss referred briefly to the free courses, which have been of benefit to so many societies and felt that the membership would be increased in this branch, if they would take advantage of them. Although our numbers are small we should not be discouraged, if everything isn't perfect, as our work is just as important as that of a large organization.

The speaker then commenced her addres entitled, "A Swarm of B's" which subject the ladies had previously chosen. The subject sounded ferocious, but it was soon discovered that this particular kind of "B" had no sting.

"Be Good" was the first "B". 'This is the most important B, not only as institute members but as women.' The poem commencing with, "Be good my dear, and let who will be clever," was given. "We cannot all be clever but we can all be good. Goodness is better than greatness and counts more in life. There will be no world peace if the nations are not good. It is only as we follow the teachings of the Bible, and the dictates of the Prince of Peace that nations will be as they ought to be. We should cultivate in our swam "Be good." It is a great essential. The morals of the home are dependent on the women. Be good for something. It is not enough to be passably good and never do wrong. It is better to make a mistake in trying than to sit still. We can each do a work. We have a talent for something. It may be church work, cheer a home, write or visit the sick, but we can be good for something in our own way. Let us not think about ourselves and criticize others but let us help one another along the way and it will brighten not only our own life but the lives of others.

"Be" number two was "Be contented."

Very seldom do we see a happy contented face. There are more lines on people's faces than are necessary. We worry about many trifling things, probably trying to keep up with our neighbors, or some small matter which is not worth the worry. If we have the things that are essential and our several senses we should be contented with our lot. Contentment is not a matter of possessions but a matter of heart. Our needs are really few—our wants are many.

"Be Vigorous" was the third B. In other words "Be healthy." We can cultivate this B. The six best doctors are: sunshine, fresh air, water, rest, exercise and diet. Each of these was briefly dealt with by the speaker and several illustrations given. Be vigorous as we can. Remember there are people who are delicate yet have done a great work in spite of the handicap that they are under.

"Be optimistic" was the next B discussed.

We must expect to have some dark days but a laugh is worth one hundred groans in any market. Let us dwell on the bright side. It is better to build castle in the air than to dig dungeons in the deep. It is so much easier to smile than to grouch. Are we dispensing sunshine or do we shed a gloom over our home? We can make ourselves like things and be thankful for what we have if we but try. Remember someone else is bearing a very heavy burden and saying nothing.

"Be tactful" and "Be patriotic" were among other members of the swarm, which were shown on the chart which Mrs. Towriss had placed before the eyes of all but as the time was limited and the ladies had requested that a few points be given on another subject, "How to have a succesful meeting," the remainder of the swarm were allowed to go unmolested.

A chart bearing the following was hung up:

To have a successful meeting we must COME. —Attendance is the main thing.

How:
Willingly not Wearily.
Expectantly not exactingly.
Attentively not absent-mindedly.
Readily not reluctantly.
An take your part always:
Seriously not solemnly.
Merrily not mournfully.
Intelligently not indifferently.
Loyally not listlessly.
Eagerly not evasively.

It will be noticed that when the initial letter is spelled down the sentence read "Wear A Smile."

Another on the same subject, the initial letters of each spelling "Success" was hung up and was as follows:

What me must put into a meeting:
Strength
Uprightness.
Courage
Calmness.
Enthusiasm
Sacrifice
Self

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to the speaker by Miss Lila Parsons and heartily endorsed by the entire gathering. Mrs. Towriss is an accomplished speaker with a pleasant delivery and her talk was accorded by one and all, as one of the best ever given in Omemee under Institute auspices.

Mrs. R. Smith, the president of the Reaboro branch who was present, spoke a few words of appreciation on the splendid address and briefly referred to the work being carried on in their own branch.

The officers of last year were re-elected as follows: Prsident, Mrs. A. Sloan; first vice-president, Mrs. J. Widdis; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. R. J. Cornwall.

The meeting closed in the usual manner, after which the picnic supper was enjoyed to the fullest.

SUB-AMENDMENT HALTS CUSTOMS DEBATE, ETC.

that complete report and lay it on the table," added Mr. Stevens.

Whole Report Dirty.

"It was your fault as much as that of any one else," said Mr. Donaghy, "that the dirty part was not brought out."

During vociferous Conservative applause it was suggested that the whole report was dirty enough.

Mr. Donaghy said he had been referring to the charge that Government files were removed and documents destroyed.

"Your got your answer," said Mr. Stevens.

After reviewing the circumstances in the case of Abie Weisberg, who was accused of twice trying to corrupt a customs officer to undervalue a trunk of wearing apparel, Mr. Donaghy brought in the connection with that case which W. A. Boys (Conservative, North Simcoe) had in his capacity as a lawyer. During the probe Mr. Boys apeared before the committee and explained his mediation with the Minister of Customs on behalf of the client. Mr. Donaghy said that it was "a most flagrant case."

Mr. Boys asked if it was not true that he had appeared before the committee, had made a full statement and had invited the committee to bring any charge it thought fit against him. If Mr. Donaghy thought his conduct warranted his being named in the customs report, why had he not voted for it?

Unanimous Report

Mr. Donaghy said that he had voted for the report as read, because his first consideration had been that the committee should bring an unanimous report on which action could be taken to better conditions in the country. He had voted for that report in the belief that any other matters effected persons and personalities could be brought up during the present debate.

Mr. Donaghy also reviewed the Moses Aziz case and sought to exonerate Mr. Boivin from any blame in that connection. The business men of Canada, he added, were at this moment wondering "if we are going to carry out the report or sit back and play polities in trying to get' one another."

Mr. Donaghy had not finished speaking when the House took recess for dinner.

Afternoon Sitting

With a few brief sentences, Mr. Donaghy concluded his speech after the dinner recess.

A. J. Doucet (Conservative, Kent, N.B.) declared that the member for Vancouver North (Mr. Donaghy) had spent part of the afternoon defending Mr. Bisaillon, "the man who was dismissed by his own minister."

For debauching the public service, the Prime Minister had appointed Hon. Jacques Bureau to the Senate, stated Mr. Doucet. The Senate was the body which the Premier had announced his intention of reforming.

The Duncan report, continued Mr. Doucet, had only been tabled in the customs committee, after the Progressive member sitting on the probe had intimated his intention of supporting the Conservatives in their request for its production.

Momentous Date

A momentous date in Canada's history, said Mr. Doucet, was the day in 1922 when Hon. Jacques Bureau "caused the preventive service to be removed from Lacolle, thereby making the way of the transgressor much easier in defrauding the treasury of this Dominion." On subsequent occasions anti-smuggling patrols of the R.C.M.P. had been recalled from the Quebec-United States boundary with the same result. Last year Chief Inspector Busby had been removed from the port of Montreal and for him was ubstituted "an incapable and inefficient successor."

The Ministry of Customs had continued in office in Montreal officials whose handling of liquor samples had brought about a public scandal, and compelled Premier King to demand the resignations of two civil service commissioners in Ottawa.

Premier's Interjection.

Premier King: "I did not ask them to tender their resignations; I suggested this they might have to be relieved of their duties pending the time that the matter could be passed passed upon by this House."

Mr. Doucet: "It amounts to the same thing."

The man who was chiefly responsible for the liquor samples scandals, said Mr. Doucet, was the R. P. Clerk, whose application for promotion had been supported by the Department of Customs.

Appointed at 84 Years of Age.

Mr. Doucet added that through political influence a man 84 years old had been appointed chief preventive officer at a border port.

J. G. Robichaud (Lib.-Gloucester), "Name that man! Name him now.'

Mr. Doucet: "I do not think any useful purpose can be served——"

Mr. Robichaud, on a question of privilege, said that it was his constituency that was under discussion, and he demanded that proof be adduced that so old a man had been recommended for that position.

Mr. Doucet still declined to give names.

He remarked that a man 84 years old could not be reasonably sent to go after smugglers after dark. He would go so far as to say that three preventive officers recommended for service in Gloucester were taken to a magistrate to be sworn in by no less a person than the notorious Moses Aziz.

Officer working in Election(?)

Mr. Doucet referred to the appointment of another officer in the month of December, 1925. This man had been appointed, he said, on the recommendation of the member for Lunenburg (William Duff). This man took his instructions from the member and reported to Captain Zinck. When examined as to his work, this officer had stated that during the months of September and October, 1925, he was working in the election.

Motor Patrol.

There was a motor boat patrolling a part of the Maritime coast at a cost of $664 a month to the country, which had, as a member of its crew, a well known rum runner, said Mr. Doucet. This rum-runner had only suspended his business when his schooner had piled up on the shore of Cape Breton —presumably he had decided that the was dangerous, so he transferred the rum-running business to his son, while he was given a post on the motor boat, which was supposed to be on the lookout to catch rum-runners. It was common talk that the motor boat was sometimes used to carry liquor from rum-schooners to this man's son who was still in the rum-running business on shore.

Blames Cabinet.

Mr. Doucet said that Mr. Boivin should not take all the blame for the failure to enforce the customs laws. The blame should be shared by the whole of the Dominion Cabinet. In support of this statement he read a letter from the Social Service Council in Nova Scotia to Premier King dated Jan. 22, 1925, which he said, drew attention to the rum-smuggling conditions in Nova Scotia, and asked that they be looked after. In April of the same year the Prime Minister had replied that this matter was being attended to.

FERGUSON IS STILL RETICENT REGARDING DATE OF ELECTION

Says Public Sentiment Must Dictate Policy on O.T.A.

STAND FEARLESSLY.

Government Shall Not Hide Behind Women's Skirts or the Church.

BAYFIELD, Ont., June 24 (Canadian Press).—The Government is going to canvas public sentiment from one end of the province to the other regarding the Ontario Temperance Act, and when convinced on the proper course to pursue, will submit that course to the people. Premier G. Howard Ferguson made this declaration in addressing upwards of 5,000 people assembled here yesterday under the auspices of the Western Ontario Conservative Association. The Prime Minister made no mention of a date having been decided on for the holding of an election.

He continued regarding the liquor question: "Public sentiment placed the O.T.A. on the statute books. It will stay there if it is the wish of the people. But, if the Government finds after careful consideration that it can make an improvement that is considered to be in the welfare of the people, then it will submit that improvement, and on the issue it will be defeated or re-elected."

Sound Constitution

Premier Ferguson said he had been criticized from many quarters for his stand with regard to plebiscites, but in declining to submit another one he was following, he felt, sound British constitution of representative democratic government.

"We shall face the issue fearlessly and we shall not hide ourselves behind women's skirts, church organizations or any other form of barrage," he declared.

A brief review of the province's agriculture and educational problems and an arraignment of the Liberal party, also formed part of the Prime Minister's speech.

Hon. W. H. Price, provincial treasurer, followed Mr. Ferguson with a brief review of Ontario's financing and Hon. Charles McCrea, Minister of Mines, spoke on the development of Northern Ontario.

MANY TOURISTS

One party of five men left on Tuesday to recross the border with a box of 132 fish all caught within this vicinity and including bass, pickerel and 'lunge. When asked what they intended to do with such a quantity of fish one of them replied—"We've got a lot of friends back home, and these fish will be a good advertisement for Hastings. We want to show them our luck and give them a share of it."

Two of the party had been here last year, and all of them were delighted with their recent holiday.

Ball Game Postponed

A heavy rain Wednesday afternoon caused the postponement of the third ball game of the series between Havelock and Hastings. Havelock have won the two that have been played, the first two weeks ago by 13 to 7, and the second last week by 14-8.

Factory Preparations

Preparations for the removal of the Lavoie Knitting Company from Peterboro are reported all set for action. The Howard stock of furniture bought by Messrs. McDonald and McEachnie has been moved from the Howard store to the new premises on the main street, and the first arrival of the knitting company's plant is expected this week. The Howard building which was bought by the company is now stripped of all signs of the furniture and undertaking business so long carried on by P. M. Howard, and it is understood the occupation by the Lavoie Knitting Company will begin at once.

Mr. Hugh McDonald of the partnership which has taken over the Howard business will remain in Norwood, and Mr. McEachnie, formerly of Marmora will manage the local store the firm operating in both Norwood and Hastings.

Mr. McEachnie's only worry since coming here has been his search for a house. He has secured a temporary location, but the problem he faced indicates that there are few, if any, vacant houses in Hastings.

An Eighteen Pounder Caught in Pigeon River

OMEMEE, June 24.—Fishing in Pigeon River continues to be of the very best, report the local guides, and those who have tried their luck. Many tourists are arriving daily in spite of the cold windy weather, and all are well satisfied with their catch of fine muskies. The largest fish reported to have been landed weighed eighteen pounds, and was caught by an American lady, who had to be assisted by the remainder of the party in the boat to bring her trophy to safety.

Trinity Church Services.

The services in Trinity United Church were in charge of Mr. Jesse Bradford and Mr. W. Staples, of Lindsay, on Sunday last, the pastor having conducted anniversary services at Mount Horeb. An inspiring message was given by these gentlemen at each service, and although the congregations were not as large as usual, a real treat was afforded those who were privileged to attend.

In the report of the golden jubilee of Trinity United Church, the name of Mrs. Amy Mulligan was inadvertently omitted in the list of organists, she having succeeded Mrs. J. J. Lang, and was also an alto singer of the choir of 50 years ago.

Meet Miss Ontario

It's motor picnic weather now!

Do you know Miss Ontario—the alluring beauty of her lakes and streams—the colourful fascination of her woods and farmlands?

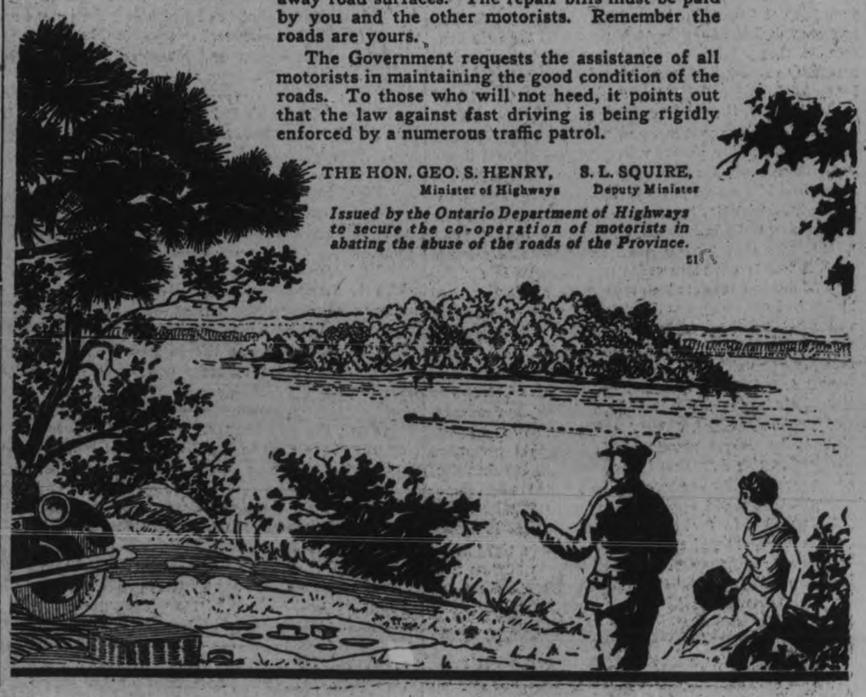
Miss Ontario is all about you — follow any highway and you will see her.

Get acquainted with Miss Ontario at this season. It's motor picnic weather now. Fill your car with a merry party—ask your friends to do the same.

Away from the more travelled highways you'll find many a beauty spot — rocky glens, nodding pines, the flash of cool water over sun-lit pebbles —places where nature comes very close to man.

Drive moderately, both on the main highways and on the county roads. Excessive speed wears away road surfaces. The repair bills must be paid by you and the other motorists. Remember the roads are yours.

The Government requests the assistance of all motorists in maintaining the good condition of the roads. To those who will not heed, it points out that the law against fast driving is being rigidly enforced by a numerous traffic patrol.



THE HON. GEO. S. HENRY, Minister of Highways S. L. SQUIRE, Deputy Minister

Issued by the Ontario Department of Highways to secure the co-operation of motorists in abating the abuse of the roads of the Province.

A DANGER REMOVED.

The Peterboro branch of the Ontario Motor League has furnished another proof of its usefulness to the motoring fraternity by its successful application to the Ontario Department of Highways to have the dangerous curve just south of Bewdley protected.

The league's letter to the Minister of Highways was forwarded to the resident engineer, with the result that a guard rail is to be erected at once at this danger point.

For those who know the conditions at Bewdley and the necessity of being careful in negotiating this curve perhaps the protection was not needed, but with so many tourists entering the Kawartha Lake district by the Port Hope-Peterboro highway it was necessary that the conditions be remedied.

In the case of strangers unacquainted with the situation just south of Bewdley there has always been the risk of a sudden plunge into the waters of Rice Lake through a failure to realize the danger in time.

The Motor League deserves credit for having this very necessary protection provided.

THE MARVELLOUS NORTH.

It is to be hoped that a copy of the recent special edition of the Northern Miner of Cobalt, dealing with the mineral development of the North Country, will reach everybody who is gloomy over Canada's future.

Here are 64 pages devoted to an inspiring story of progress and growth.

The figures quoted by the Northern Miner are astonishing.

Take gold, for example.

The Hollinger mine, which yielded $6,000 worth of gold in 1911, saw a production of $15,749,110.

In the same period the total output of all mines in the Porcupine area rose from $15,437 to $24,887,507.

From 1913 to 1925 the Kirkland Lake mines increased their production from $67,759 to $5,404,652.

Here are figures dealing with the total production of the leading minerals in Ontario that should put new life in the pessimistic.

Gold	$30,207,545
Silver	7,084,864
Nickel	15,946,673
Copper	4,763,990
Cobalt	2,328,517

There is no need to worry about Canada in the face of such records.

A CHANCE TO SAVE.

No feature of the report of the Civil Service Commission has attracted so much editorial comment as that section dealing with the housing of Government departments at Ottawa.

For the condition of affairs in this regard no one Government is particularly to blame; the situation has developed gradually under successive administrations, until the existing decentralization of departments handicaps the work of civil servants and represents a needlessly heavy drain upon the Treasury.

In addition to the 12 main office blocks owned by the Federal Government, there are in use by the Civil Service at Ottawa some 53 buildings, leased in whole or part at an annual gross rental of over $680,000.

This, of course, as the Commission points out, is an expensive method of housing, and the scattering of the buildings and frequently their inability for office use adds tremendously to the cost of the service.

For instance, it is pointed out that the resulting decentralization has led to the creation of separate divisions for stenography, typing, filing, drafting and photography, and at least one department has necessitated the provision of an expensive motor delivery service for files and mail.

The re-organization of the Civil Service accommodation at Ottawa would seem to offer a profitable field for investigation and action.

SELF-PUNISHMENT.

George Hassler Johnston, who started to walk from Chicago to New York, on June 1, and who had pledged his word that no food would pass his lips until he had completed the 1,000-mile hike, cried "quits" yesterday at Summitt, Pennsylvania. He not only had had enough, but altogether too much and the only consolation that is his is that he has established a world's record for walking without food. Another record belongs to Johnston. He has demonstrated that he is, without doubt, the world's champion exponent of dern foolishness. Johnston is, or rather was, a physical culture director. By proper exercises and correct living habits he had made of his body a beautiful temple. It had taken him many years to build up his remarkable physique. And then, by his self-imposed fast and stamina-sapping walking tour, he, in a little more than three weeks, tore that temple down again, brick by brick, until it was in complete collapse. For what? Publicity! Johnston rendered no service to medical science by his body-punishing tour. The only thing he proved was what has been quite evident for a long time—that the United States is fertile soil for the development of extremists. Many men had gone without food for 30 days. Other men had walked from Chicago to New York in a month. Nobody, however, has refrained from food while walking 1,000 miles and it was the urge to be unique among his fellows that prompted George Hassler Johnston to start out on his senseless undertaking. We suppose he had a bet with somebody that he could do it. The George Hassler Johnstons engaged in fool stunts usually do and if he did have a wager it will serve him bally well right if he has to pay it. There are a lot of laws to protect man from his fellows; but the crying need continues to be for legislation that will protect man from himself.—Hamilton Spectator.

Nelson's historic motto might be revised to read, "Canada expects this day that every man will pay his duty."—Border Cities Star.

COMPLETING THE CANAL.

Support for the completion of the Trent Canal is kindly offered by the Kingston Whig, which deals with the question as follows:

"The Trent Canal stretches far back into Central Ontario, but is not equipped and completed as it should be. The Governments, of this and of previous days, have not been friendly; they have recognized the plant was there and the only money required to be spent was that to maintain the properties in safe condition. The Rideau Canal is treated in the same way. Both the canals if made first class could handle lots of freight and passengers that now are handled otherwise. If the people living along the canals were to assert themselves, put men in Parliament to push their claims for canal service it could be secured rather than simply enough expenditure to keep the existing structures in repair and that repair of a very mediocre character. The canals should be made thoroughly efficient or else the waste of money cease and the canals filled up and turned to other profitable uses."

Our Kingston contemporary is right in its argument that the people living along the canal must assert themselves.

The Examiner called attention not long ago to the attitude adopted by the House of Commons toward the Trent Canal, and pointed out, as the Whig does in the article quoted herewith, that if the canal is to be completed the communities situated along the waterways must increase their pressure on the powers that be.

Spasmodic action will not be enough.

It will be necessary to keep everlastingly at it until Ottawa realizes not only that the canal should be completed but that everybody in this section of Canada wants it completed.

TOO MUCH LEGISLATION.

The people of Canada, surfeited by legislation, would welcome a decrease in this branch of the country's business, as proposed by Governor Smith of New York State. In a recent statement he said:

"I propose that in the first year of the Governor's term the Legislature have full latitude and he shall present his policies and promises and the general amendments to the statute and Constitutional law be in order that year, but the next year nothing is in order except provision for the support of Government.

"That is going to accomplish a number of things. In the first place, it is going to give them a law that has at least a year to live before it is struck to pieces again. But more important than that is the fact that it will compel the members of the Legislature, at least every two years, to pay some attention to the fiscal business of the State, and they don't pay any to it at the present time.

"This year, 1926, the Legislature passed fifty-two different amendments to the fishing game laws. Now, it has been variously estimated by the Department of Education that it costs the State of New York all the way from $900 to $1,000 for every bill that passes. Now, we spent according to that about $50,000 this winter amending the fishing game law. Who in the whole State is sufficiently interested in the size of a wall-eyed pike to have to define its dimensions by law before you can take it?

"Therefore, I want to say by Constitutional law that at least every two years you are going to let the fish and game alone. You are going to stop disturbing county officials around the State. You are going to stop meddling with the salaries that are paid for county officers throughout the State. You are going to let the Government run along itself for one year and forget all about that and sit down here and figure out this $185,000,000 and become better acquainted with the real business of running the Government, which is the appropriation of public money for its operation.

"There is no use of any man promising anybody that he is going to reduce the cost of Government. If he can make good the promise that he will keep it where it is, that is as much as he can do unless the people themselves are ready to give up some of the activities that the Government is engaged in."

In Canada we have fully as much legislation per Government or per head of population, as they have across the line. The statute books rapidly become filled with laws and amendments of the most minute kinds, and once in a while a complete over-hauling and the issue of "Revised and Consolidated" statutes is necessary. Whether Governor Smith's particular solution is a good one does not matter. It is instructive to note that politicians are perceiving the possibilities of an anti-legislation plank in their platforms, and, now that nearly every other activity is controlled by statute, we might very well have a law against laws. We cannot avoid public regulation, but we can avoid hasty and ill-advised laws that go on the statute books one year and have to be altered or repealed the next year.—Monetary Times.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

DOG AND MAN.

A greater degree of natural understanding exists between the dog and man than between any other two species. As Maeterlinck puts it, the dog, through some aspiration which is denied to other animals, has yearned upward and is the only animal that has succeeded in partially bridging the gap between the brute world and ours. My dog understands the tones of my voice and even some of my words, my bodily attitude, the expression of my face (which he is ever scrutinizing) more completely than my horse or my cat or my cow understands them. He comprehends my motives and even seems to catch some sense of my moods. He is ever on the watch for indications of my attitude or my intent. No other animal cares so much about what I think or do.

By the same token I understand him better than I understand any other animal. He is not inscrutable like the cat, nor deceitful like the wild animals. Not only is he gifted with more highly organized and effective powers of communication, but he tries harder to establish contact with us. He is the most expressive of all animals and most candid.—Walter A. Dyer in an article, "The Nearest Kin," in the June 1926 number of "Country Life."

TOTAL CONGRESS ATTENDANCE HAS PASSED THE MILLION MARK

Solemn Pontifical Mass Again Celebrated in Presence of Papal Legate—200,000 Worshippers Gathered in Soldiers' Field.

CONCLUDING CEREMONIES TO-DAY.

CHICAGO, June 24, Canadian Press. — After four crowded days of pageantry and prayer, in all of Chicago's two hundred square miles, pilgrims to the 28th International Eucharistic Congress turned last night toward the campus of St. Mary of the Lake, at Mundelein, forty miles northwest of the city, where the concluding ceremonies of the great festival will be witnessed today. In the picturesque setting of a cloistered seminary, preparations to accommodate 750,000 persons have been made.

The Chicago sessions ended yesterday with a fourth great throng assembled in Soldier's field for solemn pontifical mass in the presence of Cardinal Bonzano, the papal legate. As on Monday and Tuesday, approximately 200,000 worshippers gathered in and about the arena for ceremonies emphasizing the higher education programme of the Catholic Church.

Students' Parade.

More than 50,000 students from hundreds of parochial high schools, academies and universities throughout the Middle West paraded the field after the mass, passing out of the stadium in a procession of music and color which extended more than two miles through the lake front park. The seemingly endless columns of men and women were almost two hours in passing out of the field. Another hour elapsed before the stands were cleared.

Congress officials announced last night that more than 800,000 persons participated in or sought admission to the four services in the stadium since Monday.

Million Mark Passed.

Concurrently with the stadium services, national groups were in session in 22 meeting places throughout the city, each with an attendance of between 500 and 10,000. The total attendance has passed the million mark.

Yesterdays mass was celebrated by the Right Rev. E. F. Hoban, auxiliary bishop of Chicago, and honorary president of the congress. Cardinal Daugherty of Philadelphia delivered the sermon. His text was Christ's command to all men to "Love ye one another as I have loved you."

While the throngs were passing out of the arena, the first special train left the north end of the city for Mundelein. It carried the cardinals and bishops, who were guests tonight of the Papal Legate at a banquet on the seminary grounds.

Arriving before sundown the prelates found hundreds of visitors already camped in the borderlands of the campus. Some were in tents pitched in the fields; some in permanently parked motor cars at the roadsides; others quartered the attics and spare rooms of the thousand townspeople of Mundelein.

Transportation.

Every train carried hundreds to the vicinity last night. To-day special schedules on four roads will take up the burden at daylight. An electric line will operate six-car trains out of Chicago's loop at intervals of one and a half minutes beginning at six a.m. One steam road will move trains every ten minutes, another every quarter hour, and still another every thirty minutes. Nine paved automobile roads, each with an estimated capacity of 1000 cars an hour, will be restricted to one way traffic throughout the day. A controlled traffic area of 45 square miles will be patrolled by the city, county and state police and National guardsmen.

The Eucharistic Procession, the climactic event of the congress, will begin at the outdoor sanctuary before the seminary chapel immediately after solemn pontifical mass is celebrated by the Legate.

The procession will be three miles long and will wind a course of four miles around the lake at the seminary grounds.

LAUNCH LARGEST INLAND WATER FREIGHT VESSEL

Glenmohr Was Built By Midland Shipbuilding Company.

FOR GRAIN TRADE.

635 Feet Long, 70 Feet Beam—15,000 Tons.

MIDLAND, Ont., June 24. — (Canadian Press.)— An important event in the marine life of the Great Lakes took place here yesterday when the largest fresh water freighter in the world was launched at noon from the yards of the Midland Shipbuilding Company. Long before the hour set for the launching thousands had gathered from all over the district and hundreds of motor cars were parked along the docks while launches and craft of every description with capacity passenger lists were in the harbor. A special C. N. R. train from Toronto of eight coaches also brought its quota, including many men well known in the financial, industrial and political circles of the Dominion. When the signals had been given which released the great steel hull and the ceremony of christening the new freighter had been performed a mighty cheer arose from the crowd mingled with the blasts of whistles of freighters and tugs in the harbor and the industrial establishments along the water front. As she slid down the ways and entered the waters of the Georgian Bay, the new vessel, which is called the "Glenmhor," is 633 feet long, 70 foot beam, 29 feet deep and has a carrying capacity of 15,000 tons. The keel was laid last September and a gang of 400 to 600 workmen have been employed in the construction. She will be equipped with the latest machinery and marine appliances known to science and will be ready for the grain trade this fall. After the launching luncheon was served and addresses delivered by D. L. White, President of the Midland Shipbuilding Company, F. W. Grant, T. R. Enderby, Grant Hall, Hon. Geo. S. Henry, Mayor Bugg, R. A. Ramsey and others. The Glenmhor is the 9th vessel built by the Midland Shipbuilding Company.

3 Years' Hoard Buried Under Granolithic Walk

WINNIPEG, Man., June 24 —(Canadian Press.) —Ten years ago Halyey Sprague buried every cent of his childhood savings. He never bought candy or toys but he hid every coin beneath a marked plank in a sidewalk near his home in a suburb of Winnipeg.

After three years of hoarding, he moved from the city with his parents and forgot his buried treasure.

To-day Hayley returned to retrieve his "fortune," but to his chagrin found that the old wooden sidewalk had been replaced by a granolithic walk. His savings were buried forever.

Sean O'Casey, Guest Of Honor, Wrongly Dressed Was Turned Away By Millionaire Friend's Butler

LONDON, June 24. — Sean O'Casey, the author of "The Plough and the Stars," the greatest play success this year, is the lion of the London season. Lady Londonderry, the leading hostess of the Conservative Party, was the first social leader to invite to dinner this man who still boasts his affection for the working classes.

Mr. O'Casey still refuses to buy a dress suit, and Lady Londonderry was tactful enough to allow him to dispense with the formality of evening clothes. His next social function was as guest of honor at the house of a prominent millionaire. Here, however, he was barred admission—by the butler.

"I'm sorry, sir, but you can't come in without evening dress," said the servant.

"I do not wear evening dress," replied the dramatist, "but I've been invited."

"Sorry, sir," replied the butler.

So the guest of the evening came away, picked up a new acquaintance in the street, and found some more dialogue for "The Red Lily," the play he is now writing about the London streets.

Bernard Shaw, who is much amused by the courage of his compatriot in refusing to wear dress colthes, pursued a similar policy for years; now, he wears a badly-fitting dinner jacket which shows the stud at the back.

LAMP PAINTS ARMY ON MOUNTAIN FACE

Gatson Borgham Tells How Huge Memorial Was Outlined.

Electric light was one of the tools by which the sculptor, Gutson Borglum and his crew of artisans cut the great "nation's memorial" into the face of Stone Mountain near Atlanta, Ga., a piece of sculpture now getting its finishing touches. Light drew the heroic picture of Lee and Jackson and Jefferson Davis and the mobilizing men of the South and drew it with vast strokes so that the workmen, clinging to the immense bare face of the mountain migat engrave Borglum's gigantic masterpiece there forever. The sculptor, in an address at the May meeting of the Illuminating Engineering Society, New York section, explained how it was done.

When he was called to Atlanta to conceive and execute the huge memorial, he said the committee wanted a bust of Gen. Robert E. Lee, but he showed them that a single bust would be insignificant on such a vast rock surface. Then he sketched the design which is now nearing completion—an inspiring picture of an assembling warlike host rallying to the call of the old South. But the memorial was so large—figures measure 160 feet from riders' hats to horses' hoofs, and the whole picture contains 1,100 objects covering an area a thousand feet long—that it was impossible to outline it in proper perspective working at close range against the sheer face of the smooth rock.

The principle of the old-fashioned "magic lantern" was employed. A large glass slide was made bearing the artist's drawing of the memorial. It was placed in front of a powerful electric lamp at a distance of 800 feet from the mountain and the whole design thus projected by a tilting camera on the vast rock face into which it was to be graven. Every night the picture was thus flooded upon the rock in exactly the proportions of the final work. Painters suspended in "bos'ns' chairs" drew in the outlines so that each following day stone cutters could turn the painting into stone forms. This procedure was continued until the whole memorial was laid out in detail. Then the projections were discontinued and construction went ahead. The light of the electric lamps had done their work.

Manchester Woman Is Hanged for Strangling Her Landlady

MANCHESTER, June 24 (United Press).—Mrs. Louise Calvert, 66-year-old mother of three children, was hanged at 9 a.m. to-day for the murder of her landlady, whom she had strangled to death. It was the first time since 1923 that a woman had been executed in England. Thousands of people had signed a petition for a reprieve, but the Home Office had refused to intervene.

Party Of Indians To Seek Grave Of Chief Tecumseh

Headed by McKenzie Nahdee, grandson of the famous Chief Nahdee, who fought in the Battle of the Thames, a number of Chippewa Indians will endeavor next week to wrest from the old Moraviantown battleground the secret of Tecumseh's burial place, which has been preserved for one hundred and thirteen years.

Nahdee, who claims that the resting place of the great warrior is in the Thames River, states he can take the party to a spot a short distance from the grave. The actual "find" of the bones will be entrusted to a young Chippewa, who has won a considerable reputation as a present-day "medicine man," and who "sees in the dark," according to Nahdee.

BRIAND'S TENTH CABINET WEIGHS FRANC PROBLEM

Formation of Ministry in Victory Over Radical Socialist Coalition.

ATMOSPHERE CLEARED.

Success in Getting Government Together May Be Followed By Finance Renovation.

PARIS, June 24. — (Canadian Press.)— Aristide Briand, veteran French political leader, yesterday brought into being his tenth ministry in an effort to solve France's pressing financial difficulties.

With the formation of the new cabinet, came the appearance into the political limelight again of Joseph Caillaux, long a stormy petrel of French politics. M. Caillaux, who was the premier of France in the days before the world war and who held the ministry of Finance only recently, again has taken over the finance portfolio.

In forming his tenth cabinet, Premier Briand won a decisive victory over the "Young Turks" or irreconcilables of the extreme wing of the Radical-Socialist coalition in parliament. Although he succeeded in forming a cabinet only after two futile attempts, his success is regarded in political circles as clearing the parliamentary atmosphere and as finally opening the way to a complete renovation of French finances and the stabilization of the franc.

Man Crushed To Death While Adjusting Belt

GUELPH, June 24 (Canadian Press).—Hugh Cameron, foreman in the lower plant at Beatty Bros. factory in Fergus, was crushed to death yesterday when he was drawn into a line shaft while adjusting a belt while had slipped off the pulley. Cameron's son, who is also an employee at the plant, was the only eye-witness of the fatality, but was so badly affected by shock that he was unable to give a coherent account of what happened. The victim, who was 45 years of age, had been a resident of Fergus practically all his life. He is survived by his widow and seven children.

A Little Gift

(By Raymond Knister.)

Sandy Robbins, who had won the lucky number at the county fair yesterday, came into the one-room school-house during the afternoon recess. The other children were rushing with yells hither and thither outside, and he had left them ostensibly to get a drink from the water pail standing on the back desk which was not used except in winter when the school was crowded.

The teacher, Gilda Orson, paid no attention, but continued writing home work for the senior fourth class on the blackboard. Half an hour before she had reprimanded Sandy and ordered him to stay in after four. Now, as the boy came and shifted from one bare foot to the other before the platform, she asked without turning around, so that hewondered how she knew who he was:

"Well, Sandy? What is it?"

Sandy's eyes, fixed and twinkling, stuck to the blackboard, and he recited rapidly.

"Oh, please Miss Orson, here's a—a 'nearring, you can have." His toughened small hand held out a large pendant with a resplendent red stone, of that glittering newness which cheapness can often produce. The teacher approached and stood leaning above him. Her hand with its tiny sharp fingers took the bauble.

"Why, where did you find it?" she asked with gay curiosity. The boy had begun backing away, his hands behind him as she extended hers again.

"Didn't find it, I didn't, I thought maybe you'd like to wear it." His blue eyes still grinning automatically, he saw that the teacher hesitated. "Maw, she told me—. Well—"

"Your mother would like to give it to me?" Experience with one other country school had prepared little Miss Orson for strange offerings. The boy twisted, nodding happily, and was gone.

She placed it on her desk, and looking at it with misgivings dusted chalk from her fingers. Fruit, flowers, candy, mammals—the children seemed to rival each other in gifts until the new teacher was almost weary. The earring was not so inconvenient as the present of a pet toad would have been, but perhaps Mrs. Robbins had intended to give her a set, and the boy had lost one of them. In that case she would expect Gilda to wear them, and would be affronted by her unadorned lobes. And the teacher remembered that there was a meeting of the Ladies' Aid at which she had promised to call that afternoon on her way home from school. Mrs. Robbins would be there, and wonder . . .

"I should wear it, I'm afraid. It would look odd if I didn't—but it would look terrible if I did. I'd hate to offend anyone, and when I'm getting acquainted with the ladies like this . . ." In school hours while the classes were at work she opened her drawer and peeped at the earring. It was even more impressive than before. "Well, I'll take it along in my handbag, anyway," she decided reluctantly. "When there's only the one she really can't expect me . . . Besides, I'd look like a walking pawnshop."

The Mate on Sandy's Mother.

She was so preoccupied with thoughts of the meeting to which she was going and of the earring, that she had pinned on her hat and taken the key of the school from her drawer before she recalled having told Sandy Robbins to remain after four. She smiled graciously.

"You may go, Sandy. And thank you for the pretty earring." She was a young school-teacher.

The boy with a whoop had soon overtaken the others. Gilda Orson, walking a distance behind them, pondered until she had reached the gate of Mrs. Herrit's house, where the meeting was being held. But by that time it was too late to stop, take the earring from her bag and affix it. With a sigh of relief she entered the house and prepared to forget it.

All the ladies were delighted to meet the new school-teacher, and Gilda was placed beside Mrs. Robbins, who effusively told her how much better Sandy liked her than he had liked the last school-ma'am. But what the girl noticed was that Mrs. Robbins, a little sharp-featured, middle-aged woman in a blue suit, wore a resplendent earring, jewelled as red as the tail-light of a motor, and which wagged largely as she talked.

"Thank heaven!" invoked the teacher silently. "The very same. If I'd worn that one her boy gave me, the ladies would have thought we'd visited the same ten-cent store, that's certain." Then a thought struck her. Was there another earring attached to the other ear? How could she find out? Mrs. Robbins smiled and talked volubly, but perversely she would not turn her head. The teacher kept looking, looking at every opportunity, until Mrs. Robbins had decided that she was a real nice girl; kind of quiet, but very mannerly, the best listener she had ever met. She was flattered by the attentions of this well-dressed young lady, a stranger from the city.

But the girl was so anxious to see the other side of her fellow-guest's face that she got up and volunteered to help serve the refreshments. As each lady took a cookie from the plate Gilda had an opportunity to see that Mrs. Robbin's sallow neck was quite undecorated on the right side.

Mrs. Robbins herself was not quite lacking in self-consciousness. "You know," she purred when the teacher sat down beside her again, "this is the first time I've worn my earrings, and what do you think. I've lost one already. Sandy got them for me at the fair. Oh, not expensive ones, but then don't you think it was awfully nice of him—so thoughtful."

"It's Like One of Mine."

The earring was charming, Miss Orson agreed. "I was just wondering," she began, "where I had seen one like it, and now I remember, it's like one of mine. I—that is, I've only the one now, too. Let's see, I have it with me I think; we'll compare them."

With a demure mouth the girl rummaged in her bag and brought forth the earring. It was identical with the one worn by Mrs. Robbins.

"Really! Quite a coincidence, now isn't it! Do you really mean it? Why, I'd love to have it since it matches mine, but I hate to rob you. Well, thanks." She affixed the ornament then and there.

Stifling her laughter, Gilda pressed it on the woman, and turned with relief to talk to her other neighbors. But she could not escape the effusiveness of Sandy's mother, who parting at the door nodded more vigorously than ever and said:

"Now you must come to tea with us. Sandy keeps talking about you. Why he was saying something the other day about getting his teacher a present, too!" The afternoon a week later when she was to take tea with the Robbins family, Miss Orson remembered this, while she looked from her desk out at the cropped fields and yellow trees of autumn.

Sandy thought she meditated on the difference between the gerund and past participle formations, but nevertheless he approached her, grinning, his blue eyes screwed up. He had found two earrings on his mother's dresser. His teacher didn't wear hers because she had only one, and if anyone should have two . . .

"Oh, please teacher," he began, breathlessly. Helplessly she saw him put the earring on the desk. "Now you'll have two to wear at our place for supper."

That evening Mrs. Robbins wore only one earring.

"You know, Miss Orson, I've gone and lost one of my earrings again, and I really don't feel dressed with just one."

Sandy and his teacher did not look at each other.

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR.

"Future probation" is heresy, according to the teaching of most of the ecclesiastical systems of today. Nevertheless it is a Scriptural truth. The Scriptures teach a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust. The object of the resurrection of the unjust can be for no other purpose, than that they might have an opportunity to learn the truth, and profiting by it, come to a knowledge of God's love and plan, so that they may accept God's arrangement in Christ, and be granted everlasting life. The world's judgement or trial day is still in the future. Acts 17:31. Many, whose minds are terribly hedged in, think it incredible, that there should be opportunity for any one, beyond the present life. This seems so to them, because they have not seen the magnitude of the plan of salvation. They "err, not knowing the Scriptures" concerning the common and special salvation.

God hath appointed a day (of salvation) in the which he will judge the world in righteousness, by that man, whom He hath ordained. Acts 17:31. In this age Satan has blinded the eyes of the people. 2 Cor.4:4: In the age to come, during the Messianic day of a thousand years, Satan will be bound. The opportunity then, will be more auspicuous to right living than in this age. Blind eyes will then be opened, deaf ears unstopped, stumbling stones will be gathered out. Isa. 35:5 to 8. None shall speak lies in hypocrisy, nor teach doctrines of demons, and the commandments of men, such as "endless torments", "death in this age ends all probation." In Psalms 96, 8 to 13 it is made clear what is the character of the day of judgement.

Jesus died for all. Heb. 2, 9. Only a few are saved in this present lifetime and if there is no future judgement trial or probation day, then we have to conclude that the work of Jesus as the Savior of mankind is almost a total failure, and it would be untrue to say that "Jesus shall see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied." He could not be satisfied if earth's teeming billions, with the exception of a few, have gone down into the great prison house of death, never to return, or gone down into endless torments as many teach. Jesus gave Himself a ransom for all. Read what is written concerning those ransomed ones. Isa. 35:10. Let those who deny the Scripturalness of the doctrine of "future probation" study the Bible, let them forsake the doctrine and precepts of men; and let them know assuredly that not many who profess Christianity and a belief in the historic Christ are in covenant relationship with God.

SOME FARMERS UPHOLD CROWS

Not as Destructive as Sparrows, They Say—Can Be Frightened.

OTHERS BITTER.

MILLBROOK, June 24.—Questioned regarding the actual damage done by crows in this vicinity, soem farmers are wholesale in their condemnation, while others insist that sparrows are more destructive of grain than is the so-called "black friend."

Toward Rice Lake the claim is made, however, that crows are so numerous they will practically strip a field of peas unless the owner takes vigorous measures to chase the marauders. Corn also suffers very considerably from their depredations.

Generally speaking, all are agreed that crows are more readily frightened than are the sparrows. "Shoot a crow and hang him up in full view of his companions and they will not readily return to that particular field," is the verdict. "But shoot at sparrows and a host of them are back again within an hour."

Sparrows, it appears, are not to be poisoned. One man relates doing up poison in small balls of fat about the size of wheat grains, putting these in a dish with wheat, and setting the meal out invitingly. The sparrows ate the real grain but left quite untouched the pellets prepared especially for their undoing.

They will light in flocks in poultry yards at feeding time and devour the grain given to the fowl, as an poultry keeper can testify from personal experience.

On the other hand crows will eat poisoned grain or meat put out where they are known to congregate, but seeing one of their number fly a while and then fall dead, frightens the others, so it will be quite some time before they return to that neighborhood.

In the early part of the season, should crows fly up, as they sometimes will, almost to the very farm doorstep, and off again with a young chick, duckling, or gosling in the grasp of at least one of the unwelcome visitors, shooting into the flock will effectually frighten them so the housewife need have little fear of a second visit—so personal experience leads more than one to testify.

MRS. SIBLEY BOXER VICTIM

No Attempt Made By Police To Check Her Assailant.

ANOTHER ATTEMPT.

PEKING, June 24 (Canadian Pres).—Although officially branded as the work of a madman, the details of the murder on June 7, of Mrs. W. E. Sibley, wife of a Canadian United Church missionary, at Junghsein, received here from Chungking, indicate that she was a victim of Boxerism.

Details received here today by mail say she was returning from a shopping tour in Chentu when stopped by a Coolie who felled her with a big knife, planted his foot on her chest, and severed her head.

Many Chinese witnessed the slaying, but none interfered and even police permitted the assasilant to depart, the information stated. When the murderer was later arrested and shot, someone produced a white draped coffin for his body.

The theory that Mrs. Sibley had been killed by a madman was discounted when on the following day a "Miss Manly," an American Methodist, was dragged from a rickshaw by a Chinese who attempted to strangle her. She escaped with slight injuries due to the assistance of her servants.

A Fashion Model's Diary

—By Grace Thorncliffe—

Pale Gray Crepe Forms This Gown with Its New Tucked Skirt.

SHE DESCRIBES A COOL GRAY SUMMER COSTUME.

Last week-end Pam and I were invited to the country by a friend who lives in one of the pretty suburbs of New Jersey.

After much discussion as to what we should wear and what we should take, we found ourselves facing a cool breeze on one of the uptown ferries that crosses over to the other side.

"Glad they're going to meet us in the car," Pam remarked. "This ferry ride is cooling me off in the proper manner, and I'd hate to spoil it by crowding into one of those stuffy street cars."

We agreed that we were confirmed city dwellers, and couldn't bear the idea of commuting daily, as so many of the people round us seemed in the habit of doing.

We were met by Elsie and her husband, who gaily informed us that the children were put to bed and in care of the nurse, and that after we had stopped at the house to wash and change, we were going to the Country Club for dinner.

This appealed to us both, and we enjoyed peeping in to see the slumbering children before we changed into cool frocks and were on our way.

At the club, which is the golf and tennis rendezvous for all the active people of the community, we dined on an awning-covered verandah, and we did enjoy the cool melon which greeted us at the beginning.

"Lots of attractive looking young people," I remarked, looking round at the other diners.

"I can't take my eyes off that slim young girl in gray at the end table," Pam commented. "She is such a beauty."

"She's the best looking of the younger set," our hostess remarked. "And as clever as she is pretty. She makes all her own clothes."

This recommendation pleased our artistic senses, and we took care to take in every detail of the girl's frock when she came over to speak to Elsie.

It was a cool, crisp crepe, with the very newest skirt I've seen outside Madame's shop. The skirt was finely tucked from waist to kneeline, and from here it flared for the remaining few inches of its length.

Filet lace of a matching gray adorned the blouse, and there was a soft gray crepe sash tied at the side. A tiny yellow straw hat completed the thoroughly smart outfit.

HER OWN WAY

by a Girl of Today

BUYING UNHAPPINESS.

After telling me that she had invited me with the intention of having me witness her marriage, Joan Meredith was silent so long that I felt that I must say something.

"Well, when is the marriage going to be? Hadn't we better be going?"

"There won't be any wedding, Judy," she answered.

"Changed your mind, did you? Between matinee and night, as it were."

"No," she almost whispered. "I didn't change my mind. It was changed for me, and it has broken my heart.

"Let me go back, Judy, and tell you my story from the beginning. You will find from it that riches do not make happiness and that you can buy anything except what you want most.

"My father died two months before my brother and I were born. My mother married again when we were three years old. So you see I never knew any other father than the man my mother married.

Mr. Robinson has been kind to me in a negligible sort of a way, but both my brother and myself have grown up in the care of servants. Not one of them seemed to care enough for either of us to stay very long with us. Consequently we grew up almost without any restraint. We grew up without any love. And certainly without any feeling of dependence upon or respect for anyone but ourselves.

"Judy, Bud and I are very rich. I think before I was six years old I knew that I had more money to spend than all the other children put together that I played with. Early it was impressed upon both my brother and myself by the servants and all those about us—even Dad—that money could buy anything.

"Today, Judy, I have found out that it can buy you unhappiness. Greater unhappiness than one who has it not could think were possible. Do you know, dear, I wish I could go home with you tonight without one cent. Go home with you feeling that tomorrow I must get up and earn my daily bread before I could eat it."

"I am sure you don't wish that, Joan," I said. "Working for one's daily bread is not easy."

"Yes, I know. But never doing anything except to try to amuse yourself bores one to death. And when you have as much money as I have you think all your friends are hypocritical, and whenever anyone is nice to you you feel like calling them sycophants.

"One day when I was more bored than usual I strayed into Lincoln Park and there I met a girl. She was pretty, well dressed, and soft spoken, and I became rather interested in her conversation."

Shirrings, Spots and Tie-Strings Are a Smart Alliteration

BUTTERICK 6908

IF YOU'RE getting your family ready to go away for the Summer with yard-long lists of shoes, stockings, bathing-suits, tennis rackets, golf-clubs, frocks and misc., you'll appreciate simple little dresses for your growing-up daughter that run themselves together with very little work and trim themselves with no expense whatsoever. After twelve, and in not infrequent cases before that age, girls can make these frocks for themselves, for the skirt is straight and shirrings or gathers are easy for the young seamstress. Dots and spots are among the newest designs for printed silk or cotton voile, Georgette, crepe de Chine and radium. Plain cotton Georgette comes this year in exquisite colors and is very lovely.

The Examiner does not sell the Hastings bridge that the cost not these patterns.

HOME-MAKING HELPS

GARDEN FURNITURE.

Garden furniture is a bit more rugged than that generally used on porches.

This season there is a rustic hickory furniture that stands wind and bad weather very well. The bark is smooth and a lovely moth gray, the pieces are attractive in shape with seats and backs made of the split staves or reeds of hickory, fashioned like the reed bottomed chairs of long ago. There is a bench, straight and arm chairs, stools, tables and rockers. With canvas, oil cloth or denim cushions, solid comfort is assured.

Some of the tables have large umbrellas in the center and some of the chairs have them fastened to the backs.

There are various types of outdoor small fountains that may be piped from a nearby water plug and disconnected when the plug is needed for the garden hose or sprinkler. A fountain so placed also becomes a bird sanctuary, the birds in no way disturbing the gold fish. The tanks are usually deep enough so that grottoes, bridges and other decorative features may be placed there for the fish.

For those who enjoy eating outdoors but do not like sitting over the ground, a flooring, the needed size, with skeleton frame above to support a painted awning, makes quite a comfortable outdoor dining room.

A Pimply Face Is Unsightly

Miss C. C. M. Smart, South Battleford, Sask., writes:—"A while ago I was troubled with facial blemishes, especially pimples, and was really ashamed to go out with such a bad looking face.

I tried 2 or 3 different remedies, but they didn't help me any, so one day a friend, who had been troubled the same as I was, advised me to use

Burdock Blood Bitters

After I had taken two bottles there wasn't a pimple of any kind left on my face, and I now have a clear, smooth and velvety complexion."

Why They Do!

"If you ask a native why he goes and gets married," writes Agnes Hans Coudonhove in "My African Neighbors," "he never replies, 'because I love the girl,' but invariably by the question, 'who is to prepare my food?'"

Maybe She Cooks This!

And the husky spouse will have a much surer chance of keeping her liege lord if, when the sirocco blows its heated blasts, she makes a coolsome potion such as peanut brittle mousse. Said spouse must have 1 qt. whipped cream, 1 1-2 cups sugar, 1-2 box gelatine, 1 cup peanut brittle put through coarse knife of chopper, pinch of salt, 3 tablespoons hot water, 2 tablespoons cold water, 1 teaspoon vanilla extract. Fold sugar into whipped cream, then gelatine that has been soaked in cold water and dissolved in hot water, cool thoroughly. Fold in nuts, salt, and flavoring, pack in salt and ice four hours.

Summer Tresses.

The oily-haired maiden will like this new hair recipe rifled from the beauty recipe books of Helen of Troy—if not, it should have been. Helen, if not, she should have—had her Nubian slave girl beat two egg whites stiffly into which two drops of carbolic acid had been put. The potion is applied to the hair, not the scalp. It should remain on about five minutes, then be brushed out.

A Flapper Trick!

Flapper Magdalen Kinghall, aged 19, daughter of Sir George King-Hall, admiral in the British Royal Navy, is laughing up her crepe sleeves at the world these days. Miss Magdalen has revealed to a deluded universe that she is the Miss Cleone Knox of the Old County Down whose piquant diary of this supposed maid of 1776 was supposed to have been found and edited by a kinsman of hers. Must be nice to have a girl like Magdalen—she must have made a good many luscious pounds sterling by that hoax!

Summer Furs.

Fur collars on sport travel coats are not so good as a real collar this year, says Dame Fashion, but narrow bandings running around the collar or down the full length of the coat, tuxedo collarwise, and in beige shades, are very chic. The fox fur remains the favored separate scarf.

The micro-camera has revealed the amazing fact that the pores of every person's hands and feet are different.

WEDDING BELLS.

SEXSMITH—WHITTON.

A wedding took place on Wednesday at St. David's Anglican church, Donlands Avenue, when Violet Warwick, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Whitton, was united in marriage to Mr. Alex. Sexsmith, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. T. Sexsmith, Ivy Avenue, formerly of Peterborough, by the Rev. H. G. Brocken. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a travelling costume of navy blue and grey, and carried a bouquet of roses and lily of the valley. The bride was attended by Miss Dorothy G. Simons, who wore a gown of pale green silk crepe with Leghorn hat and carrried a bouquet of Butterfly roses and lily of the valley. The bridegroom was attended by Mr. Reg G. Hammond. Miss M. Ray presided at the organ, playing softly throughout the service. The happy couple left immediately after the ceremony for a trip to the Muskoka Lakes.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

WILDWOOD MOVIES

After a couple of tries at anything most folks will give up the chase, if failure dogs them, and it is too bad, because a trip or two to the movies, plus a little more trying, might win the day.

Folks often used to accept failure rather than accept the long-winded help of gossipy friends. They would go down in silence rather than expose their thoughts as the price of help.

Things are all changed now. A woman, for instance, will be almost down and out; she is ready to quit. Does she go and blab her troubles to the neighbors? Well I guess not!

For helpful relief from the weariness of repeated failure, she goes to a movie, and there, in the quiet dark, where nobody can see her tears, she becomes the heroine in trouble on the screen. She fights that pictured battle, through all its trials and sorrows, and she sees sweet victory at last. That silent fight against lic's other side, that powerful example of another woman's victory after a long struggle. Ah, these are the quiet little helps that send us all back to the job to tackle it with renewed determination.

And what examples of dogged determination do the wild folks see on their little screen stories? Here is a picture.

A pair of tree-swallows were building a nest in a box. The entrance hole was none too big, but Mrs. Swallow fell in love with a big hen feather about eight inches long, a wing feather.

Try as she would, that feather refused to be taken into the birdhouse, no matter at what angle she held it. Her hubby thought she was a fool to struggle with such a big white elephant for a nest lining. He blocked the doorway as she would approach with it. Then, once when she actually had it three-quarters through the hole, he flew by and grasped the end that remained out, and out it came! However, Mrs. Swallow wanted that feather, so she took it away up into the air and tried playing with it for a while until she seemed to know all its secret whims, then she grabbed it at the extreme end, and flew through the hole, feather and all, and that was that! All day for one feather, but she conquered.

SAVE YOUR TEETH

THE GOLD CROWN.

The famous line from literature has been caricatured to run thus:—"Uneasy lies the tooth that wears a crown."

Perhaps the particular type of crown with which you are most familiar is the gold shell crown.

Now, it has happened occasionally that a crowned tooth has become diseased, necessitating its removal before the crown itself had given its maximum of service.

Wherefore with many people the onus of blame has been placed on the gold itself (as if the gold might cause disease) rather than on the state of health of the tooth pulp and of the involved supporting structures.

However, this is not the case. Gold is probably one of the least injurious to oral tissues, of the many foreign substances that may be introduced into the mouth for the purpose of dental restoration.

Where the natural tooth crown has become unsightly through deep discoloration, or where partly destroyed through injury or disease, the gold crown may be most advantageously employed. It calls for a minimum cutting and destruction of tooth tissue, thereby not endangering the tooth pulp, where it is still alive, nor further weakening a tooth, already frail, through pulp death or from some other cause. In this way it may conserve a tooth to a much longer useful service otherwise earlier lost.

There still remains the possible objection on the part of some persons to 'showing too much gold.' This, however, may, in some cases be overcome through employing the 'open-face' crown which is a modification of the full gold crown, in which a portion of the facial aspect has been cut away, permitting the normal tooth surface to be brought into view, with the crown in place. This is resorted to, generally, where employed on a sound (or nearly sound) tooth that is being used as an abutment or anchor tooth as in bridge work.

Yet how much better if, through proper care, the need calling for this type of restoration had not developed. There lies hidden in this humorous little couplet much MirWiWcauce: 'Daddy's teeth have all be n crowned Mine are ivory and sound.'

LAKEFIELD NEWS

LAKEFIELD, June 24. — When the siren gave a general alarm on Thursday at 12.30 p.m. the members of the Fire Brigade practically turned out en masse, and also a crowd of citizens. The crowd far exceeded the fire in magnitude, and the presence of the entire brigade was unnecessary as two or three men could have handled a fire of this character even more efficiently than a larger number. The mistake was made in turning in a general alarm for a chimney fire, for which a still alarm is all that is necessary. The increase in equipment by the purchase of a motor truck for the brigade, which carries everything necessary for a chimney fire, means better service, with fewer men called out for a minor blaze. It saves the village money and does not cause unnecessary excitement. Four blasts of the siren mean a general alarm, calling every member of the brigade. The Fire Chief, Mr. A. H. Clarke, has been particular to state all the requirements so that in future every citizen will understand the proper mode of procedure.

The Public School closed on Friday last for the summer vacation. The entrance class is the only class in the school which is still carrying on. They continue for this week prior to the departmental examinations.

Mr. E. H. Northey erected an up-to-date electric sign on Monday, which will add considerably to the appearance of his store front.

Crawford Bros.' butcher shop was moved on Monday to the new cement foundations recently put in by W. J. Webster and sons. The building has been moved east and north from its old position.

The Normal School excursion passed through the village on Friday last, and for the second time in about sixteen years they had a fine day.

Owing to unavoidable circumstances the band did not hold their weekly open-air concert on Thursday night.

Residents near the village stockyards have complained of the conditions which allow cattle to be herded there for some hours with neither food or drink. The bawling of the cattle advertises their uncomfortable position, and the question has been asked by prominent local people, Is there a branch of the Humane Society or the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in the village?

In the examinations recently held at Bishop Bethune College, Oshawa, two local girls are especially mentioned. Miss Dorothy Langley in form VI. and Miss Francis Mackenzie in form V. received prizes.

Roller canaries are capable of singing fourteen notes, although few birds achieve them all.

The heat of the moon at its full is equal to that of a wax candle at a distance of 250 yards.

CLOSING EXERCISES AT GROVE SCHOOL

Rev. Walter Loucks of Toronto Was the Special Preacher.

LAKEFIELD, June 23. — The closing exercises of The Grove School were held on Friday afternoon, and were attended by an unusually large number of parents of boys and friends of the school. The Chapel service was held at 2 o'clock with Rev. A. W. Mackenzie in charge; E. G. Pullen read the lesson, and Rev. Walter Cox, the proper Psalm, and the preacher of the day was Rev. Walter M. Loucks, M.A., of Holy Trinity Church, Toronto. He took his text from one of St. Paul's epistles to the Corinthians: "I press toward the mark."

Every one in life, especially perhaps a boy or man has some object which he wishes to attain. At the close of the school year, the larger boys are looking forward to the wider field of college or business, and the younger boys are looking forward to a continuance of their school life? Success means fulfillment and failure means some fault in us which retards our success.

The first element of success is character. Character is a Greek word, meaning deep cut. We must possess a good character, and how? Heredity has a great deal to do with it; we are what are forefathers made us, and future generations are what we make them. We are not living for a day, and if a man is foolish enough in youth to sow wild oats; generations to come reap the fruits and the reaping is not as pleasant as the sowing. One way to mould character is education, and you boys should be grateful for the opportunities given in a school of this sort where body, mind and spirit are all educated and developed. There is a story told of a man who criticised a certain boys' school by saying that all they were taught was to play cricket and be gentlemen. Fair play and honor form a large part of our education and what you boys learn here on the playground, in the school room and in chapel is helping to mould the strength, purity and beauty of your character. There is kindliness and brotherhood, fair play and honor. The speaker here quoted that stirring poem entitled "Play up, and play the game." Education is teaching you boys to play the game, to honor God and for His sake to honor your brother man.

Then experience in life helps to mould character, just making use of what happens every day. As an example he spoke of the situation in Manitoba, when the people turned out both old parties and elected a farmers' government, which had no leader, so they chose a man (Premier Bracken) for his honor and integrity of character, and he to-day is an outstanding figure and a splendid leader in the province. He quoted also of the reasons which caused John Hocking, a simple Nova Scotian priest among the fisher folk, to be chosen as co-adjutor Bishop of Nova Scotia. He knew the people and was accustomed to going about among the bays and inlets as a fisher of men.

The second element of success is courage, in an recent editorial in a newspaper referring to Lloyd George it speaks of him as fighting for his political life but presenting a bold and dauntless front to the world. Leaders in the social and religious world must be full of courage.

Then there is perseverence, it is said that a Briton never knows when he is licked and he is never liked because he keeps on fighting till he wins. In a certain period of the war the French were told to retreat as slowly as possible to a certain valley which they did, "They shall not pass." The gallant army of heroic France was bled white to save the world.

Courage is manifested by the ability to wait for opportunity and not take short cuts. When Kitchener was making his way to Khartoun he was accompanied by Stephens, one of the greatest of all war correspondents who wrote a book, "With Kitchener to Khartoun," in which he pointed out how that great soldier waited till the time was ripe, he was always ready to do the small thing and wait for the great.

Great events do not make heroes or cowards, they simply reveal them.

The third element of success is hard work. Few men made lucky strikes, most men and boys have to work their way.

Joshua, one of the greatest commanders in history, rose early, talked to God and went about the camp.

We should put our best energy into our odd moments of time. Three men were working at a stone pile and when asked what they were doing, the first said he was waiting for the whistle to blow, the second said he was cutting stones but the third said he was helping to build a cathedral. When you visit the English Cathedrals you have a great opportunity of viewing the work of the Master Masons who worked hard at small pay and left an lasting monument.

Then another element of success is religion. We do not always like chapel but it helps to bring the human soul into touch with God. The motto of the Rotary Club is "They profit most who serve best." Sacrifice and service is the spirit of religion.

In Ottawa a few years ago four young people were skating on the river when the ice gave way and a young girl, Miss Blair, daughter of Hon. A. G. Blair was drowned in spite of the efforts of Henry Harper, a friend of the present premier, to save her life and in Ottawa there is a statue of Sir Galahad erected to commemorate the event, which has this inscription, "If I lose myself, I save myself!" from Tennyson. That spirit animated the boys whose names are engraved on the Roll of Honor to go overseas and give their lives for their country, the spirit of service and sacrifice.

The chapel was filled to capacity for the service with the boys and visitors. Mr. E. de C. Fletcher presided at the organ.

After the service the prize giving was held in the flagged quadrangle with the head master, Rev. A. W. Mackenzie, in charge.

In his brief address he referred to the enlarged building which gave better accommodation to the school and which had been completed during the past summer vacation. The Ladies' Guild of the school had equipped the infirmary in the new wing and made it a delightful place to be sick in. They also levelled the football field and they still had many delightful plans. The past year has been like other past years with its share of successes and reverses. The football, hockey and football team were all good and acquitted themselves creditably.

Next year the staff will be the same with the one sad exception, Mrs. Fawcett, the matron, is leaving and only those who know her work can appreciate the loss it will be.

There are four important people not on the staff who have had a great deal to do with making the year a pleasant one and these are the four prefects (Barnard, Loosemore, Pullen and Young). Some of the boys have grown too large for the school and are leaving to take their places in the under sphere of life outside. It is not our object to make this a very large school; there are many advantages in a school of less than 100 pupils. It gives an opportunity to know and study individuals and to cultivate the domestic side, we want a big family in a big house but not an institution.

We hope that the school will not become too classical or mathematical but will develope also along mechanical lines. We hope to have manual training taught before long. There are many things for us to do, boys, before we see each other again and in your summer vacation you will learn to be resourceful and self reliant. But do not waste or fool away your time.

The prizes were presented as follows:

General Proficiency, Form I—Stricklan iii; Form 2—Miller; Form 3—Boyer i; Form 4—Leggatt and Peck ii, equal; Form 5—Miall.

After the prize giving afternoon tea was served in the school dining room, Mrs. Marling pouring tea and Mrs. Wood pouring coffee.

This year's closing exercises marked a new epoch in the life of the school, as the new wing, so long planned for, has become a delightful reality and has been even of greater advantage than was expected. A note of sadness is struck in the thought of those who are not coming back, those who are now on the brink of manhood and who will sail their little ships out of the pleasant little harbor of school boy life into the open water of the wide world's life.

The closing exercises of 1926 were marked by the largest attendance in the history of the school, but the increased attendance did not in any way detract from the pleasant social function, which the "closing" has always been.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, June 24 (Canadian Press).—With foreign buyers refusing to pay the prices asked by local exporters for grain, the Montreal market yesterday was extremely dull. There was some demand from exporters in the local market and purchases of five loads of No. 2 Northern wheat were made at 12 1-4 cents per bushel over the Winnipeg July option, and a few loads of No. 3 Canadian Western barley at 11 cents per bushel over the Winnipeg July option, and a few loads of No. 3 Canadian Western barley at 11 cents over, c.i.f. Montreal. A moderate amount of business was also done in car lots and the tone of the market was firm.

Extreme dullness marked the Spring and Winter wheat flour trade, but prices for all grades ruled steady.

Prices for all lines of millfeed were well maintained with a fair trade being transacted. The demand for standard grades of rolled oats showed no improvement but prices were unchanged.

An unsettled feeling developed in the egg market and jobbing prices in some cases were reduced 1 cent per dozen. This was attributed to the large supplies available. The receipts were 2,469 cases.

Owing to the warmer weather prevailing and the fact that buyers seemed well supplied for the present, the trade in potatoes was quiet and the undertone continued easy with lower prices expected in the near future.

The feature of the butter trade was the easier feeling that developed and prices were shaded 1-4c per pound, which was due to the more liberal supplies coming forward. The receipts were 5,281 packages.

The tone of the cheese market was easier. Purchases of Western No. 1 white and colored were made at 18 3-4c per pound, and it was reported that as low as 18 1-2c to 18 5-8c per pound were accepted for other lots. Eastern grades were quoted at 18c to 18 1-4c per pound. The receipts were 6,787 boxes.

The demand for beans was again limited and the market was quiet, but the undertone was steady and car lots of choice white hand-picked were quoted at $2.15 per bushel, and broken lots at $2.25 to $2.35 per bushel.

CHICAGO GRAIN

Nearby deliveries of wheat displayed considerable weakness the greater part of the session, yet the December delivery was inclined to climb.

Cash premiums at the Gulf were one cent lower, new crop winters at Kansas City were quoted 2 cents lower, and Wichita was 1 cent lower.

Threshing returns in the southwest generally were reported running above expectations and there was a tendency to raise the estimates on the Kansas crop. Foreign reports were mixed with Italy predicting a small crop this year.

Short covering was on in corn. While the weather map generally was favorable, it was said that higher temperatures were needed over a wide area. Cash demand showed some improvement. Buying was stimulated on rumored prospects of favorable action on the McNary-Haugen bill today.

Trade in oats was light and largely in the way of spreading between the various deliveries. There was some liquidation on in July and locals sold the deferred months on easiness in wheat.

Provisions were somewhat firmer early on buying by commission houses, but dipped later when offerings increased.

CHAPTER LX.

Morton slowly took her hands, and sliding from the desk, stood up, holding her from him.

"Nona," he said, "You are offering a woman's heart. But dear, I have nothing to give in return. Your love is fragrant, and rich. My heart is dry, and covered with the scar of an old, old wound."

Her face began to twitch, as she saw what was coming.

"Don't cry, dear," he went on. "I'm only saving you from unhappiness."

"But I didn't ask you to marry me!" she wailed. "I just offer myself to you, for you to do with as you wish. Throw me aside, when you're through with me!"

He shook his head, and lowered her hands. He still held to them, though, as he went on.

"Married or not, you would be exchanging your love for a dead blank. Our casual companionship has been a very pleasant one to me, Nona, but what can I offer you? Money? You have it in your hand. Position? You are a great artist. I believe you are the greatest dancer in the world. Companionship? Why, instead of twenty years, Nona, I am centuries older than you! Heartaches, and heartbreaks have had their will of me."

He loosed her hands, and they fell to her side. She barely could speak, her chin quivering, and her throat moving convulsively.

"You mean—you do not want me? That I shall go to London?"

On an impulse, he threw his arms around her and kissed her. Then, as suddenly, he moved away.

"Go to London," he told her. "I know—I know! You will be happier than you ever can be with a man whose love was buried down in the desert, a score of years ago."

He turned and went out the door. She slumped into the chair, her head on the desk, her arms loosely outflung before her.

He closed the door, softly.

"Don't go in there," he said to Parrish. "Wait until Nona comes out."

He sank on the hall chair, and sat thinking. The young man watched him from the other room. "Is anything the matter, Mr. Morton?"

The older man shook his head. "Nothing," he said, "that you can help."

Parrish arose, and stood by him in concern.

"Something HAS gone wrong, sir," he said.

Morton, his head bent, sat without replying. Parrish looked uneasily about him. Then he heard the sound of a door opening above. Looking up, he saw Audrey. She was about to call to him, but he laid his fingers on his lips, and pointed significantly at Morton. She looked across the railing, anxiously. The man in the chair, though her movements had been noiseless, became conscious of her presence.

He looked up. He tried to smile, but failed.

"Oh daddy—come up! Bring him up, Mr. Parrish!" Audrey cried. "There's something wrong with him."

Morton rose, and with Parrish's arm under his, slowly went up the steps, and into Audrey's dressing room. She took his other arm, and placed him in her own chair, beside the dressing table. Then she kneeled before him, her arms on his knees, looking into his face. Parrish stood uncertainly near them.

Morton spoke, his voice husky.

"Dearest," he said, "I've gone through a terrible scene. I had to hurt a loving girl—a girl who loved me."

She held his knees between her arms. "Nona?" she asked, softly.

He nodded. "I have—asked her—to go—to—London," he said, uttering the words with difficulty. "She wanted to stay with me." He lifted his hands, and let them fall. "But I have nothing to offer any woman, who wants to give her life to me."

His eyes, tired and heavy, lifted themselves to Parrish. "We might as well go ahead, and have it all over with. Parrish, you love Audrey, don't you?"

The young man moved close beside him, resting his hand on the back of the chair. "I do love her, Mr. Morton."

"Do you want to marry him, Audrey?"

His heavy eyes turned to her. She pressed his knees again.

"Daddy, if you are not going to marry Nona, I can't marry Mr. Parrish."

Morton stared at her, as if he had difficulty in comprehending. She repeated. "I have told him that I can't marry him—if you are to be left alone."

The older man made a visible effort to collect his faculties, and his accustomed force. He straightened in his chair, and bent to the girl.

"I had my day of love, twenty years ago," he said. "This is your day now. Youth calls to youth."

He arose, and lifted Audrey to her feet. With his hand on Parrish's arm, he said

"Parrish, her idea of marrying me is simply one of loyalty."

She gave a quick shake of her head. "But I love you, daddy!" she cried.

He shook his head, slowly. "Yes—but it is a different kind of love. You don't feel toward me as you do toward John here, do you?"

She looked from one to the other. "No, it isn't the same," she told him. "Daddy—there is something a little sad in the love I feel for you. I feel as if you needed someone to comfort you, and help you. I've always clung to you so hard, but I know—I'm a woman now—that you need someone to cherish you."

Morton stooped and kissed her.

"It is impossible," he said. "Parrish, she is going to marry you. Take her, man—make her happy. Be good to her, for she is all I have in the world."

He turned, and started heavily for his room. He passed out the door, as the two young people stood looking at one another. They followed him, to the hallway. They saw him, his head low, his arms limp beside him, turn into his own door.

"John," she said, giving his hand a quick sharp pressure. "I can't marry you—I can't!"

She started down the hall toward the door that Morton had entered. Parrish followed her. "He is doing this because he thinks it will make me happier. If I wait, maybe he will marry me some day."

They were standing at the stair railing. A door opened below, and Nona came into the hall. She stood, looking at the floor. Then, wearily, she turned to the stairway and started to mount it. Audrey took Parrish's hand, and led him after her, to Morton's room. "She mustn't know we saw her," she whispered.

She entered Morton's dressing-room. Then, with a sharp tug, she drew Parrish after her, and closed the door. Morton was lying face downward on his couch.

As they came in, he turned his head. "Please go away, dearest," he said. "I am terribly tired."

He buried his face again in his arms. "Daddy!" the girl pleaded, standing in the center of the floor, looking at him. "Mr. Parrish is willing to let me go. He won't want to marry me if it makes you unhappy."

Morton stirred, and then raised himself to a sitting posture. He passed his hands repeatedly over his face, as if to iron out the lines that showed there. He pressed his fingers to his eyes, and then, with something of the accustomed spring to his movements, he arose.

"Sit down," he said. "Sit there together, on the couch."

They obeyed, and half consciously, Audrey's hand sought Parrish's. He clasped it, while he looked at the older man.

"Audrey, and John," Morton said, "I am going to tell you something that I had hoped never to tell."

He placed his hands behind his back, and slowly paced the floor before them.

"I've told Audrey, John, that I loved her mother, and that she married. I have told her that this other Audrey—the sweetheart of my youth—ran away from her husband, and that long after, I found her on the floor of a deserted cabin, where the man who ruined her had left her."

Parrish, listening with intent eyes, held Audrey's hand closer.

"I have told her that I took the little deserted babe, and carried her with me through the desert. I had to abandon the career I hoped for as an artist. I had to get food for the child, and there—there—"

He choked, but in a moment went on. "It was right behind the cabin that I discovered a wide vein of ore. I found it when I was digging her mother's grave."

He stood, staring at the floor, as if he were looking into the opening where he had laid the young mother, so long before.

"She is buried at the mine. I saw the place, when I was down there, not long ago. I can't go again.

"Something that was fresh and youthful and loving in me, is buried with her."

Audrey lifted her hand to him, appealingly. "But daddy, that's why I ought to live to serve you! That's why I shouldn't marry Mr. Parrish."

Morton turning, fixed her with his sad eyes.

"Do you know why I adopted you, Audrey?"

"I think so," she said.

"It was to save you from the knowledge of what had gone before, when you were too young to know, or care. But Audrey!"

There was a new, keen note of anguish in his tone.

"Have you ever heard of men and women, who have sought to bury their own sense of shame and humiliation? Sought to bury it so that none of those near to them could know?"

He was bending toward them now, his face drawn and white.

They nodded in dumb sympathy.

"I was like that—I was trying to hide—I have always tried to hide—the terrible thing that befell me. I wanted to save you—and myself, too."

He paused. "Audrey, you know I told you your mother left her husband alone, with a baby, when she ran away with Smith?"

"I do, daddy," she said, softly.

He held out his arms to her. "I need not have adopted you, sweetheart," he said. "I did that to hide from you something—something I'm going to tell you now. I wanted to hide it from you, and from all the world."

They waited for him to go on.

"I cannot ever marry you, Audrey," he went on. "Parrish, she is yours, if she will take you."

He drew a deep breath.

"I was the husband, Audrey, whom your mother left back there, with the baby."

He was shaking, as with a chill.

"I cannot marry you—" he threw his head back. "I am your father!"

THE END.

BRIDE AND GROOM RECEIVE OIL STOVE

Pleasant Evening Spent by Over Hundred Friends on Fallis Line.

MILLBROOK, June 24.—A pleasant social gathering, attended by over one hundred guests, was held on Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lavergne Fallis, Fallis line, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Allie Fallis, who were recently married and have taken up their residence on the line.

Music, cards, dancing and social intercourse provided agreeable entertainment until nearly midnight, when Mr. and Mrs. Fallis were asked to take seats in the midst of the company, and the following address was read by Mr. Lavergne Fallis, Messrs. J. Widdis and Leonard Henderson, on behalf of a wide circle of friends, presenting them with a four-burner oil stove, "necessary and important accessory when beginning housekeeping":

"Mr. and Mrs. Allie Fallis:

"Dear Friends,—It is with the most genuine pleasure that we gather here tonight for the very pleasant duty of tendering you our hearty congratulations upon your successful entry into the broader, fuller life of matrimony.

"We congratulate you, Allie, after having lived in single blessedness, and so long experienced the old truth that 'it is not good for a man to live alone,' graduated as bachelor with highest honors, upon having won such a capable helpmate; and you, Mrs. Fallis, upon having secured a husband who is not only one hundred per cent. efficient as a worker on the farm, but who is also just as useful around the house, and lastly, but not least, a real man, one whom we have always found, in the truest sense of the word, to be a good comrade and neighbor.

"It is not necessary to further extol the many good qualities of you both; actions speak louder than words, and our presence here tonight for this very special occasion, bears the most ample testimony to this fact.

"As a slight token of our best wishes toward you as you enter together upon the new life, we present you with this stove.

"We trust as the years go by and bring with them opportunity for service to a larger family circle, that your household may ever prosper, and that the influence of the new home that you have just created may leave its most beneficient impression upon the future citizenship of this country.

"Signed on behalf of your many friends—James H. Widdis, Leonard Henderson, Lavergne Fallis."

Fallis line, June 18, 1926.

Mr. Fallis made suitable reply on behalf of his bride and himself, others who spoke briefly being Councillor R. J. McKnight, W. Fred Fallis and H. A. Fallis. All joined in singing, "They Are Jolly Good Fellows," and shortly afterward the committee in charge assisted Mrs. Fallis in serving supper to her many guests.

Repeated congratulations and good wishes followed the bride and groom as they left for their home near by, and it was not long until all the guests, some of whom had driven a considerable distance to attend the gathering, were on their homeward way.

CONTINENTS WERE ONCE LINKED TOGETHER BY LAND BRIDGES

Geologists Find Added Proof That Animals Had Wide Range.

NOT AT SAME TIME.

Sometimes Separation Was at One Place, Sometimes Another.

By Richard M. Field.

Why is the public interested in land bridges—those portions of terra firma that are thought to have disappeared beneath the waves and to have left our present world very much like one great archipelago of huge, disjointed islands?

The classical example of the lost Atlantis has always appealed to popular imagination. The hypothesis that all lands were once connected and that the inhabitants of the globe were permitted to wander and mix almost at will is attractive to some people. The geologist, however, appreciates the fact that climate has always been an important factor in limiting the distribution of animals and plants, and that, even today, it has a strong selective influence on man, the first species to have over-run all continents.

Further, it is extremely doubtful if all the lands were joined together at the same time, so that there must always have been some out-of-the-way corners of the world in which the plants and animals developed for a time without stimulus or interference from the rest of the world. The geological record would seem to prove that the evolution of organisms, with its culmination in the reasoning animal—man—has been brought about not only by cosmopolitanism but also by periods of segregation and forced adaptation to purely local and often exceedingly "strenuous" environments.

But the layman may well ask what scientific reason the geologist has for postulating former continental connections. During the past Summer a party of geologists representing the Smithsonian Institution, the National Museum and Princeton University, co-operated with geologists of England, Wales, Scotland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Central Europe in an endeavor to gain more information regarding the distribution of fossil faunae by actual work in foreign fields.

The expedition was singularly successful in gathering further field evidence and in comparing the methods and technique of the various workers; so successful that we still believe in the former existence of land bridges, especially during the Paleozoic. Large numbers of fossils were collected and brought to America, and it is hoped that the study of this material will increase our knowledge of the geographies of the past.

As a matter of fact, not all geologists believe in the former existence of land bridges. Some would seek to account for the present distribution of similar but widely separated living or fossil animals and plants by other means, such as marine currents, rafting, etc. Many terrestrial plants, insects and birds have undoubtedly migrated over wide watery areas without the aid of land bridges. Plant seeds may be blown great distances, and instances have recently been cited of butterflies that have been blown to islands some distance off shore.

Nevertheless, it is difficult to see how larger non-flying animals could find their way from one continent to another, sometimes over miles of storm-tossed sea, by means of natural rafts and favorable currents. Further, it is highly improbable that both sexes would be landed at the same time or under such conditions as are required for the breeding of a health race. We have long since outgrown the idea that any species of animals can be perpetuated by a single pair. Perhaps the most serious objection to the story of Noah and his ark is that the animals marched in two by two and not in herds.

It is also difficult to account for the present widely separated provinces of similar living and fossil freshwater fishes without the aid of former land connections. At first glance it would seem as if the vagrant and also the sessile marine invertebrates could migrate across the Atlantic or the Pacific. Even such sedentary types as the corals and burrowing vivalves are free-swimming or floating in their young stages, but only for a relatively short time. Soon they must sink to the bottom and carry on their adult sedentary life.

Most of our present marine forms live in comparatively shallow water (between high tide and the hundred-fathom line), and this corresponds pretty closely to the edge of the submerged portions of the continents, which we call the continental shelves. It is within these relatively narrow zones or submerged continental fringes that there exists the optimum condition of light, heat and food. It is difficult, therefore, to see why we should get the same marine invertebrates off the eastern coast of North America and the western coast of England, unless they had been able to migrate from one zone to another along a relatively shallow sea bottom.

Of course, it is quite possible that the recent shallow-water organisms might have migrated around the "top of the world," where the continents are relatively close together, and that the deeper channels might have been crossed by the free-swimming young stages of some of those forms that are bottom dwellers in their adult stage. Many of the existing shallow channels and straights have been recently cut by marine or wave erosion. It was in this manner that Great Britain was separated from Ireland and the Continent in relatively recent geological time. However, we can hardly account for the distribution of all fossil organisms by so simple an explanation as this.

Separate Identical Groups.

No serious student of geology or biology today would agree that two widely separated, but strikingly similar, groups of animals or plants arose from separate origins. There is no evidence that nature ever created two groups of the same species in different places at the same time, or that an extinct species ever again appeared. Groups or species must have migrated or dispersed from a common centre of origin. All geologists and biologists are in agreement here. But there is considerable discussion as to the cause or causes of the origin of a species and the cause or causes of its distribution.

In reading the arguments that rage over these exceedingly interesting problems, the so-called Fundamentalist often grows confused, reminding one of the countryman who, when he saw a giraffe for the first time, is reported to have said: "There ain't no such animal." We all recognize the existence of the giraffe, even if we disagree as to the way in which he got his long neck.

Whether or not the later inhabitants of the earth, such as the mammals, were aided in their migrating by land bridges it seems difficult to account for the distribution of certain fossil faunas by any other means. Perhaps the first example of a trans-Atlantic correlation was the discovery in the Cambrian rocks of Braintree, Mass., of an extinct crustacean or trilobite, interestingly enough called Paradoxides. All trilobites are now extinct, and this particular genus, one of the oldest known, must have lived some 500,000,000 years ago. Previous to its discovery in Eastern North America, it had been found at St. David's Head, in the South of Wales, and also in Sweden.

Naturally, the discovery of Paradoxides in North America caused quite a little excitement among geologists, and almost immediately led to speculation as to the character and extent of the Cambrian or ancient ocean in which it lived. It is difficult to see how Paradoxides could occur in both hemispheres unless there had been at least a narrow bridge of land, along the shores of which this shallow-water organism could have migrated.

In a later geological period called the Permian, some 50,000,000 years ago, we find that the rocks of West Africa and Eastern South America contain similar fossils, which, in turn, are not found in North America or in Northern Europe. This is particularly true of a fossil plant called Glossopteris, which is not found in the rocks of the same age to the north, and therefore must have migrated by a direct east and west land route.

All that is known geologically of West Africa and South America is in complete agreement with the assumption (at which we have arrived from the study of geographical and geological distribution of extinct animals and plants) that in the earliest periods of the earth a broad land connection existed between Africa and South America, in the place of the present South Atlantic Ocean. This lost continent or land bridge has been called Gondwana Land, and is supposed to have foundered at the close of the Mesozoic, some 15,000,000 years ago.

America and Europe.

This connecting land mass was comparable to another transverse land in the North, which has been called Eria or Holoarctica, and which is supposed once to have connected North America and Europe by way of the present remnants, Greenland, Iceland and the British Isles.

[illegible] evidence a connection is [illegible] have existed between Australia and India (united with Madagascar and South Africa) and which disappeared in the Jurassic, some 25,000,000 years ago. The connection between India and Madagascar may have disappeared as late as the close of the Cretaceous, only 15,000,000 years ago.

In the making of ancient paleogeographic maps which shall show the relation of land to water, say in the Paleozoic (age of invertebrates) or in the Mesozoic (age of reptiles), all of the data used have been compiled by many workers in many lands. It has, however, been generally assumed that the great ocean basins, such as the Pacific, Atlantic, Indian and Arctic, have been more or less permanent throughout geological time, and that the only way in which animals and plants could have migrated was by means of more or less narrow land bridges which have since disappeared beneath the waves.

The geologist has good reason to postulate the permanency of the ocean basins, for there is little or no evidence of deep water sediments or organism in any of our older formations; indeed, quite the reverse, for most of the Paleozoic and later marine formations show undoubted evidence of having been deposited in quite shallow water. No wonder that the geologist has been hard put to it to explain the present distribution of fossils—unless he may assume the former existence of east and west land bridges.

Austrian Raises New Point.

Recently the permanency of ocean basins has been brought into question by Alfred Wegener, professor of geophysics at the University of Graz, Austria. An English translation of the third German edition was published in 1924, and has led to considerable controversy in this country and in England. The theory first arose from the similarity in shape between the South Atlantic coast lines of Brazil and of Africa.

"Not only does the great right-angled bend formed by the Brazilian coast at Cape San Roque find its exact counterpart in the re-entrant angle of the African coast line near the Kameruns, but also south of these two corresponding points, every projection on the Brazilian coast has a complementary protuberance on the African."

Without any great stretch of the imagination, the different parts of the earth's surface may be made to fit together like a jig-saw puzzle, and Wegener has elaborated the idea that throughout the greater part of the earth's history, in fact up until the close of the Carboniferous (50 million years ago), there has been a general westward and southward drift of North and South America and of Antartica and Australia, respectively, away from the still more or less undisturbed land mass of Europe, Asia and Africa.

Certainly an astonishing theory, it is one that appeals to the imagination immediately one examines a globe or an exact model of the earth's surface. Many other factors are given as evidence of the westward drift of North and South America, including the paleontological data already cited. Thus we have only one—a gradually restricted—ocean basin, the Pacific, which becomes the father of all oceans; and North and South America may logically be called the "New World" for the first time.

Wegener's hypothesis appears, at present, in no way to militate against the paleontological data stated above; and, further, it would seem to explain the widely separated but similar fossil faunas and floras in a more reasonable way than do the postulated land bridges. Unfortunately the Wegener hypothesis has the distinct disadvantage of being new and somewhat bizarre. What is worse, the mechanics of the theory are extremely difficult to explain, while the foundering of land bridges would seem not to be without precedent.

Comparing Sea Fossils.

On the Princeton-Smithsonian expedition, it was further emphasized that the fossils of the Durness limestone of the northwest Highlands of Scotland were similar to those of Northeast Newfoundland and entirely different from those found in Southeast Newfoundland. Wales, Central England, Southern Scandinavia and Central Europe. Comparison of these ancient marine fossils on both sides of the Atlantic would seem to indicate that some sort of land barrier prevented the mixing of animals from the Cambrian Arctic Sea on the north and the Cambrian Atlantic Sea on the south. This isthmus was evidently narrow, during Cambrian time, the Arctic and Atlantic animals being found in rocks within 100 miles of each other at both the American and European ends.

Until the stratigraphic or relative ages of these northern and southern Lower Paleozoic faunas have been more carefully studied we cannot be certain that they lived in contemporaneous seas. At present we believe them to be the same age, and therefore must postulate that they could not mingle; in other words, were separated by a land barrier. Whether that land barrier once spanned the deep-water intervening gaps between Europe and North America depends upon whether the Wegener hypothesis be true or whether we are still to believe in the permanency of the present great ocean basins.

At the present time we certainly cling to the latter belief. It is hoped, however, that a further study of the numerous fossils at our command, together with the formations in which they were entombed, will yield some positive evidence one way or the other. The problem is an international one. The land bridges along which the early forms of life migrated from one continent to another have disappeared. Millions of years of struggle with varied environments, both organic and inorganic, have urged life onward and upward. At times there has been severe struggle with limited areas; at others, land bridges have afforded the opportunity for the migration and mingling of many species.

Man's Evolution.

With the advent of the land bridges, and hence an increased total land area on the globe, the climates have changed and greatly influenced the migrational routes, or even modified the cosmopolitan faunas that could not migrate with their optimum habitat. Many species have become extinct. This seems to be the penalty of progress; and the thousands of fossils studied by the geologist today should not be thought of simply as evidences of death and destruction, but rather as milestones along the road of evolution.

Today, for the first time in the evolution of the earth and its inhabitants, we have one species, man, who is able not only to bridge the continents by mechanical means but also to communicate his ideas around the world without moving from his desk. Perhaps this is the culmination of man's evolution, both physical and mental. Who can tell?

It is an open question whether an actual land bridge between North America and Europe at the present time would be for the best interests of mankind. Undoubtedly it would be welcomed by the manufacturers of automobiles, and perhaps voted down by the steamship companies. Fortunately there is little or no chance that the problem will ever become a question of politics. But its scientific discussion by the geologists of several nations is helping to bridge the rift in international amity.

Easy to Gain With Yeast and Iron

New Combination of Yeast with Vegetable Iron Quick Way to Build Up Weight

This new combination of yeast vitamines with vegetable iron, renews the action of sluggish blood cells, drives out dangerous body poisons, increases energy and endurance and supplies the system with vitamines that build up weight.

For years yeast has been known as a rich vitamine food but not until we perfected "ironized yeast"—which comes in concentrated tablet form was it possible to take yeast and iron in the right proportions to build up weight.

Vegetable "Iron" when combined with yeast is quite easy to digest, therefore better for the system. And "yeast" when ironized, becomes just twice as beneficial as ordinary fresh or cake yeast.

Ironized Yeast Tablets are composed of concentrated food elements, therefore, they are pleasant to take and free from drug-like effects. If you are under weight, do not enjoy good health, lacking in energy and force, "ironized yeast" tablets will pick you right up, and if they fail, you get your money back.

Sold by druggists at $1.00 for a large 60-tablet package or sent direct from laboratory on receipt of price. Ironized Yeast Co., Fort Erie, Ontario, Canada.

VICTORIA, B.C., June 24 (Canadian Press).—Eat more fish—that's the secret of prevention of goitre as summed up by Dr. W. B. Keith, of Vancouver, at yesterday afternoon's session of the Canadian Medical Association, which began the meetings of the annual convention here yesterday.

The study of the disease had shown that certain races, notably the Indians of the Pacific Coast and the natives of Japan, suffered very little from goitre, said Dr. Keith.

NEW YORK SUMMARY

Bank of England rate unchanged, 5 per cent. Public Service Commission approves new rate schedule of the New York Phone Co., which will be effective July 1st. Reduction of the rediscount rate is expected today. Such action could be construed in only one way—bullish. The market continues to buy on reactionary spots. The fact that the public is not yet in the stock market in a big way, puts one of the factors in its favor. The pool in Marland has signed a new agreement which will not expire until September 28.

Traction Stock Active On Steady Stock Market

TORONTO, June 24 (Canadian Press).—Traction stocks again led in activity in a comparatively inactive session of the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. The market was steady, fractional advances predominating among industrials and unlisteds.

Brazilian register an advance of only 3-8. It closed at 97 5-8. Barcelona was not so prominent as yesterday, fluctuating between its previous close and ¼ off at 34 and 34 3-4. British Columbia Fishing and Canadian Pacific showed considerable strength. Fishing made a net gain of 1 3-4 points at 74½. C.P.R. opened unchanged and then touched its high of 165 for a net gain of ½. Smelters exhibited weakness, closing off a half at 207½. Consumers Gas Common was up one point at 171. British American Oil was fairly active at 53¼ for a net gain of ¼. Imperial was also up the same amount at 36½. Hollinger advanced three cents per share at 19.88.

Amulet Makes Gain Other Stocks Take Drop

TORONTO, June 24 (Canadian Press). — Amulet was an active leader of the Standard Mining Exchange to-day. After opening off one point, it recovered later on, and closed at 1.32 for a net gain of three points.

Lake Shore was off ten cents at 11.35. Teck Hughes and Vipond closed one point lower at 3.63 and 1.71 respectively. Hollinger and Gold Hill were unchanged. Keeley and Capitol gained one point at 1.43 and 35½. Canadian Lorrain was unchanged. Noranda ranged up two points to down three points at 15.25 and 15.20.

General Advance Made But Volume Falls Off

NEW YORK, June 24. Canadian Press — Opposing speculative forces contested for control of to-day's stock market with the advantage resting largely on the side of those working for higher prices. Dealings fell off in volume.

Railroad stocks gave the best exhibition of strength. Nickel Plate advanced 5 points and led an upturn in Van Sweringen issues based on indications that a modified merger plan would soon be ready. Atlantic Coast line, Atchison and Canadian Pacific moved up 2 to 3½ points.

Motors were strengthened by the publication of Packard's record earning statement for the latest quarter.

United States Steel sold 1 3-8 points above its previous closing level.

Wheat Market Unsettled With General Setback

CHICAGO, June 24.— (Canadian Press.)— Unexpected strength in Liverpool quotations and rains in sections of south-western domestic wheat belt, gave wheat market here an unsettled start to-day. On all upturns profit-taking set in and as selling increased early bulge was quickly lost. Starting 3-8 cents lower to 1-2 cent higher, the wheat market steadied a trifle and then underwent a general set-back which carried values to below yesterday's finish. Corn and oats were governed largely by the action in wheat, corn opening unchanged to 3-8 cents higher and later suffering a decline all around.

Higher prices for hogs gave a lift to the provisions market.

PIANO RECITAL.

Pupils of Prof. Gliddon Play Many Interesting Numbers.

An interesting piano recital by pupils of Mr. Rupert Gliddon, director of the Conservatory of Music, was given in the hall of the Conservatory last evening. The selections by the pupils ranged from those played by members of junior years to interesting numbers by the seniors. They were played mainly from memory and demonstrated the quality of smooth technique and pleasing tone noticeable in pupils of Mr. Gliddon. The pupils were assisted by Jack Thackeray in violoncello numbers, played very well, with accompaniment by Mrs. W. M. Thackeray.

Several of the senior numbers included Rubenstein's "Kammenoi Ostrow," played by Miss Evelyn Armstrong, with much appreciative understanding. Miss Lillian Brown played Mendelssohn's "Capriccioso" with excellent effect, and Chopin's "Berceuse," played by Miss Agnes Grant, was a lovely selection. Miss Grant possesses a touch of pearly sweetness, executing with charming ease the difficult Cradle Song of the great master, with the intricate runs of the treble echoing over a rocking bass melody.

The sublime music of Beethoven was beautifully rendered by Miss Elizabeth Webber in the "Sonata in A flat," in which the young musician demonstrated an intelligent grasp of the difficult, fantastic composition which ranks next to the "Moonlight," and "Pathetique' sonatas in beauty and scope, including in its range five variations of the major theme and the sublime "March Funebre."

Miss Kathleen Sutton, whose playing is always very satisfying and artistic in the extreme, a clear firm touch combining with facility of rendition and beautiful, rounded tone to make her music most pleasing, gave a Paraphrase on one of the Strauss' Waltzes, with excellent effect.

Jack Thackeray played Schumann's "Traumerie" on the 'cello, in very pleasing fashion, and the numbers given by the Junior pupils were as follows: "Mazurka" (Lichner) by Jean Munroe. Minuet in G"(Bach) by Kenyon Choate; "Sonatina" (Kuhlau), by Hannah Botnick; "Sonatina" (Clementi) by Vernon Armstrong; "Bourree" (Bach) by Stewart Young; "Valsette" (Kirchner) by Ethel Williamson; "Narcissus" (Slater) by Lloyd Wells; "Sonatina" (Dusseck) by Russell Rowan; "Marionettes' (Schumann) by Delilah Skelcher; "June" (Tschaikowsky) by Olive Rome; "Sonata" (Beethoven) by Zetta Thompson, and "Sixth Variation" (Bethoven) by Mildred McGee.

REWRITE EXAMINATIONS.

Irregularities in Entrance Tests in London School Revealed.

LONDON, Ont., June 24. — In view of alleged irregularities in connection with preliminary entrance examination tests, all candidates in the principal's room at St. George's Public School have been instructed to re-write their 1926 tests. The Entrance Board held a special session, following reports of copying and other improper procedure during the holding of tests on which the principal bases his recommendation for pass standing. And in the investigation, which followed behind closed doors, candidates who were passed and who thus escaped the necessity of writing the regulation tests next week, were ordered to return to school and enter the field with those who did not obtain the principal's recommendation. There were some 33 pupils in the entrance class, and of this number, about 25 were recommended by the principal for entrance standing. The remaining eight were advised that they must write the entrance examination next week. Edward Wyatt, principal of St. George's School, said that the incident was nothing more than happened at any of the other schools in the city. It so happens, however, Mr. Wyatt states, that a parent whose child was not included in the recommended pupils, made the accusation that there had been copying. The investigation followed and some of the youngsters did admit that they had copied.

It is wort a thousand pounds a year to have the habit of looking on the bright side of things.

RESOURCES ISSUE HANDLING DISCUSSED

Orange Grand Master Condemns King Government's Decision.

OTTAWA, June 24 (Canadian Press).—In his address at the opening meeting of the Grand Orange Lodge of British North America, Dr. J. W. Edwards, the Grand Master, condemned the Federal Government's handling of the Alberta resources issue. Dr. Edwards said in part:

"The King Government at the dictation of the Quebec hierarchy has served notice on Alberta that she will not secure her resources except at the price of her freedom. It has also gone forth that Saskatchewan and Manitoba are to be similarly treated.

"I am confident that every Orangeman of Canada will unhesitatingly take up the gauge of battle now thrown down and announce to Federal and Provincial Governments, and all political parties, that our slogan is 'Hands off Alberta'."

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite Shawnee Okla.

Professor R. L. Jones, Superintendent of the schools of Memphis and formerly State Superintendent of public instruction of Tennessee, made the following statement relative to the status of the youth of to-day, compared to the youth of the preceding generation—

Changes wrought by inventions that have changed the ecomonic conditions of the people and modified their social life cannot help but have its influence on the young. The youth of former days lived on the farm and had plenty of work to do. To-day the majority of them live in the city with little to do outside of attending school. Work and early responsibility had a steadying influence on the youth of the preceding generation.

However, the youth of to-day is as sound at heart, possesses more wisdom, is better advanced in book learning, though less skilled in manual work, than the preceding generation.

If there is any falling down in our social organization, it is due to the breaking down of the home and not to the school, for the discipline in the schools of the country to-day is better than at any period in the history of the past. The chief conduct problems that the schools meet with grow out of the broken home, where father and mother either live together in constant disagreement or they have separated and left the children, robbed of the paternal training and care, which every child is due.

The children of the present generation, in my opinion, taken as a whole, are the most promising bunch of youngsters that have ever lived on the earth.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

GOCOMEBACK SETTLES A DISPUTE BETWEEN DONALD AND DEE.

"That's just like a girl!" exclaimed Donald, pulling in his fishing line. "You never can keep still. I almost had him that time. You had to yell."

"I'm sorry," Dee sighed. "But he made a grab for your bait and I thought you had him. You know, Donald, that looked for all the world like a shad."

"Which just goes to show you don't know anything about fish," snapped her brother. "Shad in a river? Shad always live in the ocean. The shad is a salt water fish."

"Just the same, I'll bet you that was a shad," retorted Dee.

"I'll bet you my new ——" began Donald, when a tiny hand on his arm stopped him. Donald and Dee turned around, to see a wee elfin smiling at them. "Well, Gocomeback, where did you come from?" Donald laughed.

"From the same old place," replied the elfin, "and just in time to save you from betting away your new pole and reel."

"But it's so silly," cried Donald. "Dee insists that the fish that was after my line was a shad, and you know shad live in the salt water."

"Well, there's only one way to settle an argument like that: we'll go down and ask Mrs. Fish herself. Come along." Gocomeback blew his magic breath on Donald and Dee and down they went under the waters of the river.

The fish in question saw them and came swimming over to greet them.

"I'm sorry I couldn't snap your bait,"

"There's Only One Way."

she stated, "but I've so much to do. You see, this is my spawning season. In other words, I must lay my eggs and hurry back home. How are you, Gocomeback?"

"Just fine," replied the elfin. "I want you to meet Donald and Dee, Mrs. Shad."

Donald and Dee looked at each other and then they laughed. "I'll take off my hat to you, sis," Donald cried. "You were right. But Mrs. Shad, I thought you were a salt water fish."

"So I am," replied Mrs. Shad. "But, you see, the danger of losing my eggs out in the ocean has driven me into the rivers. I used to lay them out in the ocean, but now I've found I get better results by coming into the rivers. There are not so many enemies to devour them. How did you know I was a shad, Dee?"

"Because I've seen so many shad before," replied Dee. "Are those small things your eggs?"

"Indeed they are," replied Mrs. Shad, "and in about ten days you'll see a dear little school of baby shad. After they have been schooled properly I'll take them out into the ocean with me to teach them the ways of the water world. That's why I'm glad you didn't catch me. Now, after I've taught the youngsters all I know I'll be glad to catch your bait. Excuse me now: I must hunt my dinner," and, flipping her tail, away she darted under the weeds.

Donald and Dee and Gocomeback hurried out on the bank, and when the children turned around to say something to the elfin he had disappeared. Gathering up their fishing tackle, they trotted home to lunch, both glad they hadn't caught Mrs. Shad.

Today's Fashion

This Smart French Child's Frock Is Made of Linen With Colored Appliques.

A smart shop which specializes in frocks for children is showing a collection of simple models in linen, which feature bright colored appliques.

Above is shown a gay little two-piece affair of light green linen, with just sufficient spots of color to make it effective. The applique design is of bright red cherries with dark green leaves, outlined with black wool thread.

There are two inset panels at the front, which open partway up to reveal cherry linen facing.

In calm weather the human voice will carry a distance of about 150 yards.

"Well, I suppose the boy would get a lot out of it."

Once again the head of the family passes out the old remark to the better half, when the junior member queries "Smatter Pop, aren't I going to the circus?"

Reason? The Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Greatest Show on Earth is to give two performances her tomorow. Its 1,600 people, menagerie of 1,000 animals, more than 800 horses and tons of properties and equipment will arrive at dawn from Belleville and pitch camp at the Exhibition Grounds.

A hundred double-length railroad cars are used to transport the personnel and paraphernalia of the "world's first and only five-ring circus." Advance agents in town today assert that the "five-ring" promise is not a figure of speech.

"It means that we carry and use five separate sets of ring banks. This makes it possible to introduce five companies of liberty horses at one time—twenty-four horses in a set. It means that we are now able to put on a quintet of elephant herds and so spread them down the entire length of the big-top. Our big-top is the largest ever built. The hippodrome track is wider than before. Aside from the liberty horses there is another horse act in which 200 thoroughbreds, each mounted by an expert, circle the entire track and lap over into the rings." The agent confirmed the report that there would be no street parade here, none having been given anywhere since 1921. Throughout tomorrow tickets may be bought at Bond's Drug Store, corner Hunter and George streets, as well as at the Circus grounds.

Of scores of features, here are some of the novelties: An entire congress of "cloud-swing" artists including performers who drop through space and catch to trapeze bars by one heel. Casting acts in which the flyer plunges across the dome of the big-top with head and shoulders encased in a sack. A driverless taxicab that answers the beck and call of the hundred clowns.

Companies of takraw players brought from Siam to give exhibitions of their native sports and games. Men who perform forward and backward somersaults on slender threads of steel. Athletes who turn double flip-flaps from the ground to the ground without a break, and others that leap from spring-boards to the top of a human column, "four men high". Funny kangaroos that box with comedy acrobats. Bears that dance on stilts, row boats and start, steer and stop automobiles. Police dogs that scale walls twenty feet high. Five companies of liberty horses performing in five different rings, and at the same time French poodles made up in perfect likeness of toy ponies imitating the five score of horses.

The quintet of rings make it possible to present five herds of peewee and giant elephants in a single display. The enlarged hippodrome track and added rings are at another time filled with the wonderful manuevers of two hundred mounted horses in the "Cavalcade of the Garlands." The mammoth Big Show program lasts for almost three hours and contains more than twenty complete displays, each introducing from a half dozen to sixteen acts. Eight hundred men and women artists appear singly, in duos, trios or in troupes. The entire performance is preceded by the most magnificent tournament the Ringling Brothers have yet devised and which includes such unique features as jewel-box tableau cars drawn by llamas and zebras in harness. Performances will begin at 2 and 8 and the doors leading into the menagerie of more than a thousand rare animals will open an hour earlier.

ADVENTURES of the TWINS

Number Twenty-one.—

THE DREAM-MAKER MAN FALLS OVERBOARD.

When the moon began to get bright again, the Man-in-the Moon said: "Now the moon is a boat. If you like you can go adventuring in it instead of in your broken airplane."

"I'd be glad to," said the Dream Maker Man.

"So should I," said Snore. "I get tired of my airplane sometimes."

"And so should we," said Nancy, speaking for herself and Nick. "I've always wanted to take a ride on the moon when it looks like a boat."

By that time the moon was like a small golden skiff, and they all climbed in. It never occurred to the Twins to wonder how it had shrunk from a large place with entire countries on it, to the size of a tiny boat.

"I'll row," said the Man-in-the Moon, sitting down in the middle and picking up a pair of oars.

Suddenly Nick shouted, "Where are Snore and the Dream Maker Man? They're gone!"

"Why, so they are!" said the Man-in-the-Moon calmly, looking over-board. "They must have fallen out. Oh, there they are! They landed on a comet so they're safe. They can ride around on that for a while."

He didn't seem to be a bit worried, and Nancy thought, "It's just because he's a moon person. Moon people seem never to worry about anything."

The Man-in-the-Moon started to row, and he rowed and rowed and kept on rowing while the Twins talked.

It seemed that they were always telling some new person how Inco, the china elephant with the roses all over him, and Flops, the toy clown, had run off, and come to the moon.

"Why did he think he was so queer?" asked the Man-in-the-Moon.

"Because he had roses painted on him," said Nick. "You see he was just a door-stop. Daddy said if he had had peanuts painted on him, it wouldn't have been so bad."

"Did Inco hear him say that?" asked the Man-in-the-Moon.

"Yes," said Nancy.

"I suppose his feelings were hurt," said the Moon Man, "but they need not have been. I can see all things from my house on the moon (when it's a big, full-grown moon) and I see all sorts of queer goings-on. The last circus I saw had elephants who wore queerer things than roses. Hats with feathers all over them, and dunce-caps, and one elephant even had a tambourine and a fan and wore a silver-lace mantilla over a high-comb on his head. He did a Spanish dance and kept time with the tambourine."

"Oh dear! I do wish we could find Inco and show him that," said Nancy. "The poor little fellow thinks he is the only queer elephant in the world."

"This moon certainly is growing," said the Man-in-the-Moon suddenly. "We can't use it for a boat any longer. It's more than half full now. The eclipse is going away."

So they sat quite still and the moon kept getting bigger and rounder until it was quite full-grown.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

FRIDAY JUNE 25.

According to the suling lunar transits for this day there is likely to be a sudden change or other abrupt visitation which may have bearing on the position and involve a change in environment. Those in the employment of others are enjoined to be careful lest this condition precipitate something unwelcome. However, properly managed, the affairs may develop to advantage, and the financial outlook is well fortified. New undertakings are encouraged, although there may be small delays and anxieties.

Those whose birthday it is might prepare themselves for a sudden change, possibly bringing new environment or travel, but those in employment should not wilfully invite censure or dismissal. Yet new undertakings may bring advantage, where the finances may be manipulated. Small worries and delays are but passing detriments. A child born on this day may be ambitious and enterprising and should make a better success on its own account than in the employment of others.

PLAY SAFE

When yer feelin' kinda groggy, and yer pep begins ta droop, an' the path ya tread is soggy, an' ya just don't give a hoop, you had better pay attention to yer system. Lissen here, you will pardon if I mention that there's somethin' outa gear.

It ain't natural for a fella to go sluffin' through the day, and it ain't because he's yella, 'cause most men 'er not that way. If, in anything yer doin', it is tough to go along. Watch yer step. There's sumpthin' brewin' an' that sumpthin's, frankly, wrong.

Now and then we all get lazy. Feel like loafin' as we please, but when every outlook's hazy—well, yer flirtin' with disease. Maybe overwork has done it. Too much toil and little play. When a fella's once begun, comes the time when he must play.

After all, the road to travel is the one of go-between. Mix your work with play—unravel brain that might grow over-keen. Under-doing, over-doing, always at your own expense. Breakdown is the thing that's brewing. Why not use good common sense?

YOUR HEALTH

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

A dispatch from Maine said a "germ carrier is being looked for at the university.

A number of cases o typhoid ever developed in one of the fraternity houses Not locating any apparent cause for the disease it was decided to find a carrier if one existed.

Whenever an epidemic of typhoid occurs, or an unusual number of cases are met, the health authorities make search to see what is wrong. Usually the water supply or the milk is determined upon as the offending agent.

Typhoid fever is caused by germs which are taken into the digestive organs with the food or drink. The question in every case is, how did the germs get into the food?

In a good many instances, oysters have been the means of carrying the germs. When the authorities awakened to this fact thorough examinations were made of the oyster beds to find out what was wrong. In some cases it was discovered that sewage was being carried into the bays where the oysters were grown.

I am glad to say society is being protected against this danger. No longer can oysters be sold from beds polluted by contaminated waters. It is insisted on that oysters be grown in locations free from the dangers of sewage infection.

Milk from one farm may contaminate the milk supply of a large community. In every epidemic the milk falls under suspicion at once. Pasteurization has done wonders in overcoming this danger.

But there is always the danger that a typhoid carrier may cause an epidemic of the disease. Among food handlers—cooks, waiters, or others who actually handle the food—there may be one who is a constant carrier of the germs of this dread disease.

Any person who has ever had typhoid, even in a mild form, may be a carrier of typhoid germs for the rest of his life. The gall bladder becomes infected and, since it is just suited for the growth of germs, the typhoid organism will continue to multiply and for years and years that person is a menace to society.

In one of the large cities of America is a woman, practically a prisoner in the custody of the health officials. To her have been traced a large number of cases of typhoid, many of them fatal. "Typhoid Mary" is known everywhere for the havoc she has wrought.

It is not safe to discharge as cured any case of typhoid until the attending physician has made sure there is no further danger to society. Repeated examination of the intestinal discharges are necessary to determine the absence of the typhoid germs.

The typhoid carrier is a real danger and health officials are fully justified in being very rigid in their handling.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES.

M. N. H. Q.—What will remove superfluous hair from the lip and chin, and where may I get this treatment?

* * *

A.—This may be done by the electric needle. However, it requires the skill of an expert doctor. If you will apply at a hospital in your vicinity they will recommend a skin specialist who will give you this treatment.

E. G. R. Q.—A friend of mine has a lump under the skin on the left jaw, which discharges once in a while. What treatment does this require?

* * *

A.—This may be a cyst and if so it probably should be removed. I would suggest that your friend consult a doctor and have him advise the necessary treatment.

HOPE LADIES WIN FROM C. G. E. IN SPITE OF LAST INNING RALLY

Local Girls Score Seven in Ninth, But Lead Proves Too Great.

FINAL SCORE 17-11

Loose Fielding on Both Sides Due to Slippery Condition of Field.

Seven runs scored in the ninth inning were not enough to overcome the lead of thirteen which the Hope Ladies had piled up through the previous eight innings of their game with the C.G.E. Ladies, and as a result the visitors won out by a score of 17-11. The game was loose, no less than twenty erros being made by the two teams, but this was due largely to the downpour of rain which came yesterday afternoon and almost forced the transfer of the fixture to the Armories. However, the great ninth inning rally of the losers made up for any bad play in the earlier innings and the customers went away satisfied.

Failure to hit when hits meant runs, coupled with errors at critical moments, cost the home team the game. Babe Vincent pitched a good game, although she was a trifle wild, but the opposing hitters broke through her delivery with runners on the sacks, crashing out a total of fifteen hits. Her opponent was given better support, especially in the pinches, and held the locals to ten hits.

Every girl on the winning team except Dot Price made at least one safe hit, while Marge Omerod, last year's catcher, who played centre field last night, made four, including one double. They had no inning to compare with the home team's big ninth, but four innings with three runs in each contributed a substantial portion of their count. They took advantage of every opportunity and wasted only one hit of their fifteen.

Dorothy Mortimer led the C.G.E. batters, being the only one to get an extra hit. Three of their ten hits came in innings which proved scoreless, while runners placed on the sacks through errors of the opposing team were also left stranded at times. In one inings seven batters faced Miss Price but only one run was scored, a strike-out retiring the side when the bases were full.

Both infields made numerous slips but Manager Pilling's girls were away off. Miss Vincent was the only girl to field grounders with any precision, although Miss Greenhalgh made some nice stops and throws. The home team made a snappy double play when Miss Gilding went to second on a fly in front of the plate which Miss Mortimer gathered in nicely, throwing to first to complete the play.

One for the book was pulled in the third inning when Miss Connors stole second with the bases full. The Hope catcher threw to third instead of to second and the runner went back safely.

Five of the ladies who took part in yesterday's game were on the Hope team which beat the C.G.E. Ladies in the Canadian National Exhibition tournament last fall. They are Misses N. Barnard, M. Ormerod, E. Thomas, E. McArthur, and Dot Price. All played the same positions this year except Miss Omeros, who caught last year but played centre field last night.

After the game the members and officers of the two teams assembled in Hoopers' parlors, where a supper was served, followed by speeches by representatives of both clubs.

LADIES' GOLF FINAL TO BE PLAYED TODAY

Miss Leitch and Mrs. Garon Are Contestants at Harlech.

HARLECH, Wales, June 24 (Canadian Press) — Miss Cecil Leitch and Mrs. P. Garon, both of England, today will fight for the British women's golf championship.

In the semi-final round yesterday afternoon Miss Leitch eliminated Mlle. Simone de la Chaume, the "Suzanne of golf." Miss Leitch, by her defeat of the young French star, achieved some measure of revenge for her recent defeat by Mlle. de la Chaume in the finals of the French women's championship.

Mrs. Garon, the former Miss M. Parkinson, eliminated Mrs. R. J. McNair, of Oxhey, in the other semi-final round, two up. Mrs. Caron was the winner of the Essex women's championship in 1923, 1924, 1925.

FIVE AMERICANS HEAD THE CARD IN BRITISH OPEN

Field Day for Visitors in Golf Championship at St. Annes.

HAGEN FIRST

Course Record Broken Twice by Yanks in One Day.

ST. ANNES, England, June 24.—(Canadian Press).—The first round of the British open golf championship developed into an invaders' field day such as Great Britain has never before seen, with Walter Hagen leading a field of famous international players with a record eighteen-hole round of 68.

Four other United States players finished close behind Hagen. Bill Mehlhorn of Chicago was in second place with a 70; Al Watrous and Fred McLeod third with a pair of 71's ,and Bobby Jones fifth with a 72.

Never before have British golfing fans witnessed a more impressive exhibition than this. Mehlhorn's superb 70, knocking a stroke off the St. Annes record since the course became a championship layout, was scarcely less brilliant than the recovery of Jones after a disappointing start.

Then came Hagen's stunning 68, making the second time that the course record was shattered in a single day. Three thousand spectators saw the veteran star post one of the finest rounds of his competitive career. His sensational march over the St. Anne's fairways saw him reach the thirteenth before he required more than par for a single hole, and here a topped second shot resulted in a five.

R. A. Whitcombe, youthful English player, and Tom Wilson, of Scotland, were the first Britons after the leaders. Each took a stroke more than Jones.

If Hagen should repeat his sensational spurt to-day, there will be a big cut in the field of 117 players, since rules of the tournament require all those having scores of fifteen strokes or more higher than the leader to drop out. The remainder of the contestants will continue through the 36-hole final tomorrow, with total scores for the 72 holes to decide possession of the title.

"Hagen is so far ahead, and is so difficult to catch when once going, that I fear there won't be many of us chasing him Friday," said Abe Mitchell, British favorite, who finished ten strokes behind the leader yesterday.

British Amateurs.

The leading British amateur yesterday was Rex Hartley with a 76. He played with a bandeau bound around his head and harness to support his shoulder. The veteran, J. H. Taylor, who was winning British tournaments before Bobby Jones was born, returned a fine 75, and hasn't lost hope, although critics generally concede that even by the most sensational playing, Great Britain has but a slim chance to save the open crown.

Tommy Armour finished eighth with a fine 74, while George Von Elm, amateur from Los Angeles, California, was a stroke behind in a tie with J. H. Taylor, George Duncan, Arthur Havers, James McDowell of Prestwick, and J. Bradbeer of Porter's Park.

A stroke further down appeared the name of Emmett French of Youngstown, Ohio, tied at 78 with Archie Compston, Antonio Perez of Argentina, and three others. Abe Mitchell and Ted Ray at 78 were tied with six other players, while Cyril Walker, former United States open champion, was locked with Roland MacKenzie, Washington, D. C., amateur, at 79.

The veteran Harry Vardon and George Gadd, one of Britain's strongest hopes, both posted 80's.

ENGLAND WINS

Touring Soccer Team Wins in Victoria 5 to 1

VICTORIA, June 24 (Canadian Press) — England's touring soccer team scored their eleventh straight victory of their present tour last night at Royal Park when they defeated the pick of Victoria 5 to 1.

Jesse Sweetster, of New York, who is the first American to win the British golf title in 22 years, defeating Simpson, the runner-up, 6 up and 5 to go. He was recently married to Miss Nan Lewis, Toronto society girl.

SUZANNE LENGLEN INDISPOSED AND COULD NOT PLAY YESTERDAY

Temperamental Frenchwoman Had a Recurrence of Nervous Affection—Did Not Know She Was Due to Play and Declined to Contest Two Games in One Day

QUEEN MARY A SPECTATOR

WIMBLEDON, Eng., June 24 (Canadian Press) — Queen Mary came to Wimbledon yesterday to see Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen perform in the golden jubilee tennis tournament, but Mlle. Lenglen would not set foot on the courts.

Suzanne had been delayed in reaching the ground by a breakdown in her motor, and soon rumors were in the air that she had a return of the nervous manifestations by which she is occasionally afflicted.

The crowds became uneasy, but Queen Mary sat quietly, in her gray silk and silver-gray turban, unconscious for a time of the agitation that was going on within the confines of the clubhouse in an effort to bring the temperamental Suzanne of a realization that the queen was waiting to see her play.

Suzanne was not to be gainsaid. She was in an extremely nervous condition, she explained. She had been ill overnight, she had suffered from the heat and, finally, she declined to play in two matches on the one day—the singles and the doubles.

Borotra was summoned to the royal box to explain as he might the whole sad affair. The queen was very gracious, and learning that Mlle. Lenglen had a recurrence of a nervous affection, accepted in kindly manner Borotra's statement, rendered somewhat explosively in halting English, and the apologies of the offials for the non-appearance of the champion. She could well understand, she said, that the indisposition of a player might upset the schedule for the day.

Eventually the tournament committee decided to postpone both matches.

Last night Mlle. Lenglen was reported at her hotel "abed and resting," and it was hoped she would be well enough to play today.

The Daily Mail quotes Mlle. Lenglen as saying this evening: "I really hadn't any idea I was due to play today and certainly not two matches I saw no announcement in the newspapers that I was to play and nobody told me.

"Yesterday I rushed away from Wimbledon suffering from a horrid cold in the nose and went to see my doctor. He made me feel a little better, but this morning I felt worse again. I think I caught a germ in the sun which makes it all the worse.

"This afternoon when they told me I was waited for at Wimbledon I hurried off as quickly as I could, not feeling at all well.

"I do hope I shall be better tomorrow, but if I am not, it is extremely doubtful whether I shall play at all. I am afraid they won't postpone the match if I don't."

Men's Singles

The Frenchmen continued to show brilliant tennis in the afternoon in the mens' singles, Brugnon, Cochet and Borotra, that scintillating trio, taking their matches rather easily.

Jacques Brugnon eliminated D. Zemla, of Czecho-Slovakia, 6-3, 6-0, 6-2. Zemla is considered a fine doubles player, but was no match for the Frenchman in the singles.

Henri Cochet, French hard court champion, defeated the English player, R. Bernard, with the greatest ease, although the latter has a fast service and is a powerful driver.

Jean Borotra had a bad start against A. H. Fyzee, of England, losing the first set, but he settled down and won the next three sets, one of which went to deuce.

Ladies' Games

Betty Nuthall, the little English tennis prodigy, for whom much had been predicted, was put out of the series by Mrs. M. Watson, also of England, 6-3, 6-0. The sixteen year old girl's underhand service was weak, although the rest of her game had flashes of brilliancy.

Miss Joan Fry, among the best of the English players, defeated her youthful compatriot, Eillen Bennett, in a well contested three-set match, 6-3, 4-6, 7-5.

RICKARD DECLARES FIGHT WILL GO ON

Will Match Dempsey and Tunney Beyond New York State.

NEW YORK, June 24 (Canadian Press) — The heavyweight championship match between Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney will be held on September 16, "somewhere west of the Hudson River," Tex Rickard declared yesterday.

The promotor indicated that he is dickering with interests in Chicago which might promote the match in the Soldiers' Field Stadium. He also said that he has an invitation from Mayor Hague of Jersey City to take the match to the big pine saucer at Boyle's Thirty Acres, scene of the 1921 championship fight between Dempsey and Georges Carpentier.

"The action of the New York state athletic commission yesterday in legislating the match out of New York will not affect the principals or the date one iota," declared Rickard.

Although it costs many thousands of dollars to maintain Fulham Palace, the Bishop of London's residence, only about two rooms are used by the Bishop for his personal needs.

BILLY EVANS Says

Baseball Golfers.

Is golf a good thing for major league ball players?

Ten years ago the playing of golf by big league stars was a matter of no great concern because only a limited few indulged.

However, in the last five years the golf problem has become a serious one for most big league managers. It was encroaching so much on the game that with some of the athletes golf conversation had the call over baseball.

In spring training, an dduring the regular season, golf attire became so popular that the athletes, while lolling around the hotel lobby, looked more like Walker cup golf stars than big leaguers.

On some clubs golf became such a menace that an absolute ban was placed on the game. While not all managers treated the subject so seriously, golf in moderation was the slogan of the majority.

The chief objection to golf during the season was not that the game impaired the ability of the player, but rather it took too much out of him physically and thereby affected his diamond play.

Compares Sports.

Along these lines I read a very interesting article in Golfers' Magazine recently in which Griffith Bonner drew a comparison between golf and baseball. He says:

"In golf one usually plays 18 holes while in baseball one plays nine innings. These innings in the mind of the golfer might represent nine holes.

"In baseball the object is to make as many runs or points as possible, while in golf the fewest strokes determine the winner.

"Bat boys in baseball are the equivalent to caddies in golf, and, like golf, baseball has its direction flags.

"In golf a player must drive straight down the fairway to keep from going out of bounds, while in baseball a hit is fair or foul as to its direction after it passes the bases or over the fence.

"Baseball has its bunt similar to the putt in golf. A 'Texas Leaguer' in baseball might be likened to the approach shot in golf."

The writer goes along in this vein and draws many interesting conclusions between the two sports. He also makes several suggestions, one of which would hardly meet with the approval of the baseball fans. Here it is:

* * *

Scoring Reform.

"Since the sport public is always looking for short cuts and thrills, we wonder if a baseball game played according to the formula of golf would speed up the situation.

"For example, play the game as if it were nine holes, each inning a contest. Thus:

"Chicago and New York scored a run in the first inning, this would be a halved hole.

"In the second inning Chicago cored a run and New York none, putting Chicago one up.

"On this basis we reach the eighth inning with Chicago three innings or holes to the good and only two innings or holes to play, since nine innings constitute a game.

"Golfingly speaking, at this stage the game would be over, Chicago winning three up and two to go. Thus the fans would be spared sitting around while the two unnecessary innings were played."

* * *

Thrill of Sport.

While I realize the writer was treating the situation humorously when he suggested changing the baseball scoring to the golf system, such a stunt would never make a hit with the fans.

One of the biggest thrills in baseball is made possible by the method of scoring used. That is, in one big inning a team that has trailed throughout the game can overcome a big handicap to win.

KINGSTON LOSES FIRST OF SEASON

Belleville Wins Game Which Barely Goes Legal Limit

BELLEVILLE, Ont., June 24 — The Canadian Nationals administered a trimming to the Kingston Ponies yesterday by a score of 3-1. Rain commenced to fall in the midst of Belleville's fifth inning and the umpires called the game and after thirty minutes had elapsed hostilities were ceased for the day when the downpour continued. This is the first C.O.B.L. game of the season in which the Ponies have been defeated but they still retain a commanding lead over the other two teams. Oulette and Mills were in the points for Belleville, while Young and Arneil formed the battery of the visitors. Weir and Batstone got the two long hits of the fray.

Score by innings:
Kingston .. ..10000—1 6 2
Belleville .. ..00111—3 5 0

SECRETS OF STARS ON INSIDE BASEBALL

by Billy Evans

BY JOE DUGAN.

DUGAN

The third baseman is the "either you do or don't" member of a ball club.

No player on the field must jump at conclusions more quickly Most balls are hit in his direction so sharply that he has but little opportunity to judge their bound.

The third baseman does things intuitively. On fast-hit balls every third baseman always makes an attempt to get directly in front of the ball if possible, because this considerably increases his chances of properly executing the play.

Sharply hit balls to his left side must be handled in the glove hand, as a rule, while it is up to him to take care of balls hit to his extreme right as best he can.

In baseball one does a great many things by intuition. No one more so than the third-sacker.

In other words, in making a play on a hard-hit ball where you have no time to judge the bound, the third baseman simply puts his hands where he figures the ball will come if the bound remains true. He trusts to luck that he will either come up clean with the ball or knock it down, enabling him to make the play just the same.

Batters make the playing of third base a more difficult job because they are constantly keeping their eye on just how deep the custodian of the bag is playing, so they can mix up their stuff.

This forces the third-sacker to make a careful study of the batsman's style, in an effort to divine his intentions and profit thereby. In a later article I will explain how this can be done.

Diamond Disputes Decided

by Billy Evans

In what situation must an umpire, after ruling infield fly on the batter, reverse his decision?

* * *

A high wind has several times in the major leagues, and often in the minors and the amateur ranks, so embarrassed the umpire.

When the umpire with first and second, or first, second and third occupied, and less than two out, rules infield fly, it is supposed to automatically retire the batsman.

The moment the umpire believes an infielder can handle a fly ball with such conditions existing, he should at once declare infield fly.

With a high wind blowing it is possible for such a fair hit ball, that has been ruled an infield fly, to finally drop into foul territory without being touched by any player.

This, of course, makes the drive a foul ball. Since there can be no infield fly on a foul ball, the umpire must reverse himself and permit the batsman to hit over.

The vagaries of the wind upset the umpire's original ruling.

HELPFUL HINTS BY GOLFING STARS

By Special Arrangement With Colliers' Magazine.

FRANCIS OUIMET—JUDGING DISTANCES.

Nothing is more deceptive than distance. In golf the player is constantly moving about and trying various links so he should be a good judge. Tournament players just have to be, else they crack at odd moments for no other reason than failure to know how far it is to the green.

Too many golfers depend on the other fellow. That is the wrong theory. There is more to the game than copying the play of an opponent, especially if he is better than you. No two champions use the same weapons. They get home by different routes. Each is a star because he knows his limitations with his clubs.

That is usually the way with the average golfer. He thinks he knows all about it.

Golf holes are deceptive as to length, some more than others. No one can rely on guesswork as to distance.

There is one sure plan to follow in judging the length of any hole!—follow the score card. On it is the distance in yards. By doing that you then know what you have to do. And you can figure it out with mathematical precision if you have made it a point to remember the distances of various holes you know well.

SOFTBALL GAMES AT CENTRAL PARK

Two Fast Encounters Planned For Saturday Afternoon—Important Struggles.

Softball fans will have two real games to watch on Saturday afternoon, when Belmonts and C.G.E., and Triple Link and Brintons meet at Central Park in scheduled encounters.

The first game, at 2.30, will be one of the season's best. The League leading Belmonts have lost only one game, that being to their opponents of Saturday, and are out for revenge. The Electricians are sure that their first win was well earned and that they can repeat the dose.

The teams who meet in the second game, at 3.45, are among the strongest in the League, and will provide a rare battle before the deciding tally is scored. Altogether it will be a good entertainment for Saturday afternoon, and should be witnessed by a large crowd.

WHITEHOUSE WINS AS RELIEF PITCHER

Sent in in Third and Holds Opponents Scoreless.

Pitching before the largest crowd of the season at Grand Rapids on Sunday, Frank Whitehouse, the local southpaw, was sent in with one man out in the third and the bases full. At the time the score was 2-0 in favor of Port Huron. Frankie held the visitors scoreless for the five and two-thirds innings he worked, allowing only two hits, while he struck out two. He helped his team along with a sacrifice hit.

In writing to Alex Kay, Frank tells of acquiring a good change of pace, while his curves are working as well as ever. He has won five and lost two games and is getting along well. This is what a Grand Rapids paper has to say about his work in Sunday's game:

"Whitehouse relieved Salter in the fourth frame with the bases filled and gave the crowd a thrill by retiring the side scoreless, forcing Wilson at the plate and making Brewer pop out to Powell. The 20-year old Canadian southpaw pitched superbly the remainder of the game, allowing but two hits, one of which came in the eighth and one in the ninth.

"On the eighth Tubbs, hero of Saturday's win for Port Huron over Grand Rapids, walked to the pan as a pinch hitter. His presence, however, did not awe Whitehouse, even with the tying run on first base, and he proceeded to strike him out, while the crowd shouted its approval."

HOLLYWOOD. — Florence Vidor's phenomenal and triumphal rise to screen heights in recent months, officially signalized by Paramount stardom, coincided with a profound emotional readjustment based on her personal domestic life. She had ceased being, in a romantic sense, the clinging vine.

As the wife of King Vidor, director, she had been a marked example of the clinging type, despite her own professional independence as a capable actress. But marital distress resulted in separation.

Florence began emerging from her shell in "The Trouble With Wives," which hinted at a playful buoyancy. She stepped out with a sparkle and a dash in "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter."

Audiences began to perk up and give eye to a new and positively alluring Vidor. They noted that she had bobbed her hair, and that she had broken her short tether of conventional roles.

Hollywood began to flutter about her with most flattering attention. Fan mail swelled to huge proportions. The gracious, but somewhat aloof orchid was transformed into a rose.

She will be seen next in "Sea Horses," and then in "Love Magic," written especially for her by the Hungarian playwright Vadja.

Curve Lake deefated the clubmen at Curve Lake last Saturday and are confident of winning here. The game will start at six o'clock.

Raybestos and Crescents play the second game in the city series next Tuesday evening. The opening game made a hit with the fans and a big crowd for the second contest is certain. Crescents are making an effort to add some batting strength to the team and if successful will be a large-sized argument for Raybestos.

Six other United States players were bunched closely behind them, all with better aggregates than the lowest scoring Britisher.

Mystery and Romance in New Warner Bros. Classic of the Screen.

"The Fighting Edge," the Warner Bros. Classic of the Screen which opens to-day at the Regent Theatre, is a thrilling melodrama of the Mexican border, with desperadoes, a hunted house, mystery and crime lightened by the gleam of comedy and the charm of romance.

Patsy Ruth Miller and Kenneth Harlan make their initial appearance together in this production, which is based on the exciting novel of William McLeod Raine, and was directed by Henry Lehrman.

"The Fighting Edge" was adapted to the screen by E. T. Lowe, Jr., and Jack Wagner, and has in its cast Pat Hartigan, W. A. Carroll, Lew Harvey, Eugene Palette, Pat Harmon and "Red" Kirby.

GOLF HUMOR

Bobby Jones Has to Pay Half Crown Admission to Stand

STANNES ON THE SEA, June 24 (United News)—Two incidents in connection with the open golf tournament caused Britishers to laugh and frown. In the first, they got a good laugh because Bobby Jones had to pay sixty cents to gain admittance in the stands. He had forgotten his card and the man at the gate did not recognize him. The other incident was the appearance in the newspapers of cartoons depicting John Bull as a depressed shop keeper who stands idly by while Uncle Sam runs off with golf honors, France with tennis, and Australia with cricket.

DODGE BROTHERS SALES SHOW LARGE INCREASE

Shipments of Passenger and Commercial cars from the Toronto factory of Dodge Brothers (Canada), Limited, for the first five months of this year show an increase of 63 per cent. over the same period of last year and exceed by 14 per cent. shipments for the entire year of 1925.

The fact that this great increase is shared by practically every part of Canada is strong indication that the tide of prosperity is rapidly returning to the Dominion.

It is already assured that the records for this month will far surpass any previous shown in the history of the Company.

Dodge Brothers' Dealers throughout Canada are optimistic regarding business for the balance of the year and although the peak of the year's business is usually almost over by this time, there are strong indications that the same relative increase will be maintained for the balance of the year.

Truck Sales Indicate Prosperity.

For the five months' period ending May 31st, 1926, shipments from Graham Brothers' Toronto factory show an increase of 160 per cent. over the same period of last year and were 12 per cent. greater than for the entire year of 1925.

Mr. Eastwood, local dealer, attributes this phenomenal increase to the lower prices of Graham Brothers trucks, the introduction of the new, attractively priced 1-ton G-Boy and to the large number of satisfied users as well as to the fact of the general increase in prosperity. Graham Brothers' organization is becoming widely known in Canada as the Truck Division of Dodge Brothers (Canada) Limited.

BILLY EVANS SAYS.

Pitching Supreme

Pitching is still paramount in major league baseball.

Speed is once more a prominent factor due to the less lively ball, and accuracy in the field is most essential, but, after all, the most important feature of the game is pitching.

Washington has a great ball club, but it must get pitching to win. If the veteran members of the twirling staff fail to go the route, the Nationals are sunk.

When the American League champs get good pitching the club looks like the flashiest aggregation in the league.

The Yankees have a powerful punch at the bat. However, if you get six runs and the opposition manages to drag seven tallies across, the punch is wasted.

Ask any big league manager about his prospects and his opinion invariably will be that the club's chances rest with its pitching.

Pinch-Hitters

Not so many years ago little help at bat was expected from members of a pitching staff.

Times have changed, however, and now many of the best hitters in the major leagues are the pitchers.

Take three of the veteran members of the Washington staff, Walter Johnson, Dutch Reuther and Joe Bush. All are mighty dangerous when swinging the ash.

As a matter of fact, all three have won reputations as pinch-hitters aside from their twirling ability. When Washington needs a good right-hander in the crisis, Johnson and Bush often get the call. Reuther is often the choice when a left-handed hitter is desired.

For years Johnson has played pinch-hitting roles at Washington. The same with Joe Bush when he was with the New York Americans. Reuther first won prestige in that line as a National Leaguer. He has continued it in the American.

Drastic Action

Manager John McGraw of the New York Giants is one manager who refuses to stand pat when his club isn't winning.

McGraw has the courage of his convictions. If he feels a certain shift will help his team, he goes through with it, regardless of how drastic it may seem.

The Giants looked great in spring training. It seemed as if McGraw would get much better pitching. That was one thing he lacked last season.

His catching appeared a bit uncertain, and the soundness of Shortstop Jackson's knee was of much concern to McGraw.

So far the club hasn't got the pitching McGraw expected. The catching has wobbled a bit. Jackson's knee has twice failed him; his injury looks to be very serious; perhaps permanent.

Laboring under those handicaps, the Giants have failed to show pennant form. Disposing of the two veterans, Groh and Nehf, makes it apparent there is going to be a house-cleaning in New York.

You may temporarily halt John McGraw and his ball club but there is no permenently stopping 'em.

Promising Rookies

During the last five years high-class ball players have been passing out faster than the recruits have been making good.

In the two major leagues there are a number of clubs that are becoming antiquated. There is a decided need of young blood to take the places of the passing stars.

Several clubs are experimenting this year, particularly with infielders.

To my way of thinking, the most improved young ball player in the majors is Fred Spurgeon of the Cleveland club. He is a year or two from being an outstanding star, but he certainly seems on the way. Every day he shows improvement in his play.

Detroit, by the way, has a classy-looking youngster in Gehringer, and the Yankees have another in Lazzeri.

Energy Used In Seeing

A person's body produces a certain amount of energy to perform the daily duties. Some of this energy is required for seeing. If the eyes are not normal too much energy is used in seeing and less is furnished other parts of the body, which results in headaches and other troubles. NO INVESTIGATION INTO KLAN AFFAIRS

TORONTO, June 24. — (Canadian Press.)— The possibility of a general investigation into the activities of the Ku Klux Klan in Ontario was practically removed today, when the Hon. W. F. Nickle, Attorney General of Ontario, issued a statement revealing that assurance had been given him by Klan officials that the organization stood for law and order and that they would use every effort to facilitate the capture of law breakers who used the Klan as a vehicle to further their own ends.

House Adjourns Without Vote After Debating For Whole Day On Customs Committee Report

Adjournment Comes Just Before One O'clock When It Is Apparent That There Will Be Several Hours' More Debate Before Vote Is Taken.

PREMIER AND OPPOSITION LEADER TAKE PART IN HEATED DISCUSSION

Speaker Kept Busy Restraining Members, Whose Tempers Are Worn By Several Days of Intensive Conflict—Vote This Evening.

OTTAWA, June 25 (Canadian Press) — The House of Commons adjourned at 12.55 o'clock this morning, when it became apparent that a vote could not be reached for some hours on the customs report. The adjournment was moved by M. C. Campbell (Progressive, Mackenzie, Sask.) who will resume the debate at two o'clock this afternoon. The house hopes to divide in time for the members to catch the night trains on Friday.

Liberals and Conservatives brought forward their heaviest artillery yesterday, Premier King participating on behalf of the Liberals and the Right Hon. Arthur Meighen following him and up-holding the Conservative contention that the government has forfeited the confidence of the people and the country.

The strain of days of intensive conflict is telling and the temper of the house flared up on several occasions. Mr. Speaker has had his hands full keeping the house in order, although nothing comparable with the turmoil during Mr. Woodsworth's presentation of the sub-amendment occurred yesterday.

The outstanding statement of the day was that of the Prime Minister who declared that if Senator Jacques Bureau, former customs minister, whose conduct is condemned in the commission report, fails to clear himself before the proposed judicial tribunal, he will ask Mr. Bureau to give up his seat in the Senate. The declaration was greeted with applause from the Liberals.

The house was packed to capacity yesterday afternoon when Mr. Speaker Lemieux rose to his feet and gave his ruling on the sub-amendment offered Wednesday by Mr. Woodsworth of Centre Winnipeg. Mr. Speaker, after reading in full referred to the objection made by Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, leader of the opposition, who had declared that the sub-amendment was out of order on the ground that it did not deal with the subject matter of the main amendment.

"There can be no doubt of the relevancy of the sub-amendment," said Mr. Speaker.

"The main amendment deals with the administration of the customs department and offers condemnation on minister and officials. Mr. Woodsworth would eliminate that part and offers an alternative proposal. The decision of the house is supreme, but my ruling is that the sub-amendment is perfectly in order." (Loud government and Progressive applause.)

Not New Problem.

The prime minister received a sustained ovation when he rose to his feet after the Speaker's ruling.

He referred to the long enquiry and the report thereon dealing with an evil which had grown in recent years. The government, he declared, was willing to accept the report of the committee in full, believing it embodied what was in the best interests of the country and the present time.

As for the two amendments, Mr. Stevens' could be classified as a political, partisan, destructive amendment. The Woodsworth amendment was a constructive amendment intended to permit of the carrying on of the investigation of the house committee in a manner to make more effective the recommending for the improvement of the service.

Mr. King reviewed the problem which he said was one created by new conditions developed on this continent within the last few years. The problem was not peculiar to Canada. The United States had to face the problem also. The boundary line extended over 4,000 miles over all classes of natural geography.

To enforce the customs laws, the entire boundary had to be protected. If the U.S. with 100,000,000 found it difficult to protect that boundary against smugglers, how much more difficult was it for Canada? The United States could afford to take greater measures and spend more on the protection. The U.S. has found it had to increase its measures and extend them to a degree never before contemplated by any country.

Is Difficult Problem.

Premier King referred to the negotiations between Canada and Great Britain looking toward the extension of the limit of search on the high seas from three to twelve miles. This was, he said, a very important departure from anything which the faith in the genuineness of the government's intentions and wished to strengthen the government's arm instead of destroying the ministry as hon. gentlemen opposite wish to do.

The premier emphasized the difficulty which a leader of the government encountered in dealing with public servants. There were few civil servants who did not have their enemies though they might be doing faithful service. The name of Bisaillon had been mentioned and his dismissal had been asked for by Mr. Sparks. "I asked that direct charges should be made," said the premier. "I take the view that a public servant must be protected until direct charges are made. (Applause.) That was the position the government was in with respect to Bisaillon."

Wanted Bisaillon Fired.

Mr. Sparks said Bisaillon was a crook, he ought to be dismissed. But the government had a responsibility and could not dismiss a man without cause or on general grounds, nor make a martyr of him. So Mr. Sparks was asked to make specific charges. The preventive officers were asked to concentrate on the suspected men. The government was not shielding criminals. It was paying detectives and they were to report to the protective association.

In the course of an interview Inspector Duncan had said to the prime minister that he was handicapped by the custom of the department requiring a report to be made to the department before an arrest could be made. The prime minister and the minister of finance had told Inspector Duncan to make the arrests and they would stand squarely behind him. The government not only gave the association some detectives but gave them special powers. Departmental regulations were even changed to assist them.

Offered Co-operation.

The premier declared that Hon. Jacques Bureau had throughout offered the co-operation of his officers to the protective association and in every particular sought to land in jail everyone who was guilty of an offense. "We were out," he said, "not simply to dismiss a few employes, but to clear the whole thing up."

"Why, then," asked Mr. Stevens, "was the power of apprehension taken away in August after the notorious Cohen had been taken?"

"I don't know that it was taken away," replied the premier.

"The protective association had their detectives round Bisaillon's office. Surely they could have found if he was guilty. We wanted to find out. Mr. Bureau declared that if Mr. Sparks could find an offence against Bisaillon he would be dismissed. I went further and told Mr. Sparks. 'Give me a chance and I will appoint a royal commission to go into the whole business of smuggling. Make definite charges'."

Needed Evidence.

Mr. King said he had told Mr. Sparks he need not make the charge against Bisaillon personally. There were three or four detectives who could have done so. Inspector Duncan could have done it.

Mr. Meighen: "Did you give all that in evidence."

Mr. King: "No, I'm giving it to parliament—to the country, but I am prepared to give it in evidence."

Mr. Meighen: "In court?"

Mr. King: "Yes, in court or any other place.

The prime minister continued, pointing out that he could not interfere with his colleagues without evidence. The government policy agreed to by Mr. Bureau himself was that a royal commission would be appointed as soon as charges were laid. There was the protective association working on the case, there were protective officers, trained investigators and others and in all this network not a man was found who would make a specific charge against Bisaillon.

The premier declared that he frequently received requests that this man or that man be dismissed, but he could not do so without a specific charge being laid.

Was It Noble Act?

"And who dismissed Bisaillon?" asked the premier. "He was dismissed by the minister of customs who sits here. How was he apprehended? By this government. Then what happened? An order in council was passed and possession was taken of the files in Bisaillon's office. That is how the informatoin was obtained. And now my honorable friend from Vancouver comes and says the government should be indicted on information which it obtained itself; information which was given by Mr. Knox.

Mr. Stevens rose to say he had

3 PROGRESSIVES HOLD BALANCE IN HOUSE TO-DAY

Miss McPhail and Messrs. Kennedy and Coate Are in Power.

MAY BE TIE.

Their Vote Against Government May Cause Others To Follow Suit.

OTTAWA, June 25.—Canadian Press. — Three Progressive members hold the balance in to-night's critical division in the House. They are: Miss Agnes MacPhail, Grey S. E., Ontario; D. M. Kennedy, Peace River, Alta., and G. G. Coote, MacLeod, Alta.

On the way they vote, it is calculated, will depend whether the government is defeated or not. So far, two Progressives, Messrs. Lucas and Boutillier, have indicated their intention of voting with the opposition. If the three indicated also vote with the opposition, the division, unless there are further unpaired absentees, will break even, with the Speaker holding the casting vote. But it is thought probable that if the three vote with the opposition, other Progressives will vote with the opposition and thus defeat the government.

If the government is defeated tonight, it will be the first government to be defeated in the House since Confederation.

Proceedings in the House opened with the tabling of the full Duncan report. Dugald Donaghy (Vancouver North) asked for unanimous consent for tabling the report. No objection was raised. M. N. Campbell (Progressive, Mackenzie), resumed the debate on the customs report. He said that there had been revealed "one of the worst moral and political scandals which had ever besmirched the fair name of Canada."

Conservative cheers welcomed this declaration.

Mr. Campbell declared he would support the Conservative amendment. Robert Forke, the Progressive leader, interrupted to tell Mr. Campbell to speak for himself and not for the Progressive group.

Mr. Campbell retorted that Mr. Forke had never been able to speak for the Progressive group and was not speaking for it to-day.

Mr. Campbell added that the only purpose of the Woodsworth sub-amendment was to "whitewash the whole filthy proceedings."

Mr. Campbell is now the third Progressive to announce his intention to support the Opposition

BODIES TAKEN OUT OF RIVER

Four of Six Corpses Recovered at Sault Ste. Marie.

DRAGGERS BUSY.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., June 25.—Four of the bodies of the six victims of Sunday's drowning accident were recovered from St. Mary's River yesterday afternoon. At three o'clock, the body of Clement Cormier, aged 13, was found by Mike Boissineau and Charles Stone, two Indians, who had dragged the river constantly since 8 o'clock in the morning. At 4.30, the body of Arthur Tessier, aged 16, was recovered and before 8 o'clock, after some 50 boats had been pressed into service, the bodies of Margaret McIntyre, aged 17, and Emily Terry, 15, were found. The dragging operations continued until well after dark. The body of Cormier was found practically where the accident occurred in the swift current below the ship canal pier and the others over a distance of 200 yards further east at the spots apparently where they became exhausted and let go of the overturned motor boat, which capsized in the rough water. The success attending the work of the searchers is no doubt due to the fact that the bodies have started to rise and are more easily grasped by the grappling irons. The dragging operations will continue with a large fleet of boats engaged in the work. The bodies of Annie McIntyre and John Parsons still remain in the river.

Released Day Earlier To Take Part in Debate on Russian Funds.

LONDON, June 25 (United Press).—The debate on Labor's receipt of funds from Soviet Russia during the general strike was begun to-day in a crowded House of Commons that reverberated with cheers as Shapurji Saklatvala, the Communist M.P., arrived at the House direct from jail.

Saklatvala was imprisoned during the general strike for making speeches to which the Government took exception. He was released from prison to-day by Sir William Joynson Hicks, the Home Secretary, to enable him to participate in the debate, although his sentence would not have expired until to-morrow.

The cheers that greeted Saklatvala were from the Labor benches.

CIRCUS ARRIVES AND RECEIVES WARM WELCOME

Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey's Combined Shows in City.

BOYS' WONDERLAND.

Parade Abandoned This Year but Visitors See Interesting Sights.

Yohoo, Skinny! Run like everything!

Peterboro thrills today to the spell of the circus, for the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey "Greatest Show on Earth" is under canvas at the Exhibition grounds.

The world's first and only five-ring circus came to town this morning. Horse-tents, menagerie, big-top, kitchen, dining tents and all the rest of the thirty-four great and small stretches of canvas went up as admiring thousands watched that greatest of all examples of human efficiency. These included scores upon scores of youngsters missing from homes where anxious mothers waited breakfast for hours—truants who gaped and worshipped at the never-failing shrine of boydom.

Turbaned Chefs

Even before sun-up today white turbaned chefs, one of them blithely whistling "Carolina in the Morning," were busy in the kitchen broiling generous slices of juicy beefsteaks, pork chops and frying butter cakes by the hundreds. Swarms of canvasmen turned out to put up the 700-foot long big-top. Once it was in the air it was filled with seats sufficient to accommodate 15,000 spectators. These seats are so placed as to form a vast elliptical arena. Down its center were set five big, wooden-curbed rings, in place of the three used in other years. Stages were located between the rings and at either ends. Between the seats and the mammoth battery of rings and stages the hippodrome track was leveled to the smoothness of a floor by the hoes and shovels of a small army of men.

From aloft the property boys hung the intricate riggings of the flying trapeze performers, aerial gymnasts and the strange mechanisms used by the daring artists who will this afternoon and night thrill audiences with their hair-breadth tumblings, twirlings and breath-taking slides.

Innovations

Circus men said the added rings and greater width given the hippodrome track were decided innovations. The quintet of circles allows the introduction of five troupes of horses and again, as many herds of

One Killed; Four Hurt When Car Hits Fence At Keene Road Curve

Mrs. W. I. Stillman, of Campbellford, Killed When Car Leaves Road, Two Miles Out, Near the Home of R. Walsh.

CAR DRIVEN BY T. L. DIAMOND.

Other People Sustain Bad Cuts — Automobile Runs Along Fence and Knocks Down Post—Car is Smashed.

DEAD

Mrs. W. I. Stillman, fractured skull.

INJURED

W I Stillman, leg broken and severe injuries.
T. L. Diamond, severe cuts
Margaret Diamond, severe cuts about head.
Margaret McGregor, 15, badly hurt.

Mrs. W. I. Stillman is dead, her husband, W. I. Stillman, suffered a broken leg; Margaret Diamond was seriously injured; T. L. Diamond, her husband, is suffering from internal injuries and severe cuts, and Margaret McGregor was badly hurt in a fatal automobile accident which occurred on the Keene Road about one and a half miles past Downer's Corners about one o'clock this afternoon.

The car, which is a Chrysler Coach, was driven by T. L. Diamond, and was coming from Campbellford, where all the occupants of the car reside. At the place where the accident occurred there is a sharp turn and, judging from the tracks on the grass, the car left the road and took to the ditch, plowing through the wire fence for 60 feet or more before finally crashing into a tree. The force of impact drove the engine right back into the car, smashing every window, and, judging from the position in which Mrs. Stillman was lying, must have thrown her through one of the rear windows. The steering gear was smashed to smithereens.

Provincial Constable N. F. Maker, together with Dr. Malcolm McCulloch, were quickly on the scene, and Dr. McCulloch, after rendering first aid, had the injured persons removed to St. Joseph's Hospital.

Mr. Stillman was calling in a pitiful manner for his wife, as he was removed to Comstock's ambulance on a stretcher, he not being aware of his wife's death at the time.

No eye-witness actually saw the accident happen. R. Walsh, who lives about two hundred yards from the scene of the accident, said that the first inkling he had was the crash. On running out he saw the car impaled on the tree and could hear distinctly the cries of the injured. He immediately phoned to Provincial Constable Maker.

J. H. C. Waite Purchases "Rowanbank" From Brampton Man.

BEAUTIFUL ESTATE.

BRAMPTON, Ont., June 25. — (Special). — "Rowanbank," the home of C. S. McDonald, Main Street South, and without a doubt the finest residential property in Brampton, has been sold to J. H. C. Waite, mining engineer of Toronto and Peterborough. The price involved has not been divulged, but the property is said to have cost Mr. McDonald close to $30,000.

The property includes a large red brick mansion of many rooms, sun parlors, fully equipped with modern improvements, and a large garage with greenhouse attached. The property extends from Main to Elizabeth Street, both paved. It is about three hundred feet wide, and has a tennis or bowling lawn, and a terraced approach to the house beautifully planted with shrubbery. At the rear is a large flower and vegetable garden, and through the property runs a well-made gravelled drive. "Rowanbank" is noted for its flowers, and in the summer season is thrown open to visitors.

Mr. McDonald, who is chairman of the local Hydro Commission, and a prominent member of the Brampton Presbyterian Church, conducts a large electrical business in Toronto. It is not his intention to leave Brampton, at least not for a while. Mr. Waite, the purchaser, lives in Peterboro, and is a mining engineer, with offices in Toronto, who has been very successful in Ontario mines.

LABOR MEMBERS CAUSE SPEAKER TO STOP DEBATE

Persistent Interruptions Made During Discussion in British Commons.

ABOUT RUSSIA.

Motion Sought To Terminate Trade Agreement With Soviet.

LONDON, June 25. Canadian Press. — Persistent interruptions by Labor members to-day during the course of the debate on a motion to revoke the British trade agreement with Soviet Russia, resulted in suspension in the sitting by Deputy Speaker Hope, who was presiding.

The debate wa precipitated by the introduction of a motion by Oliver Locker Lampon, Conservative member for Birmingham, that Great Britain should terminate its trade agreement with Russia, because of the Soviet's "subversive political activities in Great Britain."

He accused the Soviet government of robbing, imprisoning, torturing, blinding and even murdering British merchants in Russia.

Turning to the gallery he said: "Sitting in the public gallery today is a gentleman named Martin, Whom these monsters have deprived of sight. He can hear this debate, but he cannot see."

The Communist member, Saklatvala, took his seat in the house, having been released this morning from prison, where he served a term for making a seditious speech at the time of the general strike.

Premier Baldwin previously made it clear that the government, while permitting the debate, would not allow a vote to be taken on the motion. Mr. Locker said the Soviet government had lost no opportunity to abuse its diplomatic rights, and under the claim of friendship, to stab Great Britain in the back.

"Our enemies do not, as of old, use steel, but gold," said the Conservative member, who added that there would not be a Communist party in England to-day worth the name if it were not suckled "on Soviet shekels."

Arthur Ponsonby, who was undersecretary for foreign affairs in the Labor government, deplored recent speeches by the Righ Hon. Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Lord Brikenhead, which he declared contained the vulgar abuse and cheap sneers of street corner orators.

Former Premier Lloyd George said that while the Russian Government, under the trade agreement, had done many things which he deeply regretted, the question was not whether Britain approved of the Russian Government, its principles and methods, but "whether we are going to cancel a trade agreement that brings trade to the extent of several million pounds to this country," Lloyd George declared.

WOMAN HELPS LOOK FOR HOUSE

Evangelist Aids in Search For Place Where She Was Held.

TO LEAVE DOUGLAS.

DOUGLAS, Arizona, June 25. — (Canadian Press).—In the desolate desert wastes lying south of here in Mexixo, the search continued today for the place where Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, Los Angeles evangelist, says she was held a captive by three persons who kidnapped her at Ocean Park, Calif., on May 18.

The evangelist was released from hospital here yesterday and immediately joined in the search.

Chief Cline, of Los Angeles, says that he is "firmly convinced" that Mrs. McPherson was kidnapped.

Mrs. McPherson has announced that she will leave here this evening for Los Angeles.

DECORATION DAY PARKING RULES

Cars Will Enter Cemetery by Haggart Street—Leave by Ware Street.

CARETAKER'S APPEAL

The following parking rules will be in vogue on Sunday next, which is the annual decoration day of the I.O.O.F. and the G.W.V.A.

All cars will enter the Little Lake cemetery by the Haggart street entrance and will leave by the Ware street gate. The cars in the parade containing the older members of the societies will be permitted to park on the east side of Haggart street from the main entrance to Lansdowne street, but care must be taken that none of the entrances are blocked.

William James, caretaker of the cemetery, appeals to the public to refrain from standing on the terraces in the cemetery, as considerable damage has been done in former years by this habit, he said.

BOND HOLDERS THREATEN SUIT

British Owners of G.T.P. Debentures Contemplate Court Action.

LONDON, June 25 (Canadian Press). — The committee representing the holders of Grand Trunk Pacific debentures announce that they are contemplating taking legal action against the Canadian Government and the Canadian National Railways to enforce the payment of interest on these debentures, their counsel having advised such a course, but before proceeding would welcome a conference with the National Railways authorities with a view to a settlement.

Financial writers in London, however, seem to hold the view that the debenture holders are likely to hesitate about putting up new money to fight the battle in the courts.

NATIONS AGREE ON ABYSSINIA

Britain and Italy Will Co-operate in Economic Matters.

SEEK CONCESSIONS.

LONDON, June 25 (United Press).—An Anglo-Italian agreement affecting the attitude of Great Britain and Italy in Abyssinia is understood to have been reached.

By the reported pact Great Britain is said to have agreed to recognize the exclusive Italian economic influence in Western Abyssinia and along the route of the proposed Italian railway there, while Italy has agreed to co-operate with Great Britain in securing Abyssian permission for arrangements to store water to be used in a new British irrigation scheme along the River Nile.

PECULIAR CRIME PUZZLES POLICE OF HAMILTON

Italian Is Called To Corner, Stabbed, and Taken Away in Car.

CANNOT BE FOUND.

Feared That Man, Informant in Recent Liquor Case, Has Been Murdered.

HAMILTON, June 25 (Canadian Press).—Police are mystified at a peculiar stabbing affray which took place on a street corner late last night when an unknown Italian, said to live near there, was stabbed and carried off by several men in a sedan automobile.

A boy who witnessed the attack said that the assailants of the Italian told him they were going to take the Italian to a hospital. They did not do so, however, as no such person was admitted to any local hospital up to a late hour last night. Had those in the car wanted to get help for the stabbed man, they could have stopped at several doctors' offices in that vicinity.

The Italian was asked to come to the corner. He did so and was there stabbed. The man who summoned him by telephone recently blamed the Italian for divulging bootlegging operations to the police. Prosecution resulted. It is feared that the Italian has been driven to an outlying district and there murdered.

BIG CROWD AT KIWANIS DANCE

Largest Attendance of Season Last Night—Club's Outing a Success.

PRIZE WINNERS.

After the big softball game last night some seventy Kiwanians and their wives went to the Rendezvous pavilion at Chemong and there partook of a delightful lunch of hotdogs, sandwiches, cake and ice cream.

President John Craig presided and John Allen was the booster of the evening. He tried to make his speech in as concise a way as possible but the audience would not hear tell of this. John McKone also made a short speech. After the lunch was over the men went back to play another game of soft ball, while some threw horseshoes, while the ladies gathered what was left of the lunch and sent it to charity.

The dance which followed was attended by the largest crowd of this season. Miss Hardill and Mr. Graham drew the prizes in the lucky number dance (which was in charge of Wilfred Huycke. The Kiwanians wish to thank all those who took part to make the evening such a success, and especially Ken Ken. Blood's orchestra, which supplied the music for dancing.

OTTAWA, June 25 (Canadian Press).—The Grand Orange Lodge of British North America in session last night went on record as denouncing the validity of the autonomy acts of 1905 and affirming that the separate school question in the prairie provinces was a Provincial matter and that the Federal Parliament had no right to interfere.

Another report, submitting plans for the organization of juvenile lodges, was adopted.

It was announced that a centennial celebration would be held in Brockville, where the Order originated in 1830.

CAMPBELLFORD'S COMMUNITY PICNIC TO BE HELD AUG. 20TH

Second Annual Gathering of Town and Country People at Crow River Bridge.

LYNN FAMILY PICNIC.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence).

CAMPBELLFORD, June 25. — Campbellford's second annual community picnic will be held August 20 at Crow River Bridge. Preparations for the event were launched at a meeting on Wednesday evening at A. G. Watson's store, when officers were elected, with J. Nelson Stone as chairman, and general plans were outlined. It is hoped that the town and country people will be brought together for a day's recreation, and the future meetings of the committee will be directed to that end as well as to the drafting of an interesting programme.

Family Re-union.

A re-union of the Lynn family will be held at Crow River Bridge on Saturday afternoon. About fifty members of this family are expected to assemble at the picnic grounds, with three generations well represented.

Other picnics at Crow River include an expected joint gathering by the Wellman Corners and Stanwood Churches on Dominion Day, and the Star Line from Havelock on July 7th.

Trent Bridge on Holiday.

One of the most attractive Dominion Day programmes in this district is that offered by the Trent Bridge Fish and Game Association, with ball games and other athletic contests in the afternoon, and a dance in the evening.

Many Americans are camping and boarding at Healey Falls, the open season for fishing bringing out the early vacationists to one of the best fishing grounds in the Kawartha waters.

St. Andrew's Garden Party.

Unusual features have been arranged for St. Andrew's garden party Monday evening, and a large attendance from the town and district is expected The committees have not spared themselves in their planning for this fete, and with band concert included, the evening should be a fine success.

There have been many visitors to Crow River Bridge since the weather took on its summer graciousness. The free grounds with hot water provision are greatly appreciated by the public.

A. G. Watson motored to Belleville Thursday.

TEACHER LEAVING.

Miss Pearl Reid Presented With Purse From Community.

EAST EMILY, June 24.—A very pleasant event took place at the young people's meeting on Friday evening last at Bethel church.

After the devotional exercises of the evening came to a close and the meeting was dismissed Rev. E. W. Rowland took the platform and addressed Miss Pearl Reid, our school teacher, who is giving up her school at the mid-summer holidays.

Mr. Rowland in choice words expressed the regret of the church and community at having to lose one who had been such a faithful teacher for six years in the public school here and also a teacher in the Sabbath school and organist for the choir in the church service and he hoped wherever her lot might be cast in the future that God's blessin might attend her efforts in trying to extend His kingdom and the uplift of humanity.

Mrs. Harry Jackson on behalf of the community presented her with a well filled purse.

Miss Reid responded in her usual gifted and pleasing manner, thanking the people for the kind manner in which they received her and stood by her as a friend since she came into the community and also remarking that for the six years term in the school she had began to feel that it was just like home to her.

The meeting was then brought to a close in its usual form.

Miss Reid will be greatly missed in this community in which she has taken such an interest in the past time in which she has been in our midst.

HUMANE SOCIETY

trudged through the storm one and a half miles to shore and went back with a sleigh and brought him home unconscious.

Robert Robinson saved two children, five and three and a half years old, from the Don River at Toronto by swimming across the river to their rescue. One was unconscious when brought to shore.

Saved Fellow Worker

James M. McMillan saved the life of a fellow workman by his prompt action. They were mixing loam for a nursery at Niagara-on-the-Lake, when one got caught in the shaft of a machine which revolves at 600 revolutions per minute. Mr. McMillan jumped forward and threw off the belt as the man was being swung around.

Lewis F. Fox, with a friend, both 11 years old, were walking on the ice on the Detroit River near Amherstburg, when his companion fell through the ice. Lewis crawled over towards him and pulled him out by a broom handle, his friend clutching it just before he went down for the third time. They both then crawled to safety.

F. Fryer, a trooper of the Royal Canadian Dragoons at St. John's, Quebec, rescued two boys from drowning. One of the lads had tried to rescue the other but he clutched him round the neck when Trooper Fryer came to his assistance.

James L. Miller, a boy of 13, saved two men from drowning at Christiana Lake, near Grand Forks, B.C. One man got into difficulties and his companion went to his rescue, only to be grabbed and pulled under. The boy swam round the struggling men until he saw his opportunity and brought them both to shore.

Boy Rescues Man

Ernest William Sargent, aged 14, a school boy from School Section 26, East York, visiting at Welland, jumped into the canal fully dressed and saved a man from drowning.

Miss Catherine A. Roose, from Kitchener, Ont., went to the assistance of a girl at Penetang Bay, Penetanguishene, who got into difficulties while bathing. The girl clutched her by the neck but she beat her off and then brought her to shore.

Elgie Harris rescued a young lad 15 years old, who had fallen into the Etobicoke River at Brampton, Ont., while in flood and who had been carried down 200 feet by the swift current.

Albert Edward Kneller saved the life of a little girl at Mimico, Ontario, who had fallen into deep water in a shale pit.

CIRCUS ARRIVES

elephants in a single display. At another juncture of the program the entire track and rings are required to give room for a mammoth "200 horse act" in which that number of equines appear, each mounted by an expert rider.

The great circus here today is unquestionably the world's largest. It is an American institution. In its menagerie are 1,000 animals, 42 elephants and a family of girafes. Its 800 performers embrace the aristocracy of the white-tops. There was no street parade, none having been given anywhere for several years. But the circus program opens with an eye-dazzling tournament containing section after section of fairyland and lengendary groupings.

The "Floats of the Jewels" are introduced for the first time—glittering cars drawn by zebras, llamas, elephants and a family of giraffes. The program begins at 2 this afternoon and at 8 tonight. The doors to the big menageries open an hour earlier.

HOUSE ADJOURNS WITHOUT VOTE

not met Mr. Knox until after the enquiry was instituted. "Be just to a man who is not here," said Mr. Stevens.

My honorable friend would never have been able to get the information," retorted the premier, "if he had not got it from the government's own officers. I am sorry that there are men in the public service who may betray a trust. As for Mr. Sparks, I wonder whether it was a noble act on his part. He was given a banquet in September and an honorarium of $1,000 for his services in securing legislation which we gave him. Then later he began to associate with the honorable member for Centre Vancouver and to hobnob with the opposition." (Loud cheers.)

Methods Called Cheap.

"Those who Mr. Sparks was acting for thought he had done great service. But after the general elections he worked with my honorable friend and is doing so at this moment. He is in the gallery right now," said the premier.

Mr. Meighen: "Will you say what you mean by that?"

Mr. King: "I have not been blind to my honorable friend's eyes."

Mr. Sparks was sitting in the special gallery directly opposite to Mr. Meighen.

The Tories joined in a chorus of, "Cheap, cheap."

"I think it is very cheap," said the premier, "for my honorable friend to take such methods."

The premier, resuming said he had the highest respect for the honesty, integrity and loyalty of Hon. Jacques Bureau.

A Tory: "Oh.

Mr. King: "Yes, oh, see how brave some men are. All the time Mr. Bureau was in my ministry I never knew a single act of his that was dishonorable or dishonest. What came out in this enquiry was as much a surprise to me as to anyone, and I am not prepared yet to believe all that was said of him."

Was Capable Officer.

"I am asked," said the premier, 'why 'he was appointed to the Senate? When he came back I saw that his health was such as to preclude the possibility of his continuing as head of the department. But in recognition of his 25 years' service to his country I asked him to take a seat in the Senate. He served as solicitor general with Sir Wilfrid Laurier and I say here that no man ever served in parliament who was more respected and liked. I will put up a note of chivalry here and now. If any man can say a word against the honesty and integrity of Jacques Bureau let him stand on his feet now and say it."

Not Partisan

Mr. King referred to the manner in which the committee had focussed its attention on Quebec. This was greeted with Liberal cheers and Conservative jeers. The Premier declared that the ports of Halifax, Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver, should be investigated. He was told that the smuggling at Vancouver was greatest of all. There were certain distilleries that should be further investigated. The entire Conservative aim was to destroy the Government so that they could gain control of the situation and put the tariff higher and higher.

The Government was not playing party politics. This was jeered and the Premier remarked that though some members did not agree with this, the country did.

Of Mr. Boivin he said that of all men he had the privilege of being associated with he could not recall one who had taken up his work with the same zeal, energy and ability as Mr. Boivin. If Mr. Boivin was to be censured why was not that censure moved when the evidence came out?

"For the reason that the committee voted down the proposal to report it to the House," said Mr. Stevens.

Wild Demonstrations

Mr. King said that any man entering public life faced just such charges as Mr. Boivin faced. He advised them to judge as they would be judged. There were wild demonstations on both sides as Mr. King took his seat and Mr. Meighen rose to speak. Seldom has the House heard so much noise.

Mr. Meighen doubted if any committee had ever had a subject demanding so much real work and concentration. While he could not concur with all the judgments of the chairman, Paul Mercier, he unhesitatingly expressed his admiration for the manner in which Mr. Mercier had acted. He would not condemn the committee, as the Prime Minister had done.

Of Jacques Bureau, Mr. Meighen said none would say that he could not look after himself or that he was not clever enough to know that he should appear before the committee if it was to his advantage to do so.

"Bureau Was Found Guilty"

The whole thing was humbug. Mr. Bureau stayed away because he did not think it in his interest to attend. But he was not there to make an attack on Jacques Bureau. His reason was that the report itself found Senator Bureau guilty and the Prime Minister asked the House to adopt it.

He asked the Prime Minister if he believed that Jacques Bureau's illness was his only fault. If he believed what the Prime Minister gave as his belief he would not be a member of a government that would support that report. Was his position that of a friend? Was he fair to his friend Jacques Bureau? If did not become the Prime Minister to seek a verdict on the face of testimony he offered now when he did not offer it to the committee which was trying the case. How brave the Premier was when he knew there was no chance that he could go before the committee.

Using Usual Tactics

Two-thirds of the Prime Minister's talk had been taking credit for anti-smuggling legislation of last session. He knew that the Conservatives supported the bill and the appropriation of $350,000 without any reservations. The Premier was using his usual tactics. The only threat to this legislation came in the Senate from two Liberals, Senators Belcourt and Beque.

Duncan's Evidence

The evidence of Inspector Duncan showed that when the present Minister of Customs and Excise had sent Duncan to Montreal to investigate into the conduct of Bisaillon, Mr. Boivin had told Inspector Duncan about the Stevens resolution to be moved in the House. It was only after the Government had intimation that Mr. Stevens would move his resolution that action was taken with respect to Bisaillon.

Yet, in February and March, 1925, allegation after allegation had been made against this man in letters written by Mr. Sparks.

Mr. Meighen then said he proposed to take up matters concerning the present minister of customs. Mr. Boivin had entered Parliament fifteen years ago after a brilliant record at the Bar. He had been entrusted with the honor of being Deputy Speaker. He was a man of extraordinary ability. "If he has done wrong he had done it knowing the right as few members do." The chief allegations against the minister were not his conduct in the Barge Tremblay case and the Moses Aziz case, but the degeneration of the department was not confined to these incidents.

Tremblay Liquor

Mr. Meighen went into the details of a sale of the liquor seized on the Tremblay at 36 cents a gallon "to a political associate." Mr. Boivin had said earlier that he understood it was purchased for blending purposes. Yesterday he had said that the liquor was used for denaturing. The purpose, said Mr. Meighen, was for exportation to the United States. What right had the Government of Canada to sell liquor for exporation to the United States? The Government should not become itself a party to a breach of American law. This liquor in question could not be sold for any other purpose.

Mr. Boivin interrupted to deny that the liquor was sold for exportation.

Nothing Done.

The Minister of Customs, said Mr. Meighen, had not been able to show that anything was done to prevent the Tremblay liquor being used for some other purpose than that which the Government had authorized. "It was sold that a fortune might be made by friends of the Minister, and that fortune was made out of it" added Mr. Meighen.

Mr. Boivin protested that it was in evidence that at the same time the Dominion distillers had purchased elsewhere 60,000 gallons of the same brand of alcohol at 2 cents above the Government's price. The "fortune that could be made" was at the most $320, said Mr. Boivin.

Mr. Meighen retorted that nothing had been done to prevent the wrong use of the alcohol. Mr. Boivin said that if a "jot or tittle of evidence could be adduced that the liquor was sold for potable purposes, this Government will take the responsibility but not before."

Mr. Meighen: "The evidence is there."

Mr. Boivin: "Oh, no."

Production of Documents.

Mr. Meighen went on to discuss the production of some documents within the last few days in the House of Commons which had come from Senator Bureau's home at Three Rivers. He said that there could be no doubt that the mass of documents shipped to Three Rivers in "the famous eight wooden boxes" were being now handed back only when they suited the purpose of this Government. But, he added, they were the property of the people of Canada.

The Tremblay alcohol, even if it had only fetched a nickel from the Quebec Liquor Commission, should have been sold to the commission because the Canadian treasury eventually would have reaped the excise taxes.

The Aziz Case.

Mr. Meighen then turned to the Aziz case. The question, he thought, might be reduced to this: Was Mr. Robichaud, the member for Gloucester, N.B., who requested clemency for Aziz, as culpable as the Minister who acceded to that request? He thought there could be no division of opinion on that subject. And there could be not the slightest doubt, Mr. Meighen added, that the Minister had acceded to the request. Amongst the reasons advanced by friends of Aziz was that he had turned King's evidence against his own brother, and that he had been promised in exchange that he would be given summary trial.

When Mr. Boivin said that he was not aware when he signed the telegram asking that Aziz be kept out of jail of the full facts of the case he overlooked the certainty that he must have read some of the letters adduced in evidence before he could have been in possession of all the facts.

Robichaud's Letter.

Mr. Boivin had stated that he had not read the letter from Mr. Robichaud when he took action in the first instance. Three places in the Minister's evidence before the Customs Committee disclosed that Mr. Boivin had sworn that he had "seen" the letter. He had not stated before the committee that he had "read" the letter, but the inference to the committee was that he had read it. Mr. Meighen did not think that Mr. Boivin would have ever assumed "the style of defence" before the committee which he had taken in the House. But, even in Tuesday's speech Mr. Boivin had stated that his secretary had "read" the letter to him. Did the Minister believe that he had the right to step in and intervene with the execution of the Aziz sentence. Mr. Meighen declared that the Minister had not such a right.

Mr. Meighen was still speaking when the House rose at six o'clock.

Aziz Release.

Resuming his speech in the evening, the Conservative leader declared that so great was the confidence of the friends of Aziz that they believed they could get the man out of jail before he got in. The Minister of Customs had read a legal opinion from the Deputy Minister of Justice in an endeavor to justify his actions. Actually the opinion of the Deputy Minister was not on the point at all. It simply stated that the Department could take part in the prosecution but did not deal in any way with the conduct of the prisoner after his conviction. Mr. Meighen read from the committee evidence statements of Mr. Boivin that he did not think it was within in his own power to act as he had.

Mr. Boivin interrupted to say that responsible officers of the Department were of the opinion that he could delay the sentence.

Boivin, a Lawyer.

Mr. Meighen said the Minister of Customs had practiced law for twenty years, and was an experienced Crown prosecutor. Yet he asked the opinion of a man who was not a lawyer as to whether he had a right to postpone the Aziz sentence. In his evidence he had admitted that he supposed his order to stay execution "was not worth the paper it was written on." If the House released the Government from responsibility in this case, he said, its contribution to the education of public opinion would be that justice in Canada stands at the mercy of politicians alone.

So far, said Mr. Meighen, he had spoken of Mr. Boivin, but it should not be forgotten that the Government was equally responsible. Just as the House could not accept a report which recommended the punishment of Customs officers like Giroux, MacLaughlin and the others without extending punishment to the Government which was responsible to the House for the administration of the Department, so the conduct of one Minister must be laid at the door of the Government to which he belongs. When the British House voted censure of its Attorney-General (Sir Patrick Hastings) every man in that Government took his share of responsibility and the Government was defeated. That case, said Mr. Meighen, was a parallel to this one.

Effect of Sub-Amendment.

Mr. Meighen declared that the Woodsworth sub-amendment sought to "destroy" the Stevens amendment and to eliminate the censure of the Government and the Minister of Customs.

"Froth and Foam."

The Woodsworth sub-amendment recommended continuation of the investigation by a Royal Commission. Mr. Meighen said he wished to point out that continuation of the investigation was suggested in the report tabled. "The investigation must go on by order of this House if the report is adopted," he said. It was for the Government to decide whether continuation of the investigation should be by Royal Commission or otherwise. Mr. Meighen styled the Woodsworth sub-amendment as "froth and foam," "mere words," for the purpose of saving the Government. He had no objection to the Woodsworth sub-amendment being added to the Conservative amendment, in order that members would have the opportunity of voting censure on the Government. As it was, if Mr. Woodsworth "had his way" with respect to his sub-amendment, such an opportunity would not be afforded.

Solicitor General Lucien Cannon finished his speech at midnight, in the wind-up of which he referred to the new court of King Arthur, which included purists from Winnipeg (Hon. B. Rogers) and from New Brunswick (Messrs. Hanson and Foster), attacking the government in their newly donned armor.

A. Boutillier (Progresisve, Vegreville) was the first Progressivs to anounce his support of the Conservative amendment.

M. N. Campbell of Mackenzie, Sask., adjourned the debate and the discussion will continue probably all day Friday, with the vote on Friday evening.

FRIDAY, JUNE 25, 1926.

DECORATION DAY.

The annual ceremony that has been carried out each year since the inauguration of the local branch of the Great War Veterans' Association, the decoration of the graves of former soldiers, will be held on Sunday, and it is expected that there will be a very large turn-out of ex-service men on this occasion.

One of the first aims of the association when it was organized was to undertake the task of keeping green the memory of departed comrades, and the beautiful practice of decorating the graves of ex-service men buried in the local cemeteries was inaugurated as an important step toward this end.

It is more than probable that the Canadian Legion which has now come into being and into which the G.W.V.A. is being merged will continue to hold this impressive ceremony each year as a tribute to the memory of soldiers who have passed on.

Sunday will be a general decoration day, inasmuch as the local lodges of Oddfellows will then carry out their annual decoration of the last resting places of former members of the order.

THE HEADLIGHT MENACE.

The regulation against glaring motor car headlights is one of those laws that seem to be regarded as a dead letter.

Legally there is presumed to be no such thing as a glaring headlight; actually it is impossible to drive half a mile on any highway at night without being blinded by bright lights.

The application of the Golden Rule to driving would eliminate much of the trouble, but, unfortunately, courtesy is not one of the outstanding activities of many people who sit at the wheel of a car.

The Examiner heard, for instance, of a motorist who in the course of a five-mile drive the other night, during which he met many cars, carefully dimmed his lights with every car he encountered.

And how many drivers out of all those he met do you suppose reciprocated by dimming their lights in return?

Just one.

The rest hummed past with the full blinding display still in evidence.

Bright headlights constitute one of the most serious menaces to safety that automobilists encounter; yet when have you heard of a motorist being fined for breaking the law in this respect?

A LINK WITH THE PAST.

Even with the street parade eliminated and new features introduced, there is nothing like a circus for bringing back yesterday.

Many a staid Peterboro citizen will be perched upon a circus seat today, and for the moment he'll be the boy he used to be.

He'll try to fool himself into thinking that he is there only for the children's sake, but deep down in his heart he knows better.

He knows that the old fascination still exists, and while he watches the wonders of the five rings he's living the old days over again, the bare-footed days when every "kid" that was a "regular feller" stayed out all night to see the circus come in, when the parade in the morning was a long glittering carnival of thrills, when there was a keen delight in trying to squirm in under the canvas, if perchance there had been no luck in the way of a pass-winning job.

And he's remembering, too, the days that followed, the backyard imitations of the circus features, the clothes-line that did duty for a slack wire, the home-made trapeze in the woodshed.

Other links with the past have long since been broken, memories of boyhood days are treacherous in many details, but the boyhood spell of the sawdust and canvas still remains, even if we do "only go to let the youngsters see the circus."

STILL NO EXPLANATION.

Premier Ferguson has once more explained the position of his Government in regard to the Ontario Temperance Act.

He does not go to the length of saying there will be a change in the handling of the liquor problem, confining himself to the promise that should the Government come to the conclusion that some other method than the present would be in the public interest the administration would announce the new policy and go to the country on it.

With that position many people will find fault; yet the Premier is on much more easily defended ground there than he is in regard to the seven constituencies that have been left for so long without representation.

Mr. Ferguson has made several speeches recently, but so far has been silent about these seven ridings.

In maintaining that silence he is assuming an attitude that is indefensible, and the Examiner has yet to find any newspaper in the Province, no matter how friendly its relations with the Government, suggesting any plausible excuse for the failure to give the people of these constituencies the representation to which they are entitled.

The Premier's ear is usually to the ground; it is difficult to explain his inability to hear the criticism that his treatment of these ridings has aroused.

FUEL COMMITTEE.

The particular recommendations of the Special Parliamentary Committee which has been considering the coal supplies of the Dominion which are of special interest to this community are those dealing with the trial shipments of Alberta Western coal by rail and lake under the supervision of the Dominion Fuel Board; the production of coke from Canadian coal; the imposition of a duty of 50 cents on anthracite, buckwheat and pea coal; and the clause suggesting the enlargement of Hamilton harbor, among others, together with the reduction of dues on Canadian coal. Hamilton is in the happy position of having anticipated the recommendation of the committee with regard to the establishment of coke-making plants, and can vouch for the effectiveness of the measure. The experimental shipment of Alberta coal would be a welcome move. There has been so much discussion and so many contradictory claims regarding the subject that it is most desirable to have the question settled by practical tests. The 50-cent duty on imported anthracite of small size would hit many domestic consumers, who have found it an economy to purchase this cheaper form of fuel, but the reason for the recommendation is no doubt based on solid grounds. It is gratifying to be able to report real progress in the solution of our national coal problems. The proposed remedies have passed the talk stage, and Hamilton can congratulate itself that it has made a real contribution to the matter.—Hamilton Spectator.

WHAT OF RUGBY FOOTBALL?

The McGill News has been collecting views on the rules of rugby football, as played by Canadian clubs. The fact that anybody wants to collect views on the rules of the Canadian game suggests that there is something the matter with them—and there is. The Canadian game is a hybrid between British rugby and the American college game. Some people think it the best of the three, but even most of these admit that the rules are capable of improvement.

The McGill News symposium is contributed to by Sir Arthur Currie, President of McGill; Sir Robert Falconer, President of Toronto University, and a number of men who have been prominent on Canadian college teams during recent years. As already said, nearly all think improvement is possible. Sir Arthur Currie and Sir Robert Falconer both express the feeling that the Canadian game should be made more "open"—should show more running and kicking, and less bull pushing and wrestling on the forward line. Several ex-players come out straight for the British game. Another section want a more open game than at present, but think that can be got by improving the rules, particularly by introducing what is known in the American game as the "forward pass." This, however, is the only point of the American game that receives favorable notice. A third section think the present Canadian game good enough, and that it should be let alone.

To our mind, one only of those who give their views indicates the chief drawback of the present Canadian game, and also of the American game, as compared with British rugby. This is Mr. W. C. Hodgson of Montreal, once a noted player. Favoring the British game, he writes in part:

> "My residence looks on to the stadium, and I frequently watch McGill boys at practice. They are taken to one part of the field and drilled for a good period of time. . . . They are put through the same play over and over again, which must be monotonous, for the majority of the players never touch the ball."

Here, to the Journal's mind, is the trouble in a nutshell. Drill! What sort of a game for good public consumption is a game that requires drill? You can step out at any age from five years to fifty if you like and play hockey, or cricket or lacrosse or tennis, or any sport except so-called rugby football on this continent, without practice yet without absolutely upsetting the rest of the fellows all by yourself and queering the whole game. But for our so-called rugby, you have to be drilled in signals and tactics. Anybody on the team who doesn't know the signals is an absolute danger to his own team, though he be as strong as Hercules and as fleet as Mereury. The result is that rugby can never be a really popular or successful or useful game in this country, as played now. The only teams which can give sufficient time and attention to signal drill to become proficient in the game are college teams (and these shouldn't have to do it—they ought to have something better to do with their time, if even it merely would be real honest-to-goodness playing the game) or such city teams as can get enough gate money to pay for facilities for drill at night, or perhaps furnish inducements to players to neglect business for drill in the afternoons.

In the British game, there is no drill. There are no signals. You play football, and you don't have to waste your time getting elaborately educated to the business of trying to cheat the other team as to what you intend to try to do. We admit that Canadian and American rugby is very cunning. You need a poker face. But as a game to give our Canadian youngsters a real sport, to encourage our boys in the city schools and in the towns and villages of the country to play football of a kind which they will be able to keep on playing without having to take on an entirely different business of drill later on if they hope to get to the top in the sport—why, Canadian rugby at present is all to the bad. And we would like to think that anybody who admires the noble old ideal of rugby would wish to see the game popularized as much as possible. —Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Wear a maple leaf on Dominion Day.

Everybody in Ontario but Mr. Ferguson seems to be talking about those seven vacant constituencies.

The small boy's red letter day has arrived. It's circus day.

Just when there are no more horses for the elephants to frighten the circus operators have abandoned the circus parade. But the peanuts and the balloons and red lemonade and the sawdust still remain.

Proceedings at Ottawa indicate that the long session has not killed the fighting ability of the politicians. They're still able to battle.

ABOUT COLTS.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear sir:

I am taking the liberty of asking you to publish in your valuable columns at your first opportunity the following, which may be of interest and value to farmers only. It is in regard to my plan of keeping colts or any kind of an animal on a pasture where you desire. Some ten years ago I took some two-year-old colts to a ranch in Harvey township and in two days time one of them came home. I did not like the task of taking him again, as it might be fruitless. So after thinking a little I decided to go and try again, and was thinking how I could fool him or lose him. So I thought of being lost. One time my brother and I when small boys got lost in a bush across the road from our home and when we came out on the opposite side of the bush to what we expected and could see our home and buildings and we had to sit down and think what buildings they were. Finally we figured out they were our own. I thought of losing the colt in the same way, and before I came within a half mile of the same ranch I pulled a bag over his head and led him on the pasture behind some hills where he could see no fence, and before I let him go I wheeled him around and around as long as him or I could stand on our legs, until he whinnied, and I pulled off his halter and blind and we parted both staggering. I did not see him again until I went for him. I have still a better proof of this plan. This spring when I had a chance of good pasture across the road from my own gates for a yearling colt that never left its mother's sight for even an hour, and was just as attached to its mother as when a month old. I thought of past experience and pulled a bag over her head and tied her to her mother's collar and led her into the pasture behind some buildings, and took her mother out of sight. I twisted her around in the same manner until we could scarcely stand, before releasing her. She too staggered off with two other colts. That is over a month ago and that colt never came near the road fence and I know she does not know her home and she can always see it, and I know if I just turned her on the pasture I could not keep her from jumping or falling over the fence if I stood there with a blacksnake whip. So think it over and pass it around as it may be of some value to your neighbors.

Another plan we have for a kicking cow or heifer is to use a high stool, such as a nail keg or an old chair, which keeps you half standing and you have full control of yourself and hold your pail between your knees. Catch her leg every time she tries to kick and set it down again. We also use a sniffle in their nose and draw her as far forward in the stall as possible. Use her kindly and she will soon be quiet.

Another suggestion in regard to greasing a wagon is to take a narrow piece of board, two feet long. Bring one end of it to a dull point one inch across, then saw a slight bootjack in the other end, then place it on the inside of the wheel with a slope out, then catch the wheel on the opposite side and give a quick lift and it will throw the wheel out half ways on the arm. Just reverse it and it will throw it in again much easier than if two men were at it, but before you reverse it remove the two wheels on the one side and leave them half off, then take both nuts off on the opposite side and and put your hand in the box and shove the axles into the opposite wheels. This saves reversing this leg but for last two wheels. Thanking you in advance, I remain, as ever

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, June 25.—With only a couple of part loads of fresh cattle in today, the market was fairly well cleaned of the balance of the week's stale offerings.

Trade in the week-end markets has not been so snappy as a week ago, due to the lighter export requirements and to the increasing number of poorly finished grass cattle now coming in. A few small lots of well finished butcher steers and heifers sold up to recent high levels, but the balance of the stale mixed cattle, rough fat cows especially, met a slower market and generally tailed off to lower prices.

Stockers and feeders, at the general decline, proved a little more attractive than of late, and many were taken by speculators.

Choice butcher handyweight steers steady, $8 to $8.50; heifers, $7 to $7.75; grass cows, 50c to $1 lower than last week.

Springers and milkers—Choice springers sold from $85 to $100, good $70 to $80 ;choice milkers $75 to $90; good $55 to $70; medium to common springers and milkers hard to dispose of.

Stockers and feeders—900 lbs steers selling at $6.75 to $7; western heifers, at $5.50.

Sheep and lambs—Choice spring lambs from 16c to 17½c; good, 14c to 15½c; medium to common, 10c to 12c; choice wool lambs, 12c to 13c; heavy wool lambs and bucks, 9c to 10c; butcher sheep, 6c to 7c; medium, 5c to 6c; heavy sheep and bucks, $3.50 to $4.

Calves—Choice veal calves, steady at $10 to $11.50.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, June 25 (Canadian Press).—The grain markets took to an upgrade yesterday and the closing was generally firm, although all pits reported interest dull and trade light. Reports of heavy rains and hail in parts of the southwest with a forecast for unsettled weather had considerable influence on wheat values and the market closed strong at an advance of 1-4 to 5-8c; corn finished 3-8 lower to 1-4c higher; oats 1-8c down to 1-8c up, and provisions at 5 to 15 cents decline.

Wheat traders were unable to make much headway up or down in the forenoon. The market was somewhat easier early on local selling, but as offerings were quickly absorbed at around $.37 for July, a bulge of 1 3-8c from the low figures followed.

Sentiment was mixed, bears hoping for lower levels on reports of an increased movement of the new crop in the southwest, while friends of higher prices looked with favor on the unsettled weather there and a forecast of more rain for Kansas is expected to retard work in the harvest fields Towards the close the wet weather men prevailed. As buying developed, shorts began to cover and the forenoon depressions were smoothed out.

Corn and oats were affected somewhat by the action of wheat early in the session, but later developed a heavy undertone of their own. What litle trading there was appeared to be in the nature of changing, one house buying July and selling December, while northwest houses sold September and bought December. Hedging and liquidation was on in oats, the market remaining sluggish most of the day.

Selling by packers and commission houses eased provisions.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, June 25, (Canadian Press).—The demand from foreign buyers for oats and barley on the Montreal market for nearby shipment was good yesterday, but owing to the scarcity of ocean freight room, the trade volume was curtailed.

There was no change in the condition of the market for car lots of grain, prices being steady with a moderate demand from local and country buyers.

The export and local trade in spring wheat flour was limited but prices were unchanged.

The feature of the winter wheat trade was the further demand from the British West Indies and sales of some fair-sized lots were made. The movement for local account was small but the feeling was steady.

A weaker feeling developed in the market for millfeed and prices were reduced $2 per ton. The demand for standard grades of rolled oats was limited, but prices were firm.

The potato market displayed further weakness and prices were reduced another 10 cents per bag.

Prices for all grades of eggs were well maintained under a quiet demand, which was due to the Quebec holiday. The receipts were 1,260 cases.

Butter prices were reduced another 1-4c per pound owing to the increased offerings and the small demand. The receipts were 7,858 packages.

The undertone to the cheese market was easier but prices were unchanged. The trade was extremely dull. The receipts were 6,100 boxes.

Owing to the decreased offerings of beans from the country of late a stronger feeling developed in the local market and prices advanced 10 cents per bushel. Car lots of choice white hand-picked were quoted at $2.25 per bushel, and smaller quantities at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel.

PRAISES STEPS TOWARDS UNITY

General Turner, G.W.V.A. President, Issues Statement.

PROGRESS MADE

OTTAWA, June 25 (Canadian Press).—In accordance with a resolution of the Dominion convention, the Great War Veterans' Association at Ottawa a year ago yesterday, Lt.-General Sir Richard Turner, V.C., Dominion president, has issued a statement to all former units of the association that he is completely satisfied with the progress made towards the achievement of unity among the war veterans of Canada. Sir Richard declared that the united organizations visualized by the G.W.V.A., has been established, with a name, constitution, and responsible national and Provincial officers, known as "The Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League." He points out that the chain of Provincial councils was completed by the organization of a council in Prince Edward Island, on June 16th. The statement of Sir Richard also is based on the fact that the legion has assumed responsibility for the financing and administration of the legislative and adjustment work at Ottawa, the burden of which formerly rested on the G.W.V.A.

In concluding his statement, Sir Richard urges all former branches of the G.W.V.A., to straighten out their affairs as such and be prepared to function as branches of the Canadian Legion of the B.E.S.L., on and after July 1st, if this step has not been taken already.

PAPAL BLESSING ENDS CONGRESS

Twelve Cardinals and Hundreds of Clergy Before Half Million Audience.

LAST PROCESSION

MUNDELEIN, Ill., June 25 (Canadian Press).—Despite a deluge of rain and hail in the midst of the final ceremonies, the twenty-eighth International Eucharistic Congress was carried to a magnificent conclusion yesterday by hundreds of Catholic clergy, including twelve cardinals, before a vast assemblage of more than 500,000 persons.

Brilliant sunshine supplanted the storm as the last scene of the spectacle ended and the army of pilgrims from the four corners of the earth prepared for the general recessional to Chicago. It had taken two days and a night for this audience to reach Mundelein, to hear the apostolic blessing of Pope Pius XI., and it was likely that the last pilgrim of probably the largest religious congregation in history would not get away before to-day.

Utterly oblivious to a twenty-minute storm of rain and hail late yesterday afternoon, thousands of priests and prelates, including twelve cardinals, continued the sacred eucharistic procession through the grounds of the seminary of St. Mary of the Lake as it was planned months ago.

After Cardinal Bonzano, the Papal legate, had deposited the golden ostensorium on the altar of the outdoor sanctuary, he turned to the acres of reverent, upturned faces in the vast natural amphitheatre before the seminary chapel and uttered the words of the Papal benediction which formally concluded the five-lay festival.

NECESSITY OF ORGANIZATION IS STRESSED BY TWO SPEAKERS' ADDRESSES AT FARMERS' PICNIC

Peterboro, Cavan and South Monaghan U.F.O. Clubs' Annual Outing.

AT WALLACE'S POINT

Kiwanis President Urges Cultivation of Human Rather Than Material Values.

Although the weather for the occasion was everything that could be desired, the combined picnic of the U.F.O. Clubs of Peterboro, Cavan and South Monaghan, held yesterday at Wallace's Point, was somewhat lacking in the number of those who attended. There were scarcely five hundred people on the grounds for the speeches in the afternoon, although a greater number came later for the programme of races and ball games and for the dance in the evening, held in the pavilion, with music provided by Stewart's orchestra.

The platform for the speakers was placed on the lawn near the river, on the spacious grounds at the Point, kindly placed at the disposal of the combined clubs by Mr. and Mrs. R. Cardwell. The principal speakers of the afternoon were Mr. H. A. Gilroy of Alvinston, president of the Ontario Co-operative Company, and Mrs. Miles Oper of Leamington, the president of the United Farm Women of Ontario. On the platform with Mrs. Oper were Mrs. W. GIFTS FROM CLASS FOR PEOPLE LEAVING

Mrs. Andrew McLaughlin and Miss Rose Gillet Are Recipients.

KEENE, June 25.—Mrs. Andrew McLauchlin was treated to a pleasant surprise on Thursday evening last when the her girls Sunday school class met at the parsonage and presented her with a beautiful mantle clock. Mrs. McLauchlin was taken completely by surprise but arose to the occasion and thanked all the girls heartily, and in a neat little speech reviewed the last four years, during which she has been teacher of the class and of the good fellowship which existed between all of them. Mrs. McLauchlin said she was very proud of "her girls" and in replying to the address said that she would never forget her girls of Keene Sunday school and gave each one a special invitation to Grafton where the Rev. Andrew McLauchlin will be stationed on the first of July.

The girls also presented to Miss Rose Gillett a lovely bar pin. Miss Gillett is a member of the class and is aso leaving Keene in the near future. Miss Gillett modestly thanked the girls for their kindness.

The addresses:

Dear Mrs. McLauchlin:

We, the girls of your class, are gathered here tonight to show our appreciation of the work you have done among us, and for us. You were always so willing to help in anything that would help the Sunday school for it was always a labor of love, and we will miss your help and kindly ways so much.

We wish you every happiness in your new field of labor and hope that we will have the pleasure of meeting you again. We have spent many happy hours together, both in our class and class meetings, and such happy memories are always sweet to remember, when distance divides.

We hope that you will sometimes have a kindly thought for us, and remember the happy times we have had during the past four years.

Will you please accept this gift as a token of love from your girls, and may each tick convey a loving thought to you from each one of us.

With our best wishes to Mr. McLauchlin, yourself, and family for the coming year.

Signed on behalf of the class—Minnie Edwards, treasurer; Eva Taylor, secretary; Bertha Wilson.

Dear Rose:

As you are soon leaving us we thought we would like to give you a little gift in rememberance of the class which you are leaving.

We wish you every happiness and success as you journey on, and may you always have happy memories of the time you spent in Keene.

We hope you will not forget us amid your new surroundings, and hope sometimes to see you back again.

Will you please accept this small gift from the class with our very best wishes for the future.

Signed on behalf of the class—Lily McIntyre, Ada Melling, Eleanor Stillman, Constance Passey, Dorothy Kindred.

The girls provided a dainty lunch and the rest of the evening was spent in jokes and music.

HOLSTEIN BREEDERS AT HILLCREST FARM

Campbellford District Club Visits Home of G. A. Brethen.

BURNBRAE, June 25.—The annual picnic of the Campbellford District Holstein Breeders Club was held at Mr. G. A. Brethen's Hillcrest Farm, Norwood, on Tuesday, June 22. Although the attendance was not as large as in some former years, much enthusiasm was manifest. In the forenoon the party visited three neighboring herds, the tour being planned by Mr. Brethen and Mr. McRae, district representative for Peterboro. After a most enjoyable luncheon hour at Mr. Brethen's spacious home the Hillcrest herd was put on exhibition and a judging class was conducted by Mr. R. M. Holthy of Port Perry, Holstein fieldman. Mr. Brethen's herd numbers sixteen head of which six are of milking age. The herd was cut down considerably by sales last spring. There are cows in the stable with records up to 113 lbs. of milk in one day. Mr. Brethen in years past has made some wonderful records from his cows, including the great "Rawerd" with 29,000 lbs. of milk in a year.

The Hillcrest stables are modern in every respect and invite the attention of everyone planning to build barns. The south wall is almost completely filled with glass which throws ample sunlight into the commodious box stalls some seven in number which are all partitioned with tube steel. The steel fittings do not obstruct the light so that the row of cows along the north wall is well supplied with sunshine as well.

The Campbellford breeders, one and all, voted the day a success and thanked Mr. and Mrs. Brethen for their kind hospitality. It is hoped that more of these field days will be held in the future as it is well for each breeder to get out and see what the other fellow is doing, learn some things for himself and perhaps offer some useful suggestions to other breeders.

Mr. Holthy stayed over until the following day when he visited a number of herds in the Burnbae district. With his wide experience in the Holstein field he is well qualified to give advice to the younger breeders and many of his suggestions as well as his criticism should bear fruit. Among the herds which he visited here were those of J. C. Nelson, Herbert Stotts, Herbert Tinney, Ernest Eagleson, James Eagleson, Murray Meiklejohn and E. L. Anderson.

W. I. MEETING.

Two Splendid Addresses Were Given By Mrs. Gordon Cook.

MADOC, June 25.—The June meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. James Hill, with an attendance of thirty-four.

Following the usual routine business Mr. S. Rollins addressed the ladies, asking for assistance at a picnic to be given by the Agricultural Society on the Fair grounds, on June 28. It was agreed that the Institute should superintend the lunch counters. The following committe was appointed:

Mesdames W. Whytock, R. Bristol, C. Whytock, D. Moorecroft, E. West, W. J. Hill, G. West, A. Kincaid, Miller, G. Hill, A. Smith, Wellman, R. Lewis, Connor, Caskey, J. Smith, R. Woods, Tumelty and Nickle. Mrs. Whytock and Mrs Moorecroft were appointed convenors.

A duet, "Only a Smile", was prettily sung by Mrs. A. H. Foster and Mrs. C. Whytock. The speaker for the afternoon was Mrs. Gordon Cook, an Institute lecturer. Mrs. Cook's subject was, "Balancing Our Lives", but her opening remarks were on possible Institute work, such as community work and work for our schools. She strongly advised having a school nurse. "It is the cheapest and best form of insurance we can get for our children," said Mrs. Cook. Epidemic cases may be checked and controlled, and defective children are helped before it is too late. Mrs. Cook spoke also of medical inspection and supervision of school during the noon hour, urging hot lunches and the supplying of First Aid kits to all schools.

Balancing Our Lives.

On introducing her subject proper, Mrs. Cook said that in balancing our lives we must take stock of what we have to balance: Time, only twenty-four hours; equipment, our own and our own strength. The measure of any one's balance must be how well she can keep herself and how well she can keep her family. Happines is usually the goal of each one and for this we need health of body and health of mind. To be healthy in body we need to have proper food and exercise. To be healthy in mind we must read properly and exercise the mind. We must have work, but we must also have time for play. Few are able to stand alone so we need social contacts, books, friends, societies. We should endeavor to keep out of ruts whether they be physical mental or moral. "The best cure for nerves is a garden," said Mrs. Cook and quoted:

"The kiss of the sun for pardon,
The song of the bird for mirth,
For I'm nearer to God in a garden
Than anywhere else on earth."

Customs and Conventions.

Mrs. Cook's second address was on "Customs and Conventions". Customs are often the outgrowth of the climate in which we live, the speaker said, and mentioned various customs in different countries. Conventions are the outgrowth of more formal living. Conventions may be a fad. They should have scientific basis. Knowledge breeds confidence, confidence breeds dignity and dignity breeds power. It is worth while to teach conventions but back of all teaching should be the Golden Rule, to put yourself in the other person's place and to have an understanding heart.

A vote of thanks for the splendid addresses given by Mrs. Cooke was moved by Mrs. Foster, seconded by Mrs. Bristol.

The usual pleasant social hour brought the meeting to a close.

MUCH AGITATION.

Actvities Among Workers, Soldiers and in India Are Recorded.

LONDON, June 25 (Canadian Press).—The British Government yesterday issued a blue book in which are revelations of the alleged activity of the Communist party in Great Britain and its relations with Moscow. The blue book contains many letters from various Communists to their agents in Great Britain. One letter referring to the campaign in connection with the miners' movement and dated August, 1925, was addressed to the Agitprop, the Agitation and Propaganda Department of the Communist International. Other letters refer to a successful campaign being conducted among the soldiers, the formation of a Lenin school of activities in English factories, and work among the police force in India as well as among the British working class.

"It is of immediate importance that British workers be drawn into the fight against the white terror, capitalism," says one communication. Another letter published in the blue book consists of a tirade by the Communist member of Parliament, Saklatvala, against the British Labor party.

"We must adopt merciless measures against this party," the letter read.

BISHOPS REACH COMPROMISE

Anglicans Confer on Reservation of Sacrament—Not Extreme.

RECEPTION IN DOUBT.

LONDON, June 25. Canadian Press. — A conference of Anglican Bishops at Lambeth Palace, the residence of the Archbishop of Canterbury is reported to have arrived at a compromise on the question of reservation of the sacrament. It is believed that the decision avoids the rigid position taken by the extremists on either side. The agreement will not extend beyond making permissable the reservation of sacrament for sick and others prevented from attending church service, it is expected.

The great question is whether the half million anglo-Catholics in these islands will accept the statement.

The Daily News says that the report that they will go over to the Roman Catholic Church is not accepted in well informed quarters.

JUDGE CAN'T TELL WHICH DIED FIRST

Nathan McIlmoyle and Mrs. Kahn Found Dead Together.

WELLAND, June 25.— (Canadian Press.)—After having all available testimony before him as to the death in a cottage at Erie Beach of Mrs. Kahn, of Buffalo, and Nathan McIlmoyle, in March of last year, Judge Livingstone was unable yesterday to determine who died first and he will report to that effect. McIlmoyle willed his estate of $2,000 to Mrs. Kahn, but stipulated that if she died first, the estate was to pass to his heirs. Neither Dr. Stackhouse nor Dr. Stewart, of Ridegway, could say which died first.

Inasmuch as the rediscount rate was unchanged by the New York Federal Reserve Bank yesterday it is considered extremely likely that it will be reduced after the turn of the month. Some stocks are entitled to reaction. Word from the floor of the stock exchange is still that the buying appears much better than the selling. Another irregular market to-day. The banking sponsors of this issue are quite bullish.

Acting Secretary of Treasury Winston says changes in existing rediscount rates of the Federal Reserve banks are not anticipated in the immediate future.

All Grains Take Drop Selling Forces Wheat Down

CHICAGO, June 25.—(Canadian Press.)—All grains showed below yesterday's low point during the early dealings on the Board of Trade to-day. Starting with a firm undertone, due to the strength of quotations at Liverpool, the wheat market there soon ran into commission house selling, and brought about a sharp break. Starting unchanged to 1-2c. higher, wheat quickly shot down grade. The defeat of the McNary Haugen bill yesterday with continued favorable reports on the crop led to early selling of corn and oats and the value of these cereals soon went below yesterday's low point. Corn started unchanged to half a cent off and later underwent a general drop. Provisions showed early firmness.

Price Trend Irregular Rails Make Good Gains

NEW YORK, June 25 (Canadian Press). — Extensive readjustments of speculative accounts resulted in an irregular movement of prices in to-day's Stock Market, with rails in general pointing upward while industrials lost ground. Call money rates held relatively firm above four per cent.

Rails responded to excellent earnings reports and merger gossip, gains of 1 to 2½ points being recorded by New York Central, Atchison, Union Pacific, Pere Marquette, and Norfolk and Western.

The weakness of motor shares coincided with the inventory season at the principal manufacturing plants, Wall Street being inclined to the belief that the recent price-cut indicated severe competition and would lead to reduced margins of profit.

Toronto Trading Is Dull Page Hersey Is Leader

TORONTO, June 25. Canadian Press. — Trading was inclined to be featureless on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. Prices were for the most part unchanged.

Brazilian fluctuated between 5-8 and ½ up at 97 7-8 and 97 3-4. British Columbia Fishing was active in volume but was unchanged at 74¼. Smelters was very inactive 209, a gain of 1½ points. Dome was weak at 814, a net loss of 25c per share.

Mothers' Bad Language Affects Daughters' Talk

LONDON, June 25 (Canadian Press).—The bad language of the modern mother is responsible for a great deal of loose speech among school girls, Miss Mary Morrison, principal of the Francis Holland School for Girls, told the annual conference of the Head-Mistresses' Association here.

"For years we have made allowance for father's strong language," Miss Morrison stated, "but now mother is nearly as bad, and it is having a serious effect on the girls' speech among themselves. This is all part of the so-called greater freedom."

PLOT IN SPAIN MANY ARRESTED

Vast Conspiracy Reported By Correspondent of Paris Paper.

COUNTY CALM.

PARIS, June 25. Canadian Press.—The discovery of a vast political plot in Spain is reported by the Madrid correspondent of the Journal.

General Weyler of Cuban fame, (the Duke of Rubi), the correspondent says, was the signer of a manifesto to the country, which was discovered by the police. Many persons have been arrested.

Those arrested include many intellectuals, notably a son of the well-known sculptor, Mariano Benilliure, and the editor of La Libertad of Madrid, and the former Republican deputies, Marcelino Domingo and Barriobero.

The Journal correspondent says the government is master of the situation —the country is calm.

The discovery of the plot it is added, is not likely to interfere with the departure of the King and Queen for Paris and London to-night.

REDUCTIONS IN WATER RATES

To the Water Consumers of the City of Peterborough:

Due to the efficient and economical manner in which the Waterworks Department has been operated during the past few years, your Utilities Commission were enabled to present to the City Council, at the beginning of this year, a cheque to be applied to the reduction of taxes, for the sum of $9080.37, being the excess profits above those required by the Commission in the safe conduct of its business.

After careful consideration of all the facts and figures in connection with the operation of this Department, your Commission takes pleasure in announcing the adoption of a new tariff schedule on a reduced basis for water supplied for all domestic and commercial purposes, effective July 1st, 1926.

The new tariff will represent a direct saving to the water consumers of over 6 1-2 per cent.

Sincerely,
E. F. MASON,

The Sports Mode

Widens Into the General Daytime Costume

If every one who wore a sports costume were a player we could turn the whole smart world into one glorious game of sports. But not so, for besides the participators there are onlookers, as well as those who adopt the youthful, easy-to-wear sports modes for their every-day activities.

The Two-Piece Frocks of silk wool jersey or of silks, Sweaters and smart Pleated Skirts, Flannel Blazers in plain striped colors, loose hanging Tweed Top Coats and sporty little Hats of felt or straw—all these and the rest of the sports modes are seen worn by fashionable folk on the street, at luncheon and at many places besides the golf course or tennis court.

You'll like the jaunty sports-like air which characterizes the modes we offer.

PICNIC AT APSLEY.

United Church Outing Is Enjoyable Event. Apsley News.

APSLEY, June 25.—The first local picnic of the season was held on Wednesday at Lasswade under the auspices of the United Church, and although the weather was unpropitious, a good number attended, and between the showers an enjoyable time was spent. Dinner was served under the trees at the picturesque picnic grove on the Methuen road. The Rev. J. W. Ogden returned from a three weeks' visit to Montreal and was present at the function.

Tourists are beginning to come in. A party of eleven is at Jim Lean's cottage on Jack's Lake where the bass fishing is reported good, though the weather is quite cool. Ramona Lodge on Loon Lake is opened for the season. The roads to these favorite fishing haunts can bear improving, and it is hoped this will be affected before the rush of tourists arrives.

Two degrees of frost were registered here on Sunday morning, and as a consequence a good many gardens suffered. This was the sixth time this month the thermometer has registered freezing point or lower.

An operetta, "Little Almond Eyes," will be presented by local talent in the parish room at Apsley on Tuesday evening, June 29th, and promises to be a success, though rather an ambitious undertaking.

OBITUARY.

MRS. WILLIAM HIGGS.

MADOC, June 25.—The many friends of Mrs. Alice Thompson Higgs, wife of Rev. William Higgs, were shocked to hear of her sudden illness and death at her home in Port Perry on Saturday.

Mrs. Higgs was born in Madoc thirty-seven years ago and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Thompson. She lived in Madoc until the time of her marriage to Archer Moray, and after her husband's death returned again to her native town. Three years ago she was married to Rev. W. Higgs and went to reside in Port Perry. Besides her husband she leaves three children, Norma, Robert and Harold Moray, and her mother, Mrs. E. Kelly. The sympathy of the community is extended to the bereaved family.

The funeral service was held in Madoc United Church on Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock and interment made at Lakeview Cemetery. The church was beautifully decorated with white flowers, a last tribute to one who for many years was an earnest worker in the church. The services were conducted by Rev. A. H. Foster, pastor of the church.

ON YOUR SUIT.

The grease that sometimes shows itself on coat collars may be removed by a brush dampened with water in which salt has been dissolved.

IMPORTING HORSES.

Blairton Man Bringing 18 From Western Canada.

MARMORA, June 25.—Mr. John McLaughlin of Blairton is importing a carload of eighteen young horses into this district from the West. These animals range in age from five to seven years and their weights vary from 1,200 to 1,400 pounds.

A dance was put on in the Town Hall on Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Guild of St. Paul's Church. Baxter's Orchestra from Point Anne furnished the music for this well-patronized event.

NECESSITY OF ORGANIZATION

sident of the Club, was asked to address the gathering, and explained the visit of the Kiwanis members as an outcome of the project being carried on by the Club to promote a closer companionship and understanding between city dwellers and rural residents. Dr. Craig, who said he had spent nearly half of his life on the farm, in Western Canada, revealed a hidden talent when he said he wished he could speak as well as he could milk a cow, professing great prowess in the latter direction. He explained briefly the ideals of Kiwanis, as giving primacy to the human rather than to the material values of life, and striving, in following out this ideal, to promote a closer friendship between those who live on the farm and urban residents.

Necessity of Co-Operation.

The president of the Cavan and South Monaghan Clubs, Mr. Fred Wood, announcing in his opening remarks that the combined clubs has now a membership of one hundred, introduced the first speaker, Mrs. Miles Oper, who made a very pleasing address, urging on her audience the necessity of co-operative organization.

"I feel that the women of this community should be linked up in this great three-in-one organization of the United Farmers, the United Farm Women, and the United Farm Young People of Ontario," said Mrs. Oper, who congratulated the men on their splendid membership in the organization. "It is a sign of the times that farmers are taking a keener interest in the business of their industry. The main business of the farmer used to be work. Now he sees that three things are necessary: investment, production and marketing. Land values in Ontario are increasing, and we must therefore figure on investment to a much greater degree than formerly. From the platforms of every shade of political leaning we find commendation of the farmers for the increased interest they are taking in their business. Why is this great change in public feeling noticeable? Because the world respects the man who respects himself, and the man who is interested enough in his business to look well to his production and his marketing. The great wheat pool of the West has proven a success. The Campbell amendement to the Grain Act (if it is not killed in the Senate) is going to mean a great deal to the farmers of Canada. At the present time, here in the East, we are urging the formation of a wheat pool, an egg pool, and a poultry pool. The only way to remedy the drawbacks to farming is by organization. Some people are ever ready to look for reverses. Governments and organizations have always had their reverses, but it is by our mistakes that we grow better. If you will only get behind your organization, and help to make it progress, then you will go forward. We must organize to keep pace with the times. Every other industry is organized to the hilt. The government has given us its help, and has established many departments to further the work. It has established experimental farms also, but we must avail ourselves of the opportunities offered to us. We help to pay for these things, and we should take advantage of them. The government has dealt most favorably with us in respect to giving us this help.

"Organization presents to us the only feasible plan of co-operation. In rural communities, organization is a social, as well as an economic need.

How are we going to raise our standard unless we work together? A lot of us go into an organization with a string to our membership, like the Scotchman who was advised to throw a penny into the Thames for good luck, and said he had done so, but the string broke. We expect to get too much out of the dollar that goes into the Central office. We should be organized one hundred per cent., and that means that every man, woman and child, for they all do their part in this business of farming, should belong to the organization.

"Now, what has been accomplsihed by organization? The Western farmers have done much. Through the Canadian Wheat Pool they have organized one of the greatest institutions of its kind on the face of the globe. The Canada Grain Act did not give the farmers a square deal, so they moved the Campbell amendment, and then sent down enough men to Ottawa to hold the line. If it is not defeated in the Senate, it will be one of the greatest victories ever won by the farmers of the North American Continent.

Women Can Help.

"The farmer of to-day is an absolutely new creation. He is doing better business and he is raising a better product. He is placing the products of Ontario on the markets of the world. That is something worth while.

"The public press, instead of hurling insults at us, have accorded the farmer a place in the business world and commend us for the progress we have made.

"Women can gain mutual benefit with men in this organization. It is a peculiar thing that when a farmer is a failure, his wife gets the blame for it, and if he is a success, she gets a good deal of the credit. It is a partnership that is unique, and women must take their place in it to make it grow. If you can't organize here as Farm Women, then unite with the men and make it a bigger and better organization. It is to the rural communities that we must turn for the moral stamina of the nation."

Mr. Gilroy's Address

Mr. H. A. Gilroy of Alvinston, president of the Ontario Co-operative Company, was the second speaker, and gave a fluent, concise outline of the aims and growth of the co-operative movement in this province.

"The business for farming," said Mr. Gilroy, "is strictly a business proposition. As the president of the United Farmers' Co-operative Company, I say that we know no politics and we have never known any. While I hold no brief for the Government in power today, nor for the Government which it defeated, still we are geting from the Government today splendid co-operation.

Less than a hundred years ago in England, said Mr. Gilroy, a few agricultural labbrers, dissatisfied with conditions as they were then, united together in a miniature strike aimed at getting a decent living wage. They were haled before the courts and received sentences of transportation for seven years for daring as an organized body to institute any measure for their own betterment. Right in the County of Durham, about twenty years ago, a paper published in Newcastle came out with an editorial demanding that descendants of the old "Blazers" get together and get out their shotguns and barbed wire to pepper passing motorists of the day with their shots and bar their progress on the roads with wire barricades. "If we put those ideas into practice today," said Mr. Gilroy, "we would have plenty of scope for our guns. But ideas change in other ways, just as they have changed in that."

"We know that we have Labor unions organized today, sometimes too efficiently, as some of us think, so that by collective action the force of Labor throughout the world may be able to demonstrate its strength and to correct abuses. The pendulum may swing a little too far in this respect, but as farmers, there is little danger at present of getting overorganized. The collective effort of organizing made by the farmers has culminated in the pool idea, and there is room in this movement for every agriculturist in the land. The greater measure of control that you exercise over an individual or a commodity, the ore you can dominate modity, the more you can dominate

Success in Egg Grading

Mr. Gilroy went on to demonstrate what had been done by such control in the grading of eggs, supplemented by governmental help. Before the idea of grading eggs became popular, the per capita consumption of eggs throughout the Dominion was 157. This has now increased to 313 per capita, and, instead of the Canadian market for eggs ranking seventh in the British markets, it now has "a mighty good second place."

Going into the subject of the co-operative system, Mr. Gilroy said that, instead of the old system of having eggs handled many times before reaching the ultimate consumer, they were now put in storage for the farmer, who was given an interim payment, then sold when the market was favorable, and the profits returned to the producer. By the old system, he said, the eggs were purchased from the farmer when they were plentiful, sold to the consumer when they were scare, and the difference in price was "not handed over to the Salvation Army," but went into the pockets of the storehouse owner.

Speaking of the advances made in the handling of cream by co-operative methods, he said that $100,000 would be turned back to the producers by the company this year. A new department was being inaugurated at present, to make available to farmers the easy purchase of inspected feeder cattle. The idea of a wheat pool in the East similar to that in the West, was another new idea. The production of Ontario wheat ran to nearly twenty-five millions of bushels annually, and this was not marketed in the Dominion, but largely through American ports to the foreign buyers, after being mixed with an inferior grade of Southern wheat, which lowered the standard of Ontario wheat considerably in the markets of the world.

An effort to lower production costs was necessary, declared Mr. Gilroy. None of the products raised on the farms were sold directly, except, perhaps, cream, wool and eggs. On other products, the problem of the middlemen made the costs mount up. We should want to eliminate every unnecessary profit that is made on our grain, between the time it leaves our hands and the time when it reaches the consumer in Europe."

"The co-operative movement should be one hundred per cent strong. When it is twenty-five per cent, it is good; and fifty per cent is better; but if it were a hundred per cent strong in Ontario, we could dominate the situation. And by that, I don't mean that you should exploit any market. I think it is a menace to the industry or to the man who gets a false price or an obnormal price. What we want is a fair average return for wages and produce costs. It is time that the farmer stopped being at the end of the lane, and forming the bumper for the whole works.

The Farmer Loses by Making Money

"It sounds ridiculous and sort of cross-wise to say it, but it is true that the farmer is the only man in the world who can make money at a loss. Any farmer, on a hundred acres of land, who employs the same system of accounting used by the big business firms, will find that he is doing business at a loss. You may be making some money, but you are making it out of your hide, as compared with big business. If production costs are too high, there is a reason. Collective organization on you part would remedy the freight rate situation and many other evils that tend to enhance the cost of your goods, and, as I said before, if we can keep down to a specific plan of cost elimination, we have solved the problem, because if we can produce more cheaply than our competitors, we are in a very favorable condition."

Speaking of the co-operative company, Mr. Gilroy said that, in an endeavor to close out outstanding notes, they were inaugurating a new system. They were changing the unit of value of the stock from $25 to $12.50 so that a man having a share half paid for, would be considered to have paid it up fully. If he had four shares half paid for, he would be given back his note, and the account closed up.

Following the speeches, a program of races and ball games were run off, the results of which appear in another column. The dance wound up the day's festivities.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thornecliffe

SHE TELLS OF WAYS OF WEARING SPANISH SHAWLS.

There are few of Madame's clients who are privileged to come behind the scenes into our manikins' room. But occasionally a favored client slips back to see us and chat a bit.

Between busy periods we all sit about in undies if it's warm, or in simple slips that open down the front. Today we were sitting about, sewing and chatting, when a little artist who often comes in to sketch Madame's creations for one of the leading magazines, came back to see us.

Gaby was posing in a delightfully simple corn-colored dinner frock, and we were all talking at a mile a minute.

The little artist told us that she was frequently asked how it came about that manikins always knew just how to wear a shawl, or a frock, or any bit of apparel to best advantage, when so many others strive to do the same thing, and lots of them can't, as she put it.

"I think it's because we girls who act as models are naturally attracted to the kind of thing we can do best, and we just happen to have what is called a 'clothes sense' inborn," Gaby ventured.

The little artist added:

"I also think that studying clothes and being always interested in them gives one the kind of training that brings about chic results."

"There's much in that," I assured her. "After all, there are not many people who cannot learn a lot about selecting clothes and wearing them, if they put their minds to it."

Then the conversation turned to the difficulty of wearing Spanish shawls effectively, and to how many people lost the best results for a beautiful shawl, simply because they did not know how to wear it about their shoulders.

"Let me show you a new idea I originated, for wearing a short Spanish shawl as if it were an evening wrap," Gaby enthusiastically offered.

This Gaily Colored Shawl Is Draped and Caught at the Shoulder as a Wrap.

She picked up a lovely shawl, cream with huge red and blue flowers, folded it deftly, threw it across her shoulders, and tied it at the left side in a single loop.

The artist was so charmed that she decided to sketch the frock and shawl together, so Gaby stood patiently while the second sketch was made.

The Woman's Day

Written by a Woman for Women.

Touching brightly on woman's every major interest in life from books and babies to politics and psycho analysis.

(By Allene Sumner)

"So we sat us down in a shady nook,
The girl, a sandwich, and a book!"

It's that time of year. Picnics and shady nooks are by no means reserved for only the romantic young of the species. Many a marital row could be smoothed out, say domestic experts, if the picnic basket was substituted for the cook stove.

WHAT TO PACK.

"But it's as hard to pack a basket," wail some housewives, "as cook a meal. I can never think of a thing to take." Maybe these rambling suggestions will help. Salmon and tuna fish salad, to vary the usual baked beans and potato salad, sardine and chopped boiled egg sandwiches, peanut butter and date sandwiches, fruit salad or fruit sherbet in the thermos bottle, cold meat loaf, cream cheese and jam sandwiches, drop cakes, olives and pickles, orangeade, lemonade, or cold tea in the thermos bottle. A complete hot meal can be carried in thermos bottles, from hot soup to creamed fish or chicken, or with a grill a regular dinner of baked potatoes, steak, and vegetables, may be cooked.

SUMMER BABY.

The layette should include from four to eight dozen diapers, two to four knitted bands, two to four knitted shirts, two to four part woolen petticoats, three nightgowns, four to eight white cotton slips, coat and bonnet, two to four long stockings, three sacques, three wraps or blankets.

THE CROWNING GLORY.

If your hair is oily, use this tonic on it nightly. Quinine sulphate, 20gr.; bay rum, 8 oz.; tincture of nux vomica, 2 dr.; resorcin, 1 dr.; water, 16 oz.

"ETTIKET."

The letters "P.P.C." on a calling card mean that the card was left when the owner came for a parting call. The initials are from the French words "pour prendre conge," meaning "to depart."

POEM GOWNS.

Summer gowns for festive occasions, the tea, the dance, the garden party, are poems of loveliness. All the summertime pastel shades of rose and violet and cream and cool green be-decorated with birds and flowers and butterflies in a perfect riot of summer colors. These printed chiffon and georgette gowns are all self-trimmed or with dyed lace to match.

BUDGET YOUR TIME.

Housekeeping takes on its gloomiest tinge in the summer time when the kitchen is hot and a breeze blows outside. The wise home maker will budget her activities even as she does her income doing only that which is really necessary for the comfort of her brood. Isobel Brands, home expert, says that the average woman spends 70 per cent of her day in food preparat 15 per cent. in cleaning, 10 per cent in care of the children, 5 per cent on personal duties or leisure.

* * *

Wonder how that 5 per cent compares with the time men spend on personal leisure!

JUNE BRIDES.

Ailsa Mellon, possibly the smartest bride of the spring, was wed at high noon. It is possible that her precedent may cause society to favor this hour rather than four o'clock, which Emily Post society has hitherto sponsored. Engraved invitations are sent out three weeks before the ceremony.

GYPSY HEART.

"I'd love to be a gypsy
With brown feet bare,
And dance like flame
Through night-black woods,
With starshine in my hair—"
But she has a house and she can't, so she ends—
"And so I hush my wayward heart,
And cook and serve the meals,
But neighbors wonder
Why I wear
Gay slippers with red heels!"

—Lexie Dean Robertson.

Paris Dots the "i" in Many of Its Summer Silks

The spot of color that is so important this season takes the form of dots, from pinhead and confetti size to coin spots the size of shillings. They are used in all-over patterns, in groups that form a design, or graduate to a border, or in connection with floral patterns. White spotted with color and color dotted with white, with a deeper shade or with one or more contrasting colors, appear in the new silks and transparent cottons. The frock illustrated is made of very fine white cotton crêpe with ring dots of navy blue, with the slim effect of the long body carried on by the inverted tucks in the skirt section.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

SATURDAY JUNE 26.

The astral forces for this day seem to be united for the baneful purpose of threatening and thwarting all manner of activities and associations. The main danger seems to be from indulgence in impetuous and quarrelsome behavior, which may precipitate all sorts of disagreeable situations. There is an omen of deceit and treachery, affairs of a personal nature being as well under the ban as business. Circumspect conduct is enjoined generally.

Those whose birthday it is may save their year from havoc by being restrained and well governed in all their dealings and relations, both business and private. Also they should be on guard against fraud and intrigue. A child born on this day may require excellent training and discipline in early life in order to offset tendencies to rash, impetuous, quarrelsome and generally self-indulgent and extravagant conduct. Discretion, prudence and thrift should be inculcated.

Black and Silver Made This Smart and Youthful Evening Frock.

The slip above makes the most distinctive frock for dinner and dancing.

It is really a simple frock to plan and make, for it consists of myriads of glittering silver flowers appliqued to a straightline slip of black georgette. There is a deep decollete neckline front and back, while the black georgette underslip is edged at the top with bands of silver.

The same idea could be carried out effectively in colored georgette, such as brilliant green or bright yellow.

HER OWN WAY

A GIRL of TODAY

DANCING FOR MONEY.

"The girl was very slangy who talked to me in the park, Judy. In fact I could not always understand her. For instance, when I told her that I wished I didn't know where I was going to get the money to eat that night, she said 'Come off. Come off. You're telling the cock-eyed world something that you can't prove.'

"I didn't know what she meant by 'cock-eyed' world, but I valiantly told her I was telling the truth, and she answered

"'So's your old man.'

"Finally, she said 'I must leave you, for I'm on at The Circle from half past six until ten tonight, and I've got to go and feed my stomach first. I don't dare to trust those hard-shelled old guys that I have to dance with. They may gyp me out of my supper."

"'Where is The Circle?' I asked.

"'Good Lord, girlie, don'tcha you know where The Circle is?'

"'I don't even know what it is,' I answered.

"'Say, girlie, your education has been sadly neglected. Come on with me, and I'll show you the place where they have the best jazz and the best Charleston dancers in town.'

"I had been trying to learn the Charleston, Judy, and I was rather taken with this until I realized that I would have to have a partner.

"'I don't know anyone to dance with.'

"'You don't have to know anyone. There are always plenty of gigolos about.'

"I must have looked my mystification, for she said "Gosh, you don't know much, do ya. A "gigolo" is a young man who dances with women who come to The Circle with no men to dance with them.

"'They are like I am, dearie. That's their business, and the boss pays them fifty cents an hour. But you needn't think the women who hire them get away with that, for I'm sure those clever boys pick up a lota money from their partners just as I do with the guys I dance with.'

"Almost unconsciously I drew back a little, and yet, I must confess, the idea had a great fascination for me. I wondered if it were true that under any circumstance, that I, Joan Meredith, would dance with any man who had to be paid for it.

"I laughed. It truly was a laughable idea. Could such a thing be possible? Were there such places?"

HOME-MAKING HELPS

CARE OF SOILED CLOTHES.

The family wash is always one of the Summer problems. Housekeepers approach it from different angles, according to their needs. But storing the clothes until wash day must be done properly or there will be difficulties when the weather is very warm.

In the first place, damp towels, sheets or table linen must be dried before throwing into a hamper or they will mildew. All personal clothing that may be damp must also be dried before being put with other things into a hamper or clothes bag.

On wash day all the table linens should be carefully looked over for fruit stains and other spots before putting into soapy water. Remove the stains first, then wash the things. Children's clothing is apt to have grass or other outdoor stains, which must be removed before washing the garments. Hot milk or boiling water poured through the material or salts of lemon will take out the stains.

Towels are also apt to be spotted and stained at this season, and should be looked over carefully. Perhaps they will need bleaching overnight to whiten them up. Sheets are always inclined to grow yellow and will need good boiling frequently to keep them white. Pillowcases also need bleaching through the hot weather.

All household cleaning cloths and scrub cloths should be dried after using and not be thrown wet into a bucket to dry as they can.

PEERLESS ERASMIC The Dainty SOAP

Made in England by ERASMIC PERFUMERS London and Paris

When we sit in the dark theatre and have the natural reel show us how easy it is to be friends with wild birds, we perhaps do not get the right slant on the matter.

It takes about three minutes to show some nature magic which could hardly be photographed in anything less than three days, and perhaps three weeks.

Here on the screen comes a nighthawk, sitting on her two eggs, placed on a pebbly bare spot in a field. We are shown the big field, then a gray spot at a distance, then a close up of it, and there she is. It takes a little time to make out which is the bird and which the stones.

Well, she becomes alarmed and flutters to one side, trailing a badly broken wing. The poor thing!" everyone in the audience says, just as we once said it, but, as we see a man rush over to help her, perhaps to catch her and mend that crippled wing, she plays a dirty trick on him; she almosts lets him catch her, then she just manages to flutters out of reach again, and this goes on until she has him away, a hundred yards or more from the eggs, and then she suddenly recovers in the most comical manner possible, and flies strongly away, leaving the sentimental man standing with a badly fooled look on his face. She was just faking. She was baiting him to lead him away.

However, another day the movie men come back again and finds those two eggs have hatched out into two fluffy young ones, with no sign of a nest. The eggs at first, and now the young match the mottled pebbles. And would you believe it? one of those little chaps reaches up and seems to kiss the mother, as he takes her beak in his and pulls back and forth, coaxing for food.

When all is ready, the camera grinds, and slowly, very slowly indeed, a man creps towards the mother bird as she covers and protects her little ones, clucking to them as a hen.

She is a brave nighthawk, and she remains to hide her little ones as the man's hand slowly creeps up to her and touches her wing. She is wild and free, but she lets that gentle hand go up and onto her back, before she takes her wing and pushes it away. The man's hand withdraws, the close up fades to a pin point, and week now she is left alone in peace.

SAVE YOUR TEETH

Prepared by the Oral Hygiene Committee of Canada, with which the Peterborough Dental Society is Collaborating.

TEETH AND GOOD LOOKS.

It is related how in the bygone days, 'when knighthood was in flower,' the fan was used largely by milady to hide a mouth made unattractive through disfiguring teeth.

And no doubt to some extent, this was so, for you must remember that in Elizabethain days, dental service was in its infancy, and in fact, much of it was as yet, unborn.

Happily these conditions do not exist in this enlightened age, except among the neglectful or the very ignorant.

So it seems, that there is established a relationship between teeth and good looks. In fact, a moment's consideration will enable us to see that the teeth play a greater part in the production of beauty of the face, than any other organ or part, and conversely, that bad teeth can and do mar an otherwise attractive and pleasing countenance.

However, much disfigurement may come not only through unkempt and missing teeth but from 'crooked' and protruding teeth which are invariably linked up with malformations of the jaws.

While obviously it is the softer tissues of the face such as the lips and cheeks which give to the face its countors, pleasing or otherwise, yet these tissues merely serve to clothe the deeper structures, the facial bones, of which the two jaws, comprise the major portion. So that facial deformities are, to a large extent, abnormalities in structure of the maxillary bones in which the teeth are encased.

It may be recalled, too, how following extraction of one or more teeth, the facial tissues fall in correspondingly, until with the edentulous jaw (where all the teeth are missing), through this sagging, the facial expression may be greatly altered, and with the pleasing contours of the lips and cheeks entirely lost. Truly as has been said, it would be difficult to conceive of a really ugly face where the teeth are in good occlusion and well cared for, or of a really beautifully fre!wl where the contrary conditon prevails.

ADVENTURES of the TWINS

by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

"Won't you come into my house?" said the Man-in-the-Moon.

Nick thought for a minute, and then said, "I wish we could find Inco and Flops first."

"That's so," said the Man-in-the-Moon kindly. "You are right. We must find your toy elephant and clown as soon as possible. Just wait here and I'll go and get my big telescope. It can see things a million miles away."

Away went the Man-in-the-Moon and in about two minutes he came back with a hundred little moon fairies carrying the big telescope.

"Now then," said he, "this is not only a telescope, but it is a telephone and a telegraph as well. Indeed it is a tele-everything! We should certainly be able to locate your lost friends now."

So he fixed the telescope exactly in the right position, then he clapped his hands and the moon fairies disappeared.

"I can see all over the moon with this," he went on to say, "and I can see through the moon too. First I shall look in Shut-Eye Town."

"Oh, are they there?" cried Nancy as the Man-in-the-Moon peeped through the hole.

"No," said the Moon Man. "I don't see them. I can see the Forty Winks, and I can see the Sandman's house, but I—Why, I do believe—yes, sir! I do believe I see the very people you are looking for, my dears! Come and look for yourselves and see if it isn't Inco and Flops."

Nancy and Nick almost fell over each other trying to get to the telescope. Nick stepped back, though, and allowed Nancy to peep through first.

"Yes, siree!" shouted Nancy. "It's Inco and Flops! Lookee, Nick."

So Nick looked and there they were, the two of them at the Sandman's house. Inco was standing at the Sandman's front door and Flops was sitting on the Sandman's front steps.

"Hello, Flops! Hello, Inco!" called Nick. "Here we are. We came to get you."

But Flops and Inco never moved.

"They can't hear you," explained the Man-in-the-Moon. "They look near, but they are really very far away — about as far away on the moon as New York is from Chicago down on the earth.

"But just wait, this telescope can be turned into a telephone by pressing this button. There now—go ahead. They'll hear you this time."

So Nick tried it again. "Hello there, Flops! Hello there, Inco!" he called.

This time Flops and Inco both jumped to hear a voice come out of the air from nowhere.

"Where are you? Who are you?" said Flops, the Clown.

"It's Nancy and Nick," said Nick. "We are at the Man-in-the-Moon's house. We're coming to get you and take you home."

"I don't want to go home," said Inco loudly. "Nobody makes fun of me here."

"We're ever so sorry," said Nick. "But we have a surprise for you, if you wait there until we come."

"All right," said Inco and Flops. "We'll wait."

YOUR HEALTH

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

There are several words in use by doctors and the laity to describe death of the tissues of a part of the body. Gangrene, mortification, mummification, sloughing and necrosis—these are some of the terms.

The skin, muscles and the other soft parts of the body cannot long survive any serious interference with the circulation of the blood. This wonderful fluid is the scavenger, the grocery boy, the milkman, the fuel distributor. Without the blood we should starve or freeze or die of poisoning.

Not only is the general health dependent on an unfailing supply of good blood, but each separate and particular part of the body must have a constant renewal of its supply or local death results. We are so constituted that the heart, the blood vessels and the fluid cannot cease for five minutes their vital work.

Each region of the body has its particular blood vessels. Through the arteries the red blood is taken to the part, where it is distributed through the capillaries and then it comes back through the veins to the heart. For instance, a big artery goes down the leg to the ankle, where it breaks up into branches to supply the foot and toes. This channel must be kept open and uninterrupted so that the blood may flow freely. So long as it does flow and the blood is good the tissues and toes are strong and healthy.

If something should happen to destroy or stop up that main artery, then there would be trouble. The normal pink or red color of the skin would bleach out and pretty soon it would turn black. It would not be long before the flesh would cleave from the bone and drop off. The terrible odor of mortification would be noticed very soon.

Gangrene may be caused, then, by anything which shuts off the blood supply. A crushing injury might destroy the artery and make it incapable of carrying blood.

Sometimes, as a result of disease in the heart or blood vessels, a clot may form. Breaking loose, it may be carried by the blood stream until it becomes crowded into a small artery. In such case it completely closes the vessel, preventing the passage of the blood past it into the parts beyond.

There may be a local inflammation, pus formation and enough disturbance in the neighborhood to cut off the blood vessels by pressure of the products of the disease. Freezing may start this.

Any one of these conditions will result in death of the tissues which have been supplied by the damaged blood vessel.

There are different types of gangrene. "Moist gangrene," or, as it is sometimes called, "hot gangrene," is associated with acute inflammation. The opposite of this form is "dry gangrene," in which the tissues become hard and mummified.

The first sign of this disease may be a tiny blue or black spot. Perhaps this discoloration is noticed at the root of one of the toenails. The spot grows larger and larger until the whole foot is black.

There may be a well-defined border, marking the line between healthy and diseased tissues. Along with the local changes there is great pain. Indeed, there may be pain a long time before the black spot appears.

If the ailment is not conrtolled it may continue until the toes actually drop off the feet. Without skillful treatment the trouble is likely to progress.

Needless to say, gangrene is a disease which requires wise treatment. The doctor should be called upon at once. Until he is in charge keep the parts dry, using some form of dusting powder rather than any kind of wet dressing.

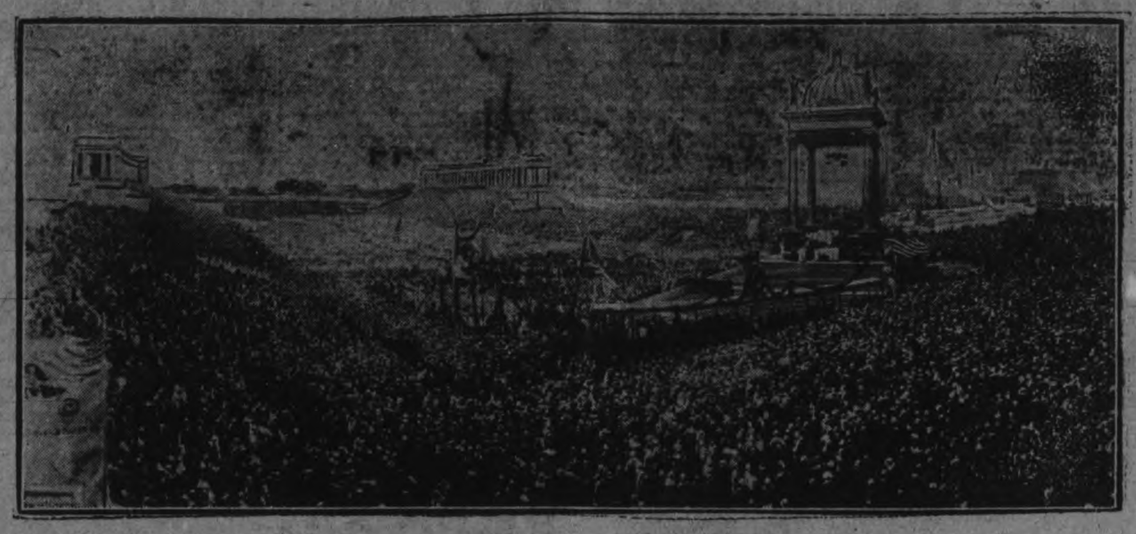
EUCHARISTIC CONGRESS CROWDS



Above is shown the gathering in the vast stadium at Soldiers' Field, Chicago, where the 28th Eucharistic Congress is in session this week, with an estimated attendance of more than 600,000 delegates, representing practically every nation in the world. On the high altar shown in the picture, solemn masses are sung by Cardinal Bonzano, apostolic delegate to the Congress, and by other of the visiting prelates, which include twelve cardinals. It is estimated that more than 280,000 persons attended the services on Monday, and that almost that number more were unable to gain admission to the field.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

DORIS HAS A PLEASANT SURPRISE.

"I thought I saw something on the trunk of that tree," said Doris, as she ran around to the other side of the tree. Then a wee little bird moved. "No wonder I couldn't see you at first," Doris laughed. "You wicked little woodpecker!"

"Who's a woodpecker?" asked the little bird. "Surely, you don't call me a woodpecker!"

"Why, aren't you a woodpecker?" asked Doris. "Were you pecking at the bark on that tree?"

"Of course, I was pecking on the tree trunk," replied the birdling, "but that doesn't make me a woodpecker. I don't even belong to his family."

"I'm sorry I made the mistake," said Doris. "You see, I don't believe I've ever seen a little bird just like you. I'll tell you one thing. Your mamma knew how to dress you so folks wouldn't see you. Why, the brown and ashy-gray of your suit fades into the color of the very tree trunk you're on. May I ask who you are? I'm Doris Dean."

"I'm Brown Creeper," replied the little bird. "And if you've never seen a brown creeper before, take a good look at me and you'll know one the next time you see one. You'll never call us woodpeckers again."

"I'm mighty glad to know you, Mr. Brown Creeper," said Doris, bowing very politely. "Do you live around here some place? Why are you pecking at the bark of that tree?"

"Aren't You a Woodpecker?"

"Shoo-oo, don't tell a soul," whispered the little brown bird, "this tree bark is full of spider eggs, and my wife is hungry. It's quite a bit to ask your mate to sit on a nest unless you supplied her with food."

He pecked on the bark with his slender, curved bill until a piece of bark flew off. He grabbed up several spider eggs and, motioning Doris to follow him, he flew to another tree not far away.

There, tucked away carefully under a piece of loosened bark in the very heart of the tree, was a dear little nest. Mrs. Brown Creeper was a wee bit shy at first, but when Doris assured her she wouldn't tell any one where the nest was hidden, Mrs. Brown Creeper warmed up and showed Doris the five little, speckled eggs she had hidden under her pretty speckled feathers.

"Did you bring me something to eat?" she asked, and, of course, Mr. Brown Creeper gave her the nice, little spider eggs. "Did you get these from that rough-barked tree?"

"He certainly did," laughed Doris. "I could hardly keep track of him, he worked around and around the tree trunk. Now, woodpeckers most always go up the trunk of the tree."

"Well, we find we can get the most by creeping around and around the tree," said Mr. Brown Creeper. "Why, do you know I can finish a tree in less than fifty seconds, and I'll bet I don't miss one thing buried under the bark. There goes your school bell, Doris," he finished as a bell tolled. "Better run to school. Come and see us when the babies are hatched."

Doris promised she would and, bidding goodby, she hurried off to school.

THE CLOWN

We pay to see him act the fool and everybody, as a rule, is made to feel more cheerful. His life is one of crazy things, and always heaps of pleasure brings. (For clowns is meant this earful.)

Who knows what grief may lie within the heart behind a forced out grin? What pranks the fates can play; to make a man bring forth a smile—yea, laugh—when really, all the while, he doesn't feel that way.

It must be fun to make a crowd of gloomy people laugh out loud. That job the clown is living. The frown dies out; the smile comes through when e'er you see the man—just due to foolishness he's living.

He gives his life to other folk who look on him as just a joke. Yet is it all worth while? For, while he does the best he can to try and cheer his fellow man — who tries to make him smile?

SHE WAS WEAK, THIN AND NERVOUS

One of the greatest strength givers and producers of good healthy flesh in the world is Cod Liver Extract—it's full of vitamines.

Nothing like the wonderful vitalizing vitamines extracted from the livers of the common codfish to help convalescing people to quickly get strong and well—everybody knows that.

So nowadays medical men who keep up with the times are ordering a tablet containing the vitamines that give to frail folks vigor, strength and weight—a tablet that is known as McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablet—and it surely has proved a blessing to thousands of people who have been sapped off their natural strength after any severe illness.

Skinny men and women take them to speedily put on plenty of good healthy solid flesh and for this purpose they are so extremely good that thin men and women often take on 5 five pounds in 30 days. As a matter of fact your druggist is authorized to return your money if you don't take on five pounds in 30 days.

Great for weak, skinny, backward and run-down children too, and gives them a hearty appetite.

Be sure and ask for McCoy's, the original and genuine Cod Liver Extract Tablet. McDermid and Jury, James Lynch and Bond's Drug Store, and druggists everywhere have a big demand for them, and millions are sold monthly all over North and South America. They are sugar-coated and as easy to take as candy. 60 Tablets—60 cents.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain—How To Treat

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestents are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

ROSENEATH NEWS

ROSENEATH, June 25.—The service on Sunday evening in the United church was well attended and an excellent sermon was preached by Rev. J. N. Lovelace. The choir also favored the congregation with excellent singing. The anthem, "Consider the Lillies" was very well rendered and the solo "Will the circle be unbroken," sung by Mrs. A. Nill, both pieces blended most fittingly with the sermon.

Deanery Report Read.

At the W. A. meeting of St. James' church, Mrs. James Webb read a very interesting report of the Deanery meeting held in Peterboro on June 8th. The report read as follows:

The meeting attended was in St. John's Parish Hall, held Tuesday, June 8th. The morning session was mostly business of the W.A. workers' reports from the different branches and were given, show the good work that has been done during the past year. Luncheon was served by the ladies at noon, the tables being beautifully decorated with flowers, and an excellent dinner given. At 1.30 p.m. Rev. Mr. Ross gave a missionary lecture on his work in India. Rev. Ross mentioned how the female sex were treated as inferiors and never go out at all and never get the sunshine or outing in the fresh air, only to go into their own yard which has a high wall around. The population being so very large and hospital nurses and doctors so few in number that they often have to suffer a great deal without any medical aid. This teaches us that our missionary help is always acceptable and by so doing it we are helping on Christ's good work and building us His church. Miss Kingstone of Toronto then spoke on social service work, a theme which was very interesting. The meeting then closed with singing, "Fight the good fight," and a short prayer.

Personals.

Little Evelyn Lovelace entertained a number of little friends on Friday at her birthday party. Miss Bessie Turner whose birthday was Sunday gave a party on Saturday afternoon. At both parties games were played and an enjoyable time was spent.

Miss Reta Varcoe, who is a graduate of Ontario Hospital, Cobourg, is home for a few weeks holidays.

Miss Jemima Jackson has returned to Toronto.

Dr. and Mrs. Armstrong and family of Detroit, Mich., have been in the village renewing old acquaintances.

The many friends of little Shirley Brisbin are sorry to learn of her illness. She has contracted infantile paralysis, the home being quarantined for a time. A speedy recovery is hoped for.

Teachers Remain.

The community will no doubt be pleased to learn that both our school teachers are hired for another year. Mr. M. Davey, senior room, and Miss Bertha Clarke, junior room.

A few of our young men have organized a baseball team. Although late in the season it is hoped they will give a good report later.

SUZANNE SHARES TENNIS DEFEAT IN DOUBLES TEST

American Stars Show Great Skill in Jubilee Tournament.

THRILLING PLAYS

French Fans Claim That Mlle. Lenglen Was Indisposed.

WIMBLEDON, England, June 25 (Canadian Press).—Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, six times Wimbledon doubles champion, carried the French colors to defeat with Mlle. Didi Vlasto in the jubilee tennis tournament yesterday before the spectacular team work at the net and the slicing attack of Miss Elizabeth Ryan and Miss Mary K. Browne, the United States team.

More than 17,000 spectators, among them the Duke and Duchess of York, applauded the bitterly contested match, replete with magnificent tennis.

The demonstration that followed the victory of the American pair in yesterday's star match was one of the most notable in Wimbledon's history. The score in this thrilling three-set doubles, which eliminated Mlle. Lenglen and her partner in the very first round, was 4-6, 9-7, 6-2. It was this match that the French champion refused to play on Wednesday.

It was said in French tennis circles that Suzanne entered the contest yesterday, not feeling at all like herself, and that she developed stiffness of the neck during the encounter. It is known that she had been under treatment at the hands of physicians, and there were reports that she fainted in the clubhouse after the series, but these were denied by club officials. Her French team-mates, however, seemed to be in doubt as to whether she would be in shape to take up her scheduled engagement in the singles to-day against Mrs. Dewhurst, a match which was originally scheduled for Wednesday and was again postponed yesterday.

ENGLISH LINE LOSE GAME TO BURNBRAE

Winners Were Fortunate in Seymour League Contest.

BURNBRAE, June 25.—In the most closely contested game to date Burnbrae pulled out a lucky win over the English Line team on Wednesday night in a scheduled Seymour league game. The early evening storm delayed the start so that only five innings were played but every one was crammed full of action. Each team was without its regular third baseman, Johnston being absent from Burnbrae and K. Godden from the Line team. Ibey for the most of the game pitched good ball but blew badly in the final frame, hitting the first two batters while three singles and an error following sent him to the showers. He pulled out of a hole in the first by fanning Lew Little with the bases loaded. In the fourth a snappy double play A. Little to Cowell, saved the day for Ibey. Cowell who succeeded him in the box was touched for one hit which brought in what proved to be the deciding runs and walked one man. Ibey struck out four batters and hit three, was touched for six hits and three more reached first on fielder's choice.

Eagleson was very steady and although hit in every inning kept them scattered. He struck out six and issued no passes.

The Line scored in the first on Ibey's single, De Carrol's sacrifice and Cowell's triple, the latter scoring on an overthrow to the plate. In the fourth another resulted from Godden's single and Haig's double. Good catches in the outfield by Newson and Haig featured this inning. In the fifth the Line almost tied up the game. Ibey led off with a single, his third in as many trips to the plate. Eagleson slipped when about to field De Carroll's bunt and Ibey scored. De Carrol scoring on passed balls and an out at first. Eagleson performed the noteworthy feat of fanning Cowell with a man on third in this inning. Hume and Rannie got two singles each. Lew Little had a double and single while F. Little got one single. Burnbrae scored their entire six runs in the fifth on a combination of two hit batters, four singles, an error, a passed ball and two wild pitches.

This win gives Burnbrae a clear lead of three wins and no losses in the league standing.

Line ups:

MOVIGRAPHS

HOLLYWOOD.—After two years voluntary retirement at the height o her career, Dorothy Phillips returns to the screen without any apparent lapse in popularity. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has just signed her to a five year contract

Film popularity is at best an incalculable, unstable thing, retained not only by constant vigilance and agreeable performance but by virtue of an almost indefinable personal appeal as well. It is this personal element which has helped Miss Phillips bridge the interval from the death of her director husband, Alan Eolubar, to resumption of her former film estate.

Proves Her Favor.

How well she has retained favor was demonstrated when M-G-M sent her on a personal appearance tour with other stars to New Orleans, Dallas, Fort Worth and a dozen other of the larger southern cities.

Her reception was considered a warrant of an assured comeback. Immediate arrangements were made to feature her in the company's most important productions.

It was with First National that Dorothy made her most notable productions. Hurricane's Gal" was the last picture before her retirement. Previously, after three seasons on the stage, she had been the reigning player for Universal.

The Dreaded Shelf.

She was probably most impressive in Hearts of Humanity." And paving the way for her new stellar arrangement were The Sporting Chance," Without Mercy" and Toto."

To be forgotten, shelved, by a public which once was devoted is the most dreadful fact or prospect that can rasp the player. Oblivion is the little death, the mortal wound to the ego, for a movie figure once exalted.

By the same token, to be remembered and desired is sheer ecstasy—such joy of professional survival as Dorothy Phillips feels in resuming her career, halted for a time by the death of her husband.

I coughed day and night, and had such severe pains, in my chest I could hardly bear them, but finally I sent and got a bottle of

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup

After I had taken a couple of doses I found that my cough was relieved and the pains were all gone, and by the time I had finished taking the whole bottle I was completely rid of my trouble.

Now, I will never be without a bottle of 'Dr. Wood's' in my home."

WILDCATS FAILED TO DEVOUR HOT DOGS

Comedy Softball Played at Chemong by Kiwanians Last Night.

When Joe John's struck at the ball last night in the softball game between the Wildcats and the Hotdogs, two picked teams of the members of the Kiwanis club, it would go far enough for a three bagger but owing to Mr. John's way of running it kept him busy to reach first base. Pete Lang was always on the side that was at the bat and as he is a pretty fair hitter he was the star run getter of the game. The Hotdogs under Wilfred Huycke had the game all their own way and only for the last innings it is just a question wether the other team were playing or not. Frank Stinson knocked such a hot one in the fifth innings that it upset pitcher Allen completely. If a man was able to hit the ball he was sure of getting on the base for likely as not the wrong play would be made as the players would become very excited. Dr. Craig, the esteemed president of the Club and catcher for the Wildcats gave his pitcher heavy support behind the bat. Martin Chenhall played centre field for the Wildcats and it was suggested that if he used his new straw hat he might have had more putouts to his credit. Charlie Cook, the umpire, was continually in trouble. He was accused of being partial to the winning team and was threatened several times that he would be put off the field and if the big three—Dr. Craig, Pete Lang and Jack McKone—ever did take on hand to se him off you may rest assured that it would not have been in any gentle manner. John Allen, the loosing pitcher was a tower of strength to his team making as many as three putouts in one innings. Taking the game as a whole it was full of fun to the players and caused many a jolly laugh for the onlookers. Men were seen playing who have not touched a ball since they played on the little village lots and other old ball players were there who have been out of the game for years but they were not long in limbering up and in showing the fans how they used to play the old ball.

The teams were:

Wildcats—Browne, 1b; McKone, 2b; Allen, p; Lang and Byers, 3b; Craig, c; Chenhall, cf; Nevin, lf; Wellbourne, rf; Taylor and Moffat, s.s.

Hotdogs—Huycke, c; Catman, 2b; Fraser, 1b; Bond, 3b; Cummer, p; John, rf; Heron and Dewart, ss; Kimmell, cf; Stinson, rf; and Smith cf.

BRITISH OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP LIKELY TO GO TO AMERICA

United States Players Returned Splendid Scores in Second Day's Play, With Bob bie Jones and Mehlhorn Leading.

HAGEN'S DECLINE FROM FORM

ST. ANNE'S, England, June 25 (Canadian Press). — The brilliant band of links stars from the United States swept impressively on toward the British open golf crown in the second day's play yesterday, with youthful Bobby Jones, of Atlanta, Ga., and 'Wild' Bill Mehlhorn, of Chicago, passing Walter Hagen to jointly lead the procession with scores of 144.

Hagen, slipping from the heights of sensational golf which brought him a record-breaking 68 Wednesday, took a loose 77 yesterday to fall one stroke behind. Three other trans-Atlantic stars followed closely behind the pace-makers as the second round closed with Archie Compston and Sam Barber, the first British players on the list, six strokes back of the leading pair.

Al Watrous and Freddy McLeod came through with a pair of 75's yesterday to clinch fourth place, while George Von Elm, the Los Angeles amateur, bettered his opening day card of 75 by three strokes to finish sixth at 147.

Compston came through with a 74 to bring Great Britain a ray of hope, but his total of 150 for the thirty-six holes finds him tied for seventh place with two United States players, Cyril Walker, former open champion of the United States, and Tommy Armour.

Only two miraculous rounds by a native golfer, something akin to a complete collapse of the United States offensive, critics admit, can save the open crown.

The march of the United States contingent was not entirely without casualty, however; Jim Barnes, the defending title-holder, took an 80 which virtually puts him out of the running, while the youthful amateurs, Roland MacKenzie of Washington, D.C., and Watts Gunn of Atlanta, Ga., were caught under the Royal and Ancient Club's championship guillotine, which severed from the play all those having scores not within fourteen strokes of the leaders. Sixty-four of the original 117 starters were eliminated from the test yesterday. Fifty-three contestants thus remain for the closing two eighteen-hole rounds today, with the championship to go to the low scorer for the total 72-hole play. With a score of 160, two strokes beyond the limit, Audrey Boomer was among those who also fell by the wayside yesterday, while Jim Braid, Alex. Herd and Ted Ray barely squeezed in near Barnes and Kirkwood.

Bobby Jones at his best, playing apparently without exertion, moved to the top of the list with a repetition of his card of 72 for Wednesday. He headed Hagen when Walter battled unavailingly against misfortune that added stroke after stroke which should not have been in his card. All the way down the tortuous aisle of fairways, from the first to the ninth, Hagen seemed on the brink of disaster. When he finally staggered in with his 77, Hagen's one consolation was that he claimed he was always good for one "sour" round during championship play.

Honors for the low round yesterday were between Cyril Walker and George Gadd, the Rochampton giant. Each had a card of 71, Gadd's adding to a poor 80 on the opening day for a 151. Von Elm was at their heels with his 72, the Californian playing brilliantly despite an ugly six at the treacherous tenth.

Players upon whom British fandom pinned its hopes yesterday faltered badly, and it was to such members of the old guard as Braid, Taylor, Herd and Ray that many were inclined to look last night for a final stand.

R. A. Whitcombe and Tom Wilson, the young players who started so well Wednesday, failed to match their brilliant first rounds. Whitcombe, who had a 73 Wednesday, brought in an 82, while Wilson was forced to retire at the ninth hole as a result of a strained leg muscle.

Abe Mitchell, one of the pre-tournament favorites, yesterday required eight strokes at the eleventh hole. George Duncan needed a pair of sevens at the 301-yard tenth and the eleventh, while the mighty Cyril Tolley took no less than eleven strokes at this same eleventh hole, and passed completely out of the championship picture with 164 for the two rounds.

Mr. Charley Hoff is still trying to find out why he was suspended by the A. A. U. . . . Possibly he is a vulgarian and does not use lemon in his tea.

College baseball may be unexciting as a competitive sport, but it at least has one thing to recommend it for general popularity. . . . The game is played without cheer-leaders.

On second thought, the absence of cheer-leaders at college baseball games may be due more or less directly to the fact that there are seldom enough people in attendance to start an audible cheer.

Another sport in which it is important to get the drop on the opposition is parachute jumping.

Mr. Ehmke, on hearing he was traded from the last place Red Sox to the flag-fighting Athletics, is reported to have broken out in the following popular song, "I don't believe it, but say it again."

lyn and Thaw must be permanent this time. . . . It's lasted for a week already.

INCREASE SHOWN IN IMMIGRATION

Nearly Ten Thousand More in April, 1926 Than Same Month Last Year.

CANADIANS RETURN.

OTTAWA, June 25 (Canadian Press).—A sharp increase in immigration to Canada in April, 1926, over April, 1925, is shown in an official statement issued yesterday by the Department of Immigration and Colonization. The total immigration for April amounted to 17,493 compared with 10,984 for April a year ago. In April British immigration amounted to 7,897; immigration from the United States 2,007, and from other countries 7,589.

Of the total immigration in April, 11,928 belonged to the farming class, 760 were laborers and 1,413 female domestic servants. A total of 6,918 Canadians were recorded as returning from the United States in April after having entered that country with the intention of remaining there permanently and who now declare their intention of permanently residing in Canada.

BILLY EVANS SAYS.

Too Much Success

Last season Catcher Mickey Cochrane of the Athletics was the sensation of the majors.

Not in years has a receuit catcher got away to such a phenomenal first year in all departments of play.

Now Cochrane is wondering if getting away so well isn't going to prove a serious handicap. It has caused the fans to expect too much.

Playing in all or parts of 134 games last season, displacing so clever a catcher as Cy Perkins, Cochrane finished the season with a batting average well over .300.

This year the fans doped him to pick up right where he left off last fall. When he failed to keep up the sensational batting that featured his first year's play, he heard jeers instead of cheers for the first time as the fans' greetings.

Despite a poor getaway, Cochrane is normally a .300 batsman and will soon be back among the elect.

Hard to Explain

Walter Pipp, former star firstsacker of the New York Yankees, is adding more than his mite to the fine showingbeing made by the Cincinnati Reds.

All of which makes it more difficult than ever to determine how Pipp was ever waived out of the American League.

There is a dearth of good first basemen in the majors today, and how so competent a player as Pipp could be waived out, only to be picked up by th National League, will always remain something of a mystery.

Pipp's play in the field has steadied the Cincinnati infield and, while he hasn't thrilled with his batting, his average to date is close to the .300 mark.

Discards Shine

It has long been an accepted theory in baseball that a club to have a chance for the pennant must get the best of catching.

During the first two months of play in the majors the showings of Cincinnati in the National and New York in the American have been the two outstanding feats.

It is a rather interesting fact that in each instance the catching has been done almost entirely by two discards.

Pat Collins, after years of warming the bench of the St. Louis Browns, was relegated to the minors, only to do a comeback as the first string catcher of the New York Yankees.

Val Picinich, who last year shared the catching woes of the tail-end Boston Red Sox, only to be waived out of the league, has done most of the catching for the Cincinnati Reds.

Collins and Picinich, in their new roles, have delivered with a vengeance.

Hornsby's Task

Will the added responsibility of managing a major league ball club defeat the desire of Rogers Hornsby to top Ty Cobb's record for leading a major league in batting for nine successive years?

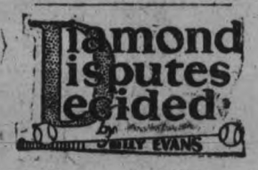
Cobb piled up such a remarkable performance in the American League prior to taking up the managerial reins at Detroit.

Last season was Hornsby's first as manager. Since he took the club's direction after it had got away to a very poor start, the showing of the club for the year didn't enter into his worries to any great extent.

This year it's different. The Cardinals, picked by a majority of the experts as the "dark horse" of the National League race, have failed to live up to expectations.

No doubt this has been a distinct disappointment to Hornsby, who figured only two clubs in the league as superior to his team, Pittsburgh and New York.

No doubt these worries have already been reflected in his batting, since his average is below standard for this time of the year.



Can a batsman who is hit by a slow pitched ball go to first?

The speed of a pitched ball which ultimately comes into contact with the person of the batter is given no consideration by the umpire in reaching his decision as to whether or not the batsman is entitled to first.

There are many who believe a batsman who is hit by a slow pitched ball is not entitled to first. This is erroneous.

If, in the opinion of the umpire, the batsman made an effort to avoid the pitch and is hit with the ball, he is always sent to first, regardless of whether it was a slow ball, fast one or curve.

* * *

Runner on first. Batsman hits ground ball to first baseman, who touches that base, retiring batsman. Must runner who has started for second base continue on to that base?

* * *

When first baseman retired batsman on ground ball hit to him he removed the force.

Runner originally on first could continue on to second if he believed he could beat the play certain to be made at that base for him.

Otherwise, if he cared to retrace his steps and return to first he was within his rights if he could reach there in safety.

HELPFUL HINTS BY GOLFING STARS

By Special Arrangement With Colliers' Magazine.

PHILIP J. GAUDIN—PUTTING GRIP.

The grip used in driving cannot be used without change in putting. The reason is that the club must come up in the middle of the left palm instead of lying along the base of the fingers.

In order to keep the face of the putter at right angles, the positions of the hands on the shaft must be changed. Move the left hand a trifle to the left and the right hand toward the right. You may find that this must be continued until the hands are on opposite sides of the shaft. The only possible method is to test this out until the right positions are found.

It may be that the best position will be with the left hand well down on the left side of the shaft and the right hand comparatively near the top.

The putter must be grasped only with a firm enough grip to control it. A tight grip will certainly interfere with the wrist action, the only one there should be during the putting swing.

The chances are that this will be a two-handed grip, both hands and wrists doing an equal share of the work. This could be changed somewhat by extending the right forefinger down the shaft.

THEATRE

AT THE REGENT

"THE FIGHTING EDGE" IS SURE-FIRE STUFF.

If your preference in screen entertainment runs to melodrama, there is a photoplay made to order for you at the Regent Theatre, where "The Fighting Edge," a Warner Bros. Classic of the screen, opened yesterday.

The exciting novel of William McLeod Raine was adapted to the screen by E. T. Lowe, Jr., and Jack Wagner, and directed by Henry Lehrman, and brings to the screen for the first time the team of Kenneth Harlan and Patsy Ruth Miller.

Harlan is seen as an Irish-Spanish hero who outwits a gang of smugglers, whose operations have been baffling government officials. They have been bringing Chinese into the country and have a large haunted house as their headquarters. To this house comes pretty Phoebe Joyce (Patsy Ruth Miller) in search of her father, who is held prisoner by the smugglers.

In an exciting game of wits, in which the cook (Heinie Conklin) comes in for some of the fun, the outlaws are brought to justice. There are a number of furious fights, there is misunderstanding between the young lovers which threatens their romance, and there are thrills and mystery.

It has everything that makes for thrilling screen entertainment and is a thoroughly enjoyable photoplay.

AT THE CAPITOL

"MIKE," WITH SALLY O'NEILL

One of the hilarious comedy pictures that are often presented on the silver sheet is at the Capitol Theatre for this week-end, in "Mike," the Marshall Neilan production that features the new actress Sally O'Neill. It has much of the flavor of the Mabel Normand type of picture, with a sprightly, pretty heroine in the winsome Sally.

"Mike," with her father, who is of the bibulous type and loves nothing so much as the feel of a brass rail under his foot and the sight of a tall schooner fronting him on a shiny bar, lives in a box car. Her father is a section boss on a desert stretch of steel, and the family is one of those helter-skelter affairs in which the dog and the tiny children play a large part. The production abounds in the little human touches of pure comedy that go with a family of this sort, but it has several big moments.

The hero is a youngster who has become involved in a railway smash-up, when he fell asleep at his post of telegraph despatcher after a long unrelieved spell of hard work. He and Sally come in for some moments of intense excitement and there are thrills aplenty in the filming of the interesting picture, whose chief merit, however, is in its fun and the jolly episodes that fill it from start to finish. The winsome art of the little star and the way in which she and her lover escape from many hairbreadth situations, combined with the humor of the story make "Mike" an exceptionally interesting picture.

The "Our Gang" comedy that accompanies it is one of the best of the funny little bunch's productions seen here in some time.

An added interest to the programme for this week-end is the singing of Mr. Harry Cooke of Toronto, who has a splendid baritone voice, and received much applause last night when he introduced a new Feist song, "Somebody's Lonely." He will sing to-night, to-morrow afternoon and to-morrow evening, and is well worth hearing.

An additional attraction to the musical programme at the Kiwanis dance at Chemong Park last night was the singing of Mr. Harry Cooke, of Toronto, possessor of a fine baritone, who was greeted with much enthusiasm when he gave a new song, "Somebody's Lonely," and "Horses."

WEDDING BELLS.

TRYHORN—FOX.
A very quoiet wedding took place at the parsonage of Carlton United Church, Toronto, on Saturday, June 19th, by the Rev. E. Crossley Hunter, when Lily Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Fox, Eldorado, was united in marriage to Ronald Rivers, youngest son of Mr. Philip R. Tryhorn, Smiths Falls. The bride was attended by Miss Agnes Fetterly, and looked charming in a simple frock of blonde silk crepe, with touches of rose, and she wore a large picture hat, and blonde shoes and stockings. Her corsage bouquet was of lily of the valley and sweetheart roses. Miss Fetterly was attired in a simple frock of cream lace over pink. Her bouquet was of pink sweet peas. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Edgar Tryhorn, of Toronto. The bride and groom left immediately after the ceremony for Niagara Falls and Buffalo. The bride's travelling coat was of black baronet satin, trimmed with fitch.

Mr. and Mrs. Tryhorn will make their home in Toronto.

World War Is Blamed For Use Of Cigarettes

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 25 (United Press). — The World War has caused a 200 per cent. increase in cigarette consumption, both in this country and abroad, said R. T. Corbell, secretary of the Tobacco Association of the United States, now holding its twenty-sixth annual convention here.

This increase Corbell lays to the fact that cigars and pipes were unavailable among the fighting forces and the cigarette habit became general. In addition to this, American women have taken to the use of cigarettes in large quantities.

Falls Into Tank of Eels Behind Father's Restaurant.

FOUND BY MOTHER.

NEW YORK, June 25 (United Press).—Little Robert Cantalupo, 18 months old, toddled into the back yard of his father's Green Village restaurant, where there is a long low tank, in which swim eels. Robert became fascinated by the twisting, squirming fishes and leaned over the tank just far enough to fall in.

Later his mother, Concetta, went into the back yard to spear an eel for the kitchen and found him at the bottom of the tank. She snatched the lifeless body and ran through the streets screaming.

O.A.C. HEAD SAYS FARM COLLEGES PAY FOR UPKEEP

Have Meant Enormous Increase in Production By Scientific Methods.

SPEECH TO KIWANIANS.

Principal Does Not Look Kindly on Large Synthetic Farms.

OTTAWA, June 26 (Canadian Press).—Agricultural colleges, demonstration and experimental farms have meant enormously increased production in Canada; and have very considerably more than paid for their upkeep in that and other respects, maintained Principal J. B. Reynolds of Guelph Agricultural College, in the course of an address at a luncheon, under the auspices of the Kiwanis Club of Ottawa, and members of the Canadian Society of Technical Agriculturists. Principal Reynolds urged there might well be a science of agricultural apologetics as there was of theological apologetics, the idea being to bring home to the people at large the enormously beneficial results of technical training and of scientific agriculture.

Principal Reynolds maintained that the choice may lie as between fewer men farming on scientific lines and with a higher standard of living, and many farming, but with a low standard of living. According to some agriculturists, it was not difficult to account for a certain amount of exodus from the farm as the need for so many men working is reduced by scientific methods.

The Principal was not enamored of so-called synthetic farming. He told of a friend who merged six one hundred acre farms into one six hundred acre farm, and when he saw him recently he had had to send several thousand dollars from his city business to make up a deficit on the operation of the big farm.

Progressives Embarass Government; Fate of Customs Report Still Undecided; Rumors Premier May Ask Dissolution

"The Government Has Not Been Defeated": King.

TORONTO, June 26 (Canadian Press). — According to a special despatch to Toronto to-day, Premier W. L. Mackenzie King, in an ainterview this morning, explained the position of the Government as the result of the latest divisions in the House. He said: "The Government has not been defeated. The divisions on the Woodsworth amendment, on the appeal from the Speaker, and on the first motion from Mr Beaubien to adjourn, were all on private motions. The only motion from the Government side was the final motion to adjourn, and on it we secured a majority of one."

Questioned further, the Premier is quoted as saying that the Fansher sub-amendment was perfectly acceptable to the Government because in substance it was the same as the Woodsworth amendment. "It does not mean that we accept the original Stevens amendment. I made it perfectly clear that we were not committing ourselves in that respect," the Premier is quoted as saying. "The purpose of accepting the Fansher amendment was to make adjournment possible."

ONE MAN KILLED WHEN POLICE CATCH SEVEN MEN DRIVING CAR WHICH WAS SAID TO BE STOLEN

Two of Seven Escape From Two Provincial Officers.

OTHERS IN JAIL.

Man Claims To Have Been Robbed of Car and Money at Uxbridge.

TORONTO, June 26. — (Canadian Press.)—Provincial police encountered a party of seven Toronto men in a stolen car near Cooksville early this morning and, in the melee, one man, George Marks, was shot and died shortly after, four men were captured, and two escaped. The four placed under arrest gave their names as William Dryburg, 26, Thomas Garlock, 22, John Driscoll, 19 and John O'Shea 20. They were later brought to Toronto and lodged in the cells. All four are charged with theft of a motor car from a man named Kelly, of Toronto, and with having stolen $200 from him.

Accordin gto information given to the police Kelly met the seven men in a house at Uxbridge and here a dispute arose, during which Kelly was beaten and robbed, according to his statement. Kelly's car was parked outside and in this the seven men escaped. The provincial police were notified and later in the night the car was sighted on the Dundas highway by the police, who gave chase. It is understood none of the men in the car was armed.

Provincial Motorcycle Officers Allen and Stewart were standing alongside their cycles in front of the Cooksville Inn when a car travelling west appeared, zigzagging along the road, with seven men in it. The officers overtook the car and placed the men under arrest. The men were put in the back seat and Constable Allen took the wheel while Constable Stewart held a flashlight on them. Near Cooksville Allen was grabbed by the throat from behind and Stewart reached for his gun. The other men grapled with Stewart and in the fight Marks was shot. Two others jumped from the car and escaped.

Arresting Officer Afraid Lady Culprit Was In Bath

NEW YORK, June 26 (United Press). — Patrolman Martin Cannon, 250 pounds, of determined law enforcement, standing six feet two inches in his stocking feet, trembled as he made his latest arrest. He was much more frightened than the party arrested.

Patrolman Cannon's embarrassment was due to the fact that 17-year-old Jane Pogoda was doing a "Joyce Hawley" when he went to arrest her for being a wayward minor. Miss Pogoda was, so to speak, in the process of taking a bath. The door was locked, but Cannon's mighty fist thundered upon a panel. "You can't come in and I can't come out. I am in the tub," parried Jane.

"Lady," remonstrated Cannon, "I am an officer of the law. I've a warrant for your arrest. Open up or I'll break in." "She opened the door," he added briefly at headquarters, after turning over the girl to the Wayside Home for Girls. But he would not tell anything else when questioned by the District Attorney.

High Caste Hindus Journey To Arctic Circle To Worship Symbol Of Sun-God At Midnight

TROMSOE, Norway, June 26 (A.P.).—In the pale mystic rays of the midnight sun at North Cape, which juts out into the Arctic Ocean, as the northernmost point of Europe, a small party of high caste Orthodox Hindus last night worshipped their Deity through the symbol of the ever-shining sun, which to the Hindu believers represents the physical glory of their Deity, the spiritual sun.

The party of worshippers consisted of Rai Golpaidas, son of the Hon Rai Ramsarn Das of Lahore, British India, and Pandit Jagadish Chatterji, a high caste Brahmin, former director of Oriental research at Kashmir and once head of the ecclesiastical administration of the Gaskwar of Baroda.

The ritual, which was gone through at midnight, consisted of a recital of texts from the Vedas, or sacred books of the Hindus, and the offering of flowers and of fire sacrifices in accordance with Vedantio precepts. It is the intention of the Hindus to arrange for a similar pilgrimage to North Cape each year.

Debate Adjourned Until Monday After Prime Minister Accepted Sub-Amendment By W. R. Fansher, Adding Woodsworth's Proposal To Amendment Moved By Conservatives.

DRAMATIC SCENES AT CLOSE OF SITTING WHICH LASTED UNTIL 5.20 THIS MORNING

Milton Campbell Charges Head of the Government With Attempting To Shield Former Minister of Customs Who, He Declares, Debauched the Department.

OTTAWA, June 26 (Canadian Press)—After a battle lasting till dawn, after being on three successive occasions on the losing side of House divisions, the Government at 5.20 this morning managed to get through the motion to adjourn.

It was proposed by C. G. Power, Liberal, of Quebec South, and carried by 115 to 114 and the House went over till Monday afternoon. The end of the day came in with the House wildly excited and with both sides cheering wildly and throwing papers in the air. Such scenes, such dramatic episodes have not been witnessed probably in half a century. They closed with a sharp encounter between the two leaders. As the motion to adjourn was presented, Right Hon. Arthur Meighen asked if it was correct that the Government had passed an order appointing certain Civil Service commissioners and a Senator. Also if the Prime Minister desired to make any statement following three defeats.

"If my Right Hon. friend will retract his last statement, I will answer his first," sharply retorted Premier King.

Adjournment has brought temporary relief to the weary members. But the situation remains. As the matter now stands the House has still to decide the Government's fate on the Customs report. And there are rumors that the Prime Minister, instead of waiting for the vote may decide to ask the Governor General to grant a dissolution of Parliament after the remaining supply has been voted.

The first vote of the day came on the Woodsworth sub-amendment. This sub-amendment sought to strike from the Conservative amendment, the censure of the Government for maladministration of the customs department. It would have substituted a recommendation for the appointment of judicial commission to investigate further. The Woodsworth sub-amendment although it was moved by a private member, had the support of Premier King and the Government. It was defeated by two votes on this livision.

Against, 117. For 115.
Majority against, 2.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 26.—When the House resumed yesterday afternoon Dugald Donaghy, M.P. for North Vancouver, moved, seconded by Mr. Jenkins, that the interim report of Walter Duncan made on December 10, 1925, should be laid on the table of the House, together with all evidence and documents and together with the final report made in 1926.

Speaker Lemieux pointed out that the motion could only be carried by unanimous consent of the House.

Hon. H. H. Stevens, M.P. for Central Vancouver, rose to say that the motion would not be approved unless the full evidence and all the documents were to be submitted.

"That is what my motion calls for," said Mr. Donaghy. "When it is read it will be shown that I want all evidence and documents produced and tabled." (Liberal applause).

"I was unaware that this motion would be moved," said Hon. Geo. Boivin. "I will have the documents here as soon as possible."

"Why not now?" asked Mr. Meighen. "The motion calls for immediate action."

"They will be here in a few moments," said Mr. Boivin. "We are ready to produce them."

Campbell is Belligerent.

The motion was passed by unanimous consent.

Milton Campbell of MacKenzie (Progressive) was the first speaker when the debate on the Customs report was resumed. He assumed a belligerent attitude from the commencement and declared that the Commons was being called upon to adjudicate in connection with the worst moral and political scandal in the history of Canada. "Some of the evidence adduced," said the member for MacKenzie, "was so disgusting, that the committee refused to put it in the report."

Mr. Donaghy rose to say that all the proceedings, evidence and documents were placed on the table and that the facts would be there.

"The facts will show," declared Mr. Campbell, "that the Hon. Jacquest Bureau was rewarded for his so-called services by being appointed to the Senate. I have a good deal of sympathy for the present Minister of Customs who inherited the sins of his predecessor. I am not prepared to make him the sacrificial goat for all the sins of the Department. But I was amazed when I heard the Prime Minister rise to defend the former Minister of Customs."

"I made no defence of the former Minister of Customs," said Premier King. "I asked that he be given a chance to make a defence before a commission."

Mr. Campbell did not propose to get into an argument about it. The record would show. The only fault he found with Stevens' amendment was that it was too moderate. It embraced also the views of the member for Peace River, who represented the Progressive party.

Attempted Whitewash.

"Speak for yourself and not for the member for Peace River or the Progressive group," suggested Mr. Forke.

"I will be frank and say that the hon. member for Brandon (Mr. Forke) has never been able to speak for himself," shot back Campbell, with much Conservative applause. He referred to the Woodsworth amendment as "an attempted whitewash of the whole filthy proceedings." He concurred, however, in the statement of Woodsworth that Jacques Bureau had been rewarded for debauching the Department by being given a Senatorship. He accused the Labor member, who was so wont to protest against social injustice, with being inconsistent in wanting to fire the lower grades and whitewash the higher up.

Mr. Woodsworth wanted to know where he had done any whitewashing.

Worst Political Suicide.

Mr. Campbell charged him with inconsistency. Woodsworth, he said, was prepared "to whitewash one of the worst political scandals on the ground of political expediency." How could he go to the working people at home and defend himself for having voted to dismiss lower-paid civil servants who had been spattered by the mud thrown up by the "real criminals" high up?

Mr. Dunning rose excitedly — "Does the hon. member refer to the Minister of Customs as one of 'real criminals'?"

"I think I made my meaning quite clear," said Campbell.

Mr Dunning rose again, but was howled, and could not be heard. Finally, he insisted on an answer, and Campbell's reply was that he did not propose to have something read into his remarks that he hadn't said."

Concluding, Campbell declared that if the Progresive party could

ALIENS TAKEN OVER BY PLANE

Aviator Picks Up Chinese and Others in Field Near Windsor.

REPORTED TO U.S.

WINDSOR, June 26.—A depot for smuggling aliens into the United States by airplane, has been established six miles southeast of Windsor, in the midst of uncultivated fields, according to a report filed with High County Constable James Smith, of Sandwich, by Constable Jack Craig of Essex County.

Craig said that several times in the last few weeks he has sen an aviator in the fields in Sandwich East Township. On one occasion he said he saw an automobile drive to the plane with three Chinese, two of whom got into the plane, which immediately took off, while the other returned to the automobile. He said he never was able to get close to the plane, which remained on the ground only two or three minutes each time and so could not say whether it had any identifying marks.

Craig said, however, that the plane unquestionably comes from the U.S. as no planes are registered in this part of the Canadian border. The aviator, he said, makes a trip daily. High Constable Smith said the only step Canadian authorities will take will be to arrest the aviator if they can catch him, on a charge of flying without a permit. The U.S. Immigration Department was notified of the circumstances.

HELL GATE POWER.

The size of some of America's great electrical power stations can be appreciated from the fact that one plant alone—the Hell Gate station in New York City—produces more energy than all the plants of Greece, Denmark, Latvia, Yugo-Slavia, Poland, Hungary, Norway, Rumania, Turkey, Switzerland, Sweden and the Netherlands. These countries have a combined population of 109 million people whereas the Hell Gate plant provides but about one-fifth of the electric current consumed by the city of New York alone with its approximate six million inhabitants. The annual output of the plant is now about one billion ilowatt-hours each year. No other steam-operated station in the country equals this though there are some building which will rival it.
